Ryan's Stores

There is so much we want to tell you about this week that we are taking a full column instead of the usual space, and if this talk properly represents our stores this column will be full of news of genuine interest to many readers.

The season has been cold and backward and in many lines there are large stocks that must be cleared out quickly to make room for new imports which have already been ordered and will soon be shipped in

At last the warm weather has come and with it the demand for summer goods, more especially dress goods. Let us tell you something about what we have and then come and see for yourself what splendid offerings we are making.

Ladies' Summer Dress Goods

We have never been in such good position to meet every want in this line. The cold spring has had a tendency to make trade slow but now these goods must go with a rush. Among them are—in white and cream and Batiste, that new goods which is almost as soft and fine as silk and makes the most beautiful waist. If you are not already familiar with the qualities of Batiste let us show you how far it surpasses anything in the line of summer waistings.

Dress Trimmings

You may be surprised at the complete line of trimmings we carry, such as Valenciennе Laces, Insertions, Flouncings and Insertions.

Summer Waists

If you prefer to buy your waists ready to wear you will find here a splendid opportunity to select exactly what you want, at prices ranging from 50cts to $5.00.

Summer Suits

A complete line, Beautifully made up in the latest designs and in variety to meet your taste. Prices are $5 up to $18.00.

Skirts Ready-to-Wear

They come in black, grey and blue. For real warm weather there are some light greys which are particularly stylish looking and are attracting special attention. $2.00 to $4.00.

Long Gloves

Sleeves are made short this season and a wonderfully dressy effect is obtained by the wearing of long gloves. We have beautiful silk gloves in greys, black and white. Elbow lengths are popular.

Men's Clothing

While we are giving special attention this week to women's goods, we must not forget the men, for this store has long stood for what is best in men's clothing. There are good fitting, up-to-date suits here that would cost nearly twice as much at a custom tailor's and besides you have the advantage of seeing just how the suit will look before you buy.

Remember the reputation of our men's clothing department, we have men come twenty to thirty miles to be fitted and some have been coming back for the last thirty years. Prices run from $5 to $12.00.

Men's Shirts

In both soft and starched fronts. All the best brands and most up-to-date goods at from 50cts to $1.00.

But we cannot begin to tell you of all our lines of goods in one advertisement. Our stocks in House Furnishings, Boots and Shoes, Hardware, Groceries, etc., were never so complete.

These stores are literally packed with goods that were bought before the advance of prices and the benefits are for you to obtain. We fear no competition in neighboring towns, there is no regard to stock or prices and only ask an opportunity to convince you of this by showing the goods.

☞We pay cash for any produce the farmer has to sell and give the Highest prices.

Died at his late residence, Forest Mills, on Saturday, June 22d, in the 93d year of his age. His remains were interred in the Eastern cemetery, Napanee, beside his late partner, who predeceased him about 12 months ago. The deceased came to this country from near Omagh, in the County Tyrone, Ireland, in the year 1834,and settled in the Township of Kingston, where he remained for a time, afterward settling in the Township of Richmond, being one of the early pioneers, and at the time of his death was the last remaining one of the early residents of the locality in which he lived. He raised a family of nine children, seven of whom survive, all being home about three months ago to visit him, Mrs. E. J. Shorts, of Mt. Pleasant; Mrs. Geo. Margaret Breeze, Forest Mills; Mrs. E. Perry, Paterson, Sask.; Mrs. Hamilton and Henry, Carman, Man.; Robert in Bracebridge, and John, of Forest Mills. Until about one year ago, the deceased enjoyed good health, and was able to attend to business and look after his interests. He retained all his mental faculties until the last, being only a few months ago he lost his eyesight, and has been completely blind and confined to his bed since that time. His end was peaceful and happy. He was conscious to the summons to join the ranks of the redeemed, and have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. C. W. DeMille, at Selby church.

SUSANNA SEDORE.

Death again entered the home of Miles Sedore, South Napanee, and claimed as its victim Susanna, second youngest daughter, at the early age of nineteen years. She had been in poor health for a few years, suffering from nervous prostration, and a few weeks ago contracted a heavy cold which developed into pneumonia and caused death to relieve her sufferings. Susanna was a good christian girl, being converted in early youth by the Salvation Army, of which she was a faithful member. The Army turned out in large numbers and marched in procession from the house to the barracks and thence to the Western cemetery. The memorial service was preached by the officers of Napanee, assisted by other members of the Army. Much sympathy is extended to the bereaved parents, brother and sisters in their sad bereavement.

Should Convince Even the Most Stupid Mind of Its Truth.

If there is the slightest doubt in the minds of any that Dandruff germs do not exist, their belief is compelled by the fact that a rabbit innoculated with the germs became bald in six weeks' time.

It must be apparent to any person therefore that the only prevention of baldness is the destruction of the germ—which act is successfully accomplished in one hundred per cent. of cases by the application of Newbro's Herpicide.

Dandruff is caused by the same germ which causes baldness and can be prevented with the same remedy—Newbro's Herpicide.

June Brides

BARTLETT—BRISCO.

One of our most amiable and popular young ladies, Miss May, eldest daughter of Mrs. C. E. Bartlett, Robert st., was united in marriage to Norris A. Brisco, M.A., Ph.D., Professor in Columbia University, New York, on Saturday, the 29th ult. last, at 10.30 o'clock. Rev. Canon Jarvis performed the ceremony in the presence of the immediate friends of the contracting parties. Little Miss Ruth Bartlett, sister of the bride, acted as flower girl, the bride and groom being unattended. The bride was attired in her travelling gown of blue taffeta silk with touches of tan, and white silk blouse the flower girl, in white muslin, with blue flowers. Miss Marguerite Bartlett, sister of the bride, played the wedding march. The drawing room was tastefully decorated with cut flowers and potted plants. After the ceremony a dainty wedding break fast was partaken of by the assembled guests. The popularity of the bride was attested by the large number of beautiful presents sent her, by admiring friends in Napanee and elsewhere. Dr. and Mrs. Brisco took the 11.36 train east, and will spend a couple of months in the Adirondacks, before settling in their home in New York City. The Beaver and a multitude of friends wish them prosperity and happiness in their new life.

TRULL—McKNIGHT.

On Wednesday, June 26th, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Casey Trull, Darlington, a marriage was solemnized of their daughter, Miss Sybil Muriel Trull, to Mr. Arthur Franklin McKnight, Selby. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. R. Gaiter, in the bow window of the spacious drawing room, banked with evergreens and flowers, and was witnessed by a large number of invited guests. The bride, who entered leaning on the arm of her father, looked charming, and was becomingly gowned in cream silk, and carried a bridal bouquet of white roses. She was attended by her sister, Edna, who carried a bouquet of pink roses. Mr. Percy Egan, a relative of the Dominion Bank, Napanee, was best man and Miss Pearce played Lohengrin's wedding march. After receiving congratulations, the wedding party repaired to the dining room, where an elaborate dinner was served. Later in the evening the happy couple left on the 7.45 train for Toronto, Rochester and other western points, the bride's going away dress blue, with hat to match. The groom's gift to the bride was a beautiful gold watch and chain, and the bridesmaid, a ring set with pearls, and the groomsman, a pearl scarf pin. Many wishes are expressed for a happy voyage through life.

MARRIED IN WINNIPEG.

A quiet but very pretty wedding was celebrated on Thursday, June 27th, in the Church of the Immaculate Conception, Winnipeg, the bride being Miss Rachael Brown, late of Perth, Ont., and the bridegroom, Mr. John Robt. MacHale, formerly of Glasgow, Scotland, now of Winnipeg. The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion with cut flowers, while the altar was ablaze with tiny electric lamps. Rev. A. A. Cherrier performed the ceremony. As the bridal party left the church Mendelssohn's wedding march was rendered on the grand organ, and the church bells pealed out merrily. The bride looked very pretty and was most becomingly attired in cream panama cloth, trimmed with silk insertion, and pin, and to the bridesmaid, a pearl crescent brooch. After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. MacHale left on the C.P.R. Limited to spend their honeymoon in Western Ontario.

CRANSTON—LAWRIE.

Woodstock, Ill., Republican :—General, whole-hearted Bruce W. Lawrie is a benedict. Wearying of traveling life's journey alone, he journeyed to Chicago last Saturday with Miss Frances Cranston, and there they were married by Rev. N. A. Sunderlin, returning to this city the following evening and taking up their abode at the Earlington on Tryon street. Mr. Lawrie has been with the Oliver a number of years, serving them for a time in New York City. He is a fine workman and a faithful and reliable man, whose fine tenor voice used to be heard in the Presbyterian choir. He is a member of Guardian Lodge No. 60, I.O.O.F., and is decidedly popular with all who know him. The bride has been a resident of Woodstock for several years, where, as an "angel of the sick room," she has scorched many an aching brow and ministered to the wants of those languishing on beds of pain. The past year she has served in that capacity at Todd sem inary for boys, where her cheerfulness and efficiency have been sent and appreciated. She is a lady of many accomplishments and has won many friends in Woodstock during her brief stay. The Republican joins with these friends in wishing bride and groom the best that life affords.

WARTMAN—BUCK.

On Thursday evening, 27th June, wedding bells rang at the village of Keplar, when John A. Wartman, of Newburgh, was united in marriage to Miss Lila, daughter of Harvey Buck. The Rev. W. K. Shortt, M.A., was the officiating clergyman. The bride was assisted by Miss Amanda Wartman, sister of the groom. Lloyde L. Buck, brother of the bride, was the best man. Mr. and Mrs. Wartman left for Montreal and other eastern points, returning from their honeymoon they will reside at Newburgh.

WEDDED AT GREENBIGH.

One of the most beautiful and fashionable weddings that have taken place here was solemnized on Wednesday, 19th inst., when Miss Jane Mackey, a prosperous and highly esteemed farmer, of Read, was united in matrimony to Miss Martha Marquardt, eldest daughter of Mr. Edmund Marquardt, the Rev. Father Dagains, Griffith, officiating. The bride was handsomely attired in a suit of white silk trimmed with lace and insertion, with white picture hat, and carried a bouquet of lilies beautifully arranged, and held together by a bow of white silk ribbon. Miss Anna Marquardt, Ottawa, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, and wore a dress of pale blue silk, trimmed with all-over lace, and hat to match, while Miss Emma Marquardt Renfrew, also dressed in blue silk, with all-over lace trimming, was maid of honori and Miss Margaret E. Brennan, Read, did the duties of flower girl. The groom was supported by his nephew, Mr. Jas. F. Brennan, Read. After the ceremony, the wedding party, accompanied by their pastor, repaired to the home of the bride's parents, where about forty invited guests awaited them, and all sat down to a sumptuous repast, to which ample justice was done. The rooms were artistically decorated for the occasion with potted plants, lilacs and ferns. The afternoon was pleasantly spent in music, songs, games and plays, until the balmy zephyrs began to stir, and then the elder members of the family took their departure, and were replaced by a troop numbering about seventy-five young folk, who tripped the light fantastic until daylight and all dispersed to their several homes, loud in their applause of the evening's amusement. The bride was the recipient of a number of beautiful presents, among which were a handsome purse containing three hundred dollars, the gift of her father, a suit of dining room furniture, a dinner and tea set of china, a cut glass berry set, dozen silver knives, forks and spoons, and others equally as useful. The groom's present to the bride was a gold bracelet, to the bridesmaid, a gold ring, and to the maid of honor and flower girl each an amethyst ring, and to the groomsman, a pair of gold cuff links. The bride's travelling dress was a handsome suit of blue lady cloth, trimmed with silk braid, and hat to match. The happy couple left early on Monday amid showers of good wishes, for their future home in Wyandanch. We are sorry to lose Mrs. Mackey from our community, where she was a general favorite, but pleased to know her home is in a very beautiful and convenient locality. We all join in wishing them bon voyage on the sea of life.

Why the Market Wobbles.

The financial balance is so extremely delicate that the slightest movement affects it and throws it out of gear. I once heard of an important "deal" being spoilt because a prominent financier had his big toe cut by a chiropodist so badly that he was obliged to keep his room.—Maurice Morthner in Grand Magazine.

Apples as "Nightcaps."

The apple is such a common fruit that very few persons are familiar with its remarkable efficacious medicinal properties. Every one ought to know that the very best thing he can do is to eat apples just before retiring for the night.

An Easy Mark.

"Sir, I am an old member on the bourse. I took shares in all your companies and am now ruined, so I thought perhaps you would employ me in your office."

"Oh, no; I want only intelligent men in my business."

The Other Way.

"If I were younger," said the rich old man, "I believe I might win you for my wife."

"Yes," replied the cold beauty, dreamily considering his sixty years, "or, say, fifteen or twenty years older."—Philadelphia Press.

WISE AND OTHERWISE.

"I want some rice," said the haughty lady. "You have it for sale, have you not?"

Sure, ma'am, replied the grocer, "all sorts round or two pounds for cents."

"Oh, I must have the most expensive kind; it's for a very fashionable wedding."

A Cure For Rheumatism.—The infrusion of uric acid into the blood vessels is a fruitful cause of rheumatic pains. This irregularity is owing to a deranged and unhealthy condition of the liver. Anyone subject to this painful affection will find a remedy in Parmelee's Vegetable Pills Their action upon the kidneys is pronounced and most beneficial, and by restoring healthy action, they correct impurities in the blood.

Nedd—I suppose your wife is delighted over the baby?

Todd—Oh, yes, in a general way. But she says it has cut into her game of bridge awfully.

Impurities in the Blood.—When the action of the kidneys becomes impaired, impurities in the blood are almost sure to follow, and general derangement of the system ensues. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will regulate the kidneys, so that they will maintain healthy action and prevent the complications which certainly occur when there is derangement of these delicate organs. As a restorative these pills are high in rank.

First Little Girl—When you grow up are you going to advertise for a husband? Second Little Girl—No. I'm going to be a widow. They don't have to.

Nearly all infants are more or less subject to diarrhoea and such complaints while teething and as this period of their lives is the most critical, mothers should not be without a bottle of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial. This medicine is a specific for such complaints and is highly spoken of by those who have used it. The proprietors claim it will cure any case of cholera or summer complaint.

Fair Visitor—What makes the mineral water in this place so very healthful? Native—Well, I think it is the advertising principally, mum.

Help your children to grow strong and robust by counteracting anything that causes ill-health. One great cause of disease in children is worms. Remove them with Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator. It never fails.

"Biddy," says Pat, timidly, "did ye iver think o' marrin'?"

"Shure, now," says Biddy, looking demurely at her toes, "shure, now, the subject has niver entered me mind at all, at all."

"It's sorry Oi am," says Pat, and he turns away.

"Wan minute, Pat," said Biddy, softly. "Ye've set me thinkin'."

You cannot be happy while you have corns. Then do not delay in getting a bottle of Holloway's Corn Cure. It removes all kinds of corns without pain. Failure with it is unknown.

"Do you believe that the good die young?"

"I think they do, if all my wife tells me about her first husband is true."

Its Power Grows With Age.—How many medicines loudly blazoned as panaceas for all human ills have come and gone since Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil was first put upon the market? Yet it remains, doing more good to humanity than many a preparation more highly vaunted and extending its virtues wider and wider and in a larger circle every year. It is the medicine of the masses.

"She repeats stories about her women friends, doesn't she?"

"Not often; she usually starts them."

In a little village in Illinois the school mistress saw one of the little boys crying. She inquired the reason.

"Some of the big boys made me kiss a little girl in the school yard," was the reply.

"Why, that was outrageous! Why did you not come right to me?"

"I didn't know you would let me kiss you, I'm sure."

Miss Fuzzie—I want to break my engagement with Mr. Sapple, but I don't know how to do it without driving the poor fellow to suicide.

Little Brother—Why don't you let him see you in evil papers just once?

The Provincial Board of Health will attempt to improve the sanitary conditions in cheese factories.

When "sweets" lose their sweetness—and "substantials," their charm—there are always MOONEY'S PERFECTION CREAM SODAS to coax back the appetite.

Do YOU know how good they are?

Shakespeare and Scenery.

It is a peculiar fact that, while Shakespeare, of all dramatists, offers the greatest opportunity for scenery, he also, of all men who ever wrote, can best do without it. In fact, I believe Shakespeare owes his greatness in part to the fact that he did not have any scenery. He had to make everything clear without it. That is why his appeal to the mind as well as the heart of the eye. Had he known different, said Daniel Frohman in the Reinestor, Shakespeare would not have been nearly so great, because he probably say that would have taken place. However, the converse isn't true. We are not hitting any Shakespeares behind scenery today..

In the morning you and they are fresher—you understand each other better, and you are served better.

Just now we are planning a rest period for each one of our army of salespeople—and of course this will mean certain shorthandedness that can be offset by stretching the day at its early end.

HIGH GRADE TAILORING

We expect to win your confidence and your patronage by the merit of our tailoring only. We don't attempt to mislead the trade by dazzling prices or by making impossible promises. We do not try to see how "cheap" we can make clothes, but how "good." We have set for ourselves the very highest standard of the Tailoring Art.

We Let No Other Kind of Tailoring Go Out of Our Shop.

Our Tailoring organization is a perfect one, and by intelligent economy and good management we are able to name prices that please and satisfy. We have just received a clearing line of six special Worsted Summer Suitings, bought from one of the largest woolen houses in the trade, who are clearing up the balance of their Spring Suitings. These suitings are the highest grade English Worsteds, and patterns the latest.

The regular prices of these suitings in other stores are $23, $24, $25 and $26. We have placed them all at one price—

$20.00

Now is your opportunity to save from $3 to $6 on a suit and get the highest grade suit made. We shall be pleased to show you these new Spring and Summer Suitings and talk over the tailoring proposition with you at any time.

READY-TO-WEAR CLOTHING FOR MEN AND BOYS

This is a strong department in our men's and boys' store. We carry all sizes of men's suits ranging in price from $5 to $15. Good strong tweed suits suitable for every-day wear, range at $5, $6 and up to $8. The patterns are good and so are the linings.

From $10 to $15 we can show you a very large range of Tweeds and Worsteds in plain and fancy patterns, also Blue and Black Serges. You will find these suits cut in the latest and most approved styles. The cloth is good—the linings are good and our prices are from $1 to $2 lower than other stores for similar suits.

"IN BOYS' SUITS" you will find about 400 suits to select from. The prices range from $2 to $8.

Another advantage you have in buying Ready-to-wear Clothing at our store is on account of our having experienced tailors on the premises—enables us to shorten the sleeves of the coat or pants or make any other small alteration required in a proper way. We do this without any additional charge.

You cannot do better than buy all kinds of clothing from us. We stand back of anything we sell. If it should not be as recommended, come right back and give us the chance to make it right with you.

Resolutions.

The following resolutions were passed at the Liberal-Conservative convention in Napanee on Thursday, 27th June, and for which we had not space last week:

Moved by Cyrus Edgar, Esq., seconded by W. E. Leyst, Esq., and resolved,

That the Liberal-Conservative Association of the County of Lennox and Addington in convention assembled reaffirms its confidence in Mr. R. L. Borden, K.C., M.P., leader of His Majesty's Loyal Opposition in the House of Commons of Canada, and assures him of its high regard for his honor, his sterling worth and his great capabilities, and its appreciation of the great service he has rendered, not only to the grand old party of which he is the honored leader but also to the whole Dominion by his broad grasp of the public questions which concern the whole country.

And further that this Association expresses its hearty accord with the manner in which he has continued his attacks upon the extravagance, graft and corruption so prevalent in public business of the Dominion of Canada and its approval of the policy he has placed before the country and expresses the hope that after the ensuing general elections he will be called to form a Government free from the evils which are now so roundly condemned by all and a police that will give us Canada for its citizens and not Canada for the grafter.

And this Association hereby accords its hearty approval of the course heretofore pursued by our Dominion representative, Mr. Uriah Wilson, M.P., and in convention assembled hereby pledges him its hearty support in the next general election for the House of Commons.

And that a copy of this resolution be sent to Mr. Borden and to Mr. Uriah Wilson.

Dated at Napanee this 27th day of June, 1907.

MR. BORDEN'S REPLY.

Ottawa, July 1st, 1907.

G. F. Ruttan, Esq.,
Secretary Association for Lennox,
Napanee, Ont.

My dear Sir:—I beg to acknowledge your letter of 28th June enclosing copy of a resolution passed at the recent convention of the Liberal Conservative Association for Lenox & Addington.

I assure most cordially in the confidence expressed by the Association in your worthy representative, Mr. Uriah Wilson, M.P.

Please convey to the officers and members of the Association my sincere thanks for their very kind words with regard to myself.

Yours faithfully, R. L. BORDEN.

Moved by H. A. Baker, seconded by G. F. Ruttan, that, since our last meeting, when we were all pleased to see the special honor and presentation being given to the late Secretary of this Association for Addington, Mr. D. E. Rose, the relentless hand of death has removed him from our midst, and the chair, which he so largely occupied on this platform at the last convention, is now vacant. We miss his genial companionship and the Association has lost an officer, who, for many years, by his unwearied executive and tactful influence was the force, which largely contributed to the success of the Conservative Association in the Riding of Addington, while he occupied the position of Secretary of that Association.

Mr. D. E. Rose, our late lamented Secretary, was a man highly respected by every person who knew him. He was a power in the Township in which he lived and was of the highest intellectual ability, which, no doubt, would have had he lived, been recognized in the near future, by his being invited to advance to a position of trust in the Province.

We extend our sympathy to his widow and family, who have lost an exemplary and kind husband and father, and while D. E. Rose's place will not be filled for many a long day, we feel and know that whatever may be the people's loss, the loss to his family must be much greater and we direct that the Secretary send a copy of this resolution to the widow of our late lamented Secretary, D. E. Rose.

Moved by W. J. Paul, M.P.P., seconded by L. L. Gallagher, that the Liberal Conservative Association of Lennox and Addington, in convention assembled, wish to express their deep regret and their severe loss in the removal, by death, of J. Richard Fraser, the late President of the Association, who for many years, has been the President of the Liberal Conservative Association of Addington, and in the formation of this County Association was unanimously chosen as its first President.

We all recognized in our late President a man of extraordinary force of character, integrity and energy, and his life had been one of great activity in many avocations in all of which he proved himself to be a remarkable leader of men and he has left stamped upon every community in which he has lived, a strong influence and lasting results for good due to his high moral and christian character.

We also extend our sympathy to the widow of our late lamented President and request that a copy of this resolution be sent to her by the Secretary.

—Mrs. D. E. Rose, Tamworth, wishes through the columns of The Beaver, to acknowledge with thanks the receipt of $2,000 from the A. O. U. W., premium on the life of her late husband. Such promptness in the past in paying their mortuary claims has given the A.O.U.W. a favorable reputation, and received the heartfelt gratitude of the beneficiaries.

—Mr. Sidney Vanalstine was quite seriously injured at the raising of a barn on Mr. Fred. A. Perry's farm, Chambers, on Wednesday. The following, with which the men were raising one of the bents, broke and struck Mr. Vanalstine on the head. A doctor was summoned and after a thorough examination it is expected that he will be around again in a few days.

EXPECT GREAT THINGS

STRONG FAITH IN GOD THE SECRET OF REAL ACHIEVEMENT.

MUST LIVE UP TO PRIVILEGES

The Wedding In Cana of Galilee—Christ's First Miracle Pregnant With Meaning—Prayer a Mighty Lever—Selfish Desires Must Be Eliminated—Belief in Man Is Also Essential.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1906, by Frederick Dixon, Toronto, at the Dept. of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., June 23.—In this sermon the preacher shows that the secret to a life of real achievement and usefulness is to live up to our privileges by laying hold of the divine promises in good faith and expecting large things. The text is John ii., 7: "And they filled them up to the brim."

If there is any passage in the Bible which teaches how to worship God it is from God it is the sentence which I have chosen for my text. When Jesus commanded the servants at the wedding of Cana of Galilee to fill up the water pots they did not go grumbling around saying: "Oh, what is the use? What the guests need is wine, not water. Jesus does not asking us to fill one water pot, but six of them. Why, these six water pots will hold 126 gallons. Think of all the fun and the music and the songs we will lose while we are gone!" No, those young men spake not thus. They obeyed orders. If they had known what was about to occur they would have said, "If Christ can change the water into wine, then the more water we have the more wine we shall have." So they took their buckets and started off for the well. They kept emptying the water into the water pots until the water ran over the tops of the water pots. "And they filled them up to the brim." They did big things for God and they got big things. May we today learn to have a "bringful faith." May we expect God to bless us mightily in every department of life and in our youth and middle age and old age and make great preparations for the coming spiritual blessings.

Let us, in the first place, have a brimful faith in reference to our prayers. Let us learn that prayer to God is not a narrow ledge of rock upon the side of a mighty precipice where we must stand trembling and pleading for eternal life or else our feet will slip and we will tumble into the bottomless pit. But prayer is the broad invitation God gives to his children to come and talk with him and ask what they will, and he will grant their requests if it is best for them to be granted. Prayer is a promissory note that God puts into our hands, and we are encouraged to fill it out liberally. Prayer is the hold we have on the power that is capable of recreating ourselves and recreating our dear ones and lowering the bars so that we can enter into great fields of usefulness. Prayer is the most vital spiritual power we have on earth. With it we can get the wealth of the Lord God Almighty, and he will listen to our petitions and grant them if it is best for us and for those for whom we pray. What says the Bible? In these matters it pays to be liberal. Be generous in your petitions for Christ's sake. All things will be granted to our best welfare if these petitions are made in the spirit of Jesus Christ. He has said it shall be given unto you, seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you. But, though this sweeping invitation is given to make our prayers as big as heaven and earth, many of the most miserable and contemptible and insignificant things in the world are those we ask in the closet and in our intended petitions which we make to God and then forget to go to New York and see the greatest metropolis of the new world? He answers: "No, I don't want to go. Why, some of the men down at the village store tell me that the buildings there are twenty times higher than my barns. Why, I would be afraid to go there for fear they would fall down and crack my skull open. And they say the street cars run so fast that they kill people there every day. And they say there are a lot of thieves and murderers there. No New York for me. I prefer to stay here in my quiet digrigs, where I am not in danger of being killed every step I take." But I say: "My friend, you are not going to keep your children in the back woods!" There are no schools or churches here. You have a poor, miserable shack of a home, with no carpets on the floors and no pictures upon the walls. Are going let your children grow up as ignorant as you are?" He answers the old backwoodsman, "I do not know that book learning does a man any good. The children have enough to eat. They have enough clothes to wear. They have a roof in which to sleep. What is the good of stockings and sunderclothes? They do not help a man to keep any warmer. And then a little dirt does not hurt anybody. I have lived for nigh on to fifty years in these here woods without learning to read or write, and I guess the children are no better than their father is. If I had de do as I have done I guess they can do the same." You see that man is an animal, a simple animal. The great wide world, with its music and books and knowledge and joys and hopes, is utterly beyond his visual range. His largest horizon is a cabbage patch. Beyond that cabbage patch he cannot see. Such is the circumscribed horizon of some of those in our prayers. We can never get beyond the mere animal petitions of the lower, grosser ideas of prayer.

Instead of starting with a great sweep of holy desires to benefit all mankind through prayer, instead of filling up six great water pots with petitions for God's honor and glory, we come to God with a little thimble filled with our selfish desires, and we think Christ has been real good to go on year in and year out making a lot of miserable little selfish petitions out of our petitions proper. Not for years have we broadened the scope of our spiritual horizon. Not for years have we made one prayer big enough to obliterate self and take in God's glory and the good of many. Not some of us make poor, puny, silly, selfish prayers is enough to make the angels in heaven laugh were it not for the fact that those prayers are so tragic.

Oh, that you and I could grow big enough in our desires to make one big prayer which Paul made when in the spiritic to the Romans he wrote, "I have great heaviness and continual sorrow in my heart, for I could wish that myself were accursed from Christ for my brethren, my kinsmen, according to the flesh." That means in plain English: "O God, save my people; save the Jews, the men of my own race. I would die for them. I would even forfeit my own hope of salvation if by that means they might be won for Christ." Do we ever make such a prayer as that? Do we make our prayers so big that in their desires they will girdle the earth round and round and embrace the salvation of the whole world? I tell you, if we are going to make a full use of the privilege of prayer, our prayers will have to be made bigger than the little, puny, selfish desires of our hearts.

Shall we ever grow bigger than self? Are we living and praying for our own personal ends? Thank God, all men are not living for themselves. There are thousands and tens of thousands, some of them far poorer than we, who are living and praying for others. Listen to this remarkable history: During the famous London dock strike of a few years ago a young man sitting at his breakfast table and reading the story of suffering in the papers suddenly said, "I have no right to all this plenty while so many are starving." So he went and drew all his money out of the bank. Then he bought a lot of food and started out to find the homes of the strikers. He went to a street near the docks and stopped at the first of the biggest tenements and asked the landlady if there were any hungry around. She answered, "Lots of them." Then she told the young man upon what floors of her tenement house he would find those who were in the worst need. He went from room to room. In some of those rooms the people were the women who were starving would not touch food because their neighbors were worse off than they. "It ain't that I'm above being helped," said one gaunt, haggard mom, "but I've got enough ahead to keep me and mine in bread for one week more. If the strike ain't off by then I'll ask the help and I'll tell you. But there's worse off than we are now, and they ought to be helped first." At last the young man returned to the landlady who had directed him among the starving and bluntly said, "When did you eat anything last?" Oh, I had something to eat day before yesterday. You know they cannot pay their rents now, and I have to keep them." "But you never asked me for bread. Why not?" "Because," said the brave woman, "I know of some of them upstairs who have not had a sufficient of food for three days, and I wanted you to help them first." Wherever that young man went during that London dock strike he found starving men and women, thinking not so much for themselves as for others. Thus may we breathe forth our prayers. May we pray for others. May we plead for others. Like Paul, may we be able to say, "O God, for thy honor and glory may I live and may I die." It was all the life and love of Christ was in him when he lift up our petitions to God.

Amplify your prayers. Make them big enough to take in the necessities of the whole world. Make them do more than that. After you have prayed thus go forth with the confidence that God will answer your prayers upon a big scale. The trouble with a great many of us is that we are too small. We plan small. We lay out our designs for a St. Peter's or a Milan or a Seville cathedral. Then we underestimate our designs into mortar and brick by building a little meeting house or a village church or a roofless barn or a hennoop.

One of the small cities of England wished to build a large cathedral. The citizens came to a famous London architect and asked him to design one which would cost $1,000,000. After the elaborate design had been completed the committee came back and asked the architect if he would cut down his design and build one which would be worth $75,000. With that the sarcastic architect said, "Gentlemen, you not you make it 30 shillings more so we can throw in a fine spire?" Thus some of us in our prayers plan to use petitioning God for a St. Peter's or a Bedford. We have but one prayer upon the altars upon the most elaborate scale, have asked for the conversion of the world. We have asked for the complication of the human race from the tyranny of sin. We have asked for everything we ought to have asked for. But when it comes to filling up the whole of our prayer form we put in a little thimble. "What is the use?" If we can get God's answer to our prayers a thimbleful, that is all we have a right to expect. We ask for a fine cathedral; then we are satisfied with a little village meeting house or a little small hut. Now, if God knew we have no right to expect God for big things and in great big answers large petitions must be made.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

Now, I have found that when I ask God for small things I usually get them. I am a small man, and I have small desires. I say, "Oh, God, give me a certain position." And I usually make that petitions in good faith; then after they arrive from that I make other prayers and God is there ever after prayers. Now, when I want to be generous with God I usually have had to have a certain amount to meet the necessary expenses. So I made bold to my father and told him my needs. I told him what I wanted. I said he would send me that money, because that I wanted to live right here, and my father was financially able to meet my wants. So I wrote to my father to send my money in a certain period, as I expected to be there in about three weeks. Upon the faith which I had in my father I went ahead and supplied my necessities, and when I arrived at the proper time I got my money as I expected. Now, that is the way we should honor God. We should believe in him. We should ask big things of him. And then we should go forth in simple faith, expecting that he will answer our prayers." No man ever spoke truer words than these.

The more I pondered upon this part of my subject the more I was impressed that the greatest workers for Jesus Christ have been those who have a financial capital save their faith. They lived in one sense up to the last cent of their income. They prayed for big things, and then, having deliberately and calmly made up their minds that God would have to understand big things, they went ahead and built their hospitals and started their reformatory movements, and their money came when it was needed, as the manna of the wilderness fell day by day to feed the Israelites when they were on their way to the Promised Land.

But not in prayer alone is a brimful gospel faith necessary. We must have faith in the men and the women by whom we are surrounded if we would accomplish great things for his honor and glory. We must believe that God can enter into the hearts of our friends and recreate them into mighty spiritual forces for good as he can enter into our lives and make us mighty spiritual agencies. Paul writes in one of his epistles, "I can do all things through Christ, who strengtheneth me." Paul had a right to say that. I have a right to say that about myself. And I also have a right to say that about every man, woman and child with whom I come in contact in daily life. Now, there is no human power which will more quickly make a man a useful servant of Jesus Christ than the divine faith which we have in our brothers and sisters that through God they can do all things.

But the great trouble with our attempt to reclaim men is this: When men and women start to do anything when they begin to wander down into the paths of sin, the world loses faith in these sinners. When these sinners try to come back to the straight paths of purity and truth the world holds them back and turns toward them the cold shoulder of indifference and doubt. And after the world loses faith in a man, then the time is not far distant when that man also loses faith in himself, and then—God pity him! For, with a jump, he will leap over the precipice of despair.

Did I say that all the world would lose its faith in a man after a man has sinned seven times seven? I said that, but I must make one exception. There is always one person being who will never lose faith in us when we have done wrong, and that is our mother. That is the reason why the Christian mother's love is the most potent of all forces in the conservation of a sinner. The mother's faith will not give her children up, and that is the reason why so many of their wayward children for Christ. The warden of one of the prominent state penitentiaries a few years ago was asked if the prisoners' cell by them. He replied: "I go to them. "No," was the reply: "they are usually men who have been a scourge and disgrace to their families. It is a relief to be rid of them. Their friends, their wives and even their children make one or two perfunctory visits at first and then give them up. In the course of a year or two they are forgotten by all, as if they were in their coffins, except by their mothers. Their mothers always come and keep coming and try to influence me in their behalf. No matter how black dyed in crime a ruffian may be, his mother will know some good point to tell me of him. She never wholly loses her faith in him." Is not that, O man, the history of our lives? When we go wrong, did not our mothers cling to us as closely as we could not shake them off? And to-day is not one of the greatest powers by which we may win men to Christ the faith in their mother faith in our hearts? Oh, that by the grace of God we could all have a mother's faith in those who are treading the path of sin! Would that in the name of Jesus Christ we could cling to men and keep clinging to men until we could see them transformed

TORONTO BALL TEAM'S MANAGER

SPEAKS IN PRAISE OF ZAM-BUK!

Mr. Joe Kelley, the well-known manager of the Toronto Ball Team, testifies to the great merit of Zam-Buk as a healer of cuts, bruises, and skin diseases and injuries. He says: "As a healing balm for cuts, bruises, knocks, and other injuries incidental to baseball, and as an embrocation I think Zam-Buk an excellent preparation. I have given some to several members of the Toronto team and they think it fine. I wish it the success it deserves amongst all ball-players, and athletes in general." Every ball-player and athlete should use Zam-Buk. Unequalled, too, for sprains, chafing, and sores. All stores and druggists at 50c. a box, or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. 6 boxes for $2.50.

The London Pet.

The pit we used to read about in English novels has almost disappeared from the London theaters, surviving mainly at the music halls, though much abbreviated. The orchestra stalls have supplanted it with their high charges and the parquet appears quite American. Both of them expect a what we should call the parquet circle, are the cheap seats forming the pit—the high and low, rich and poor, are thus brought directly in contact.—Travel Magazine.

Rooks and Sunday.

All the animal world appears to know a Sunday when it sees one. There is a tradition in Lancashire, and perhaps elsewhere that the rooks always commence building on the first Sunday in March. This has been frequently verified by observation, and the punctuality of the rooks might almost date to exceed the limits of coincidence.

CATARRH CAN BE CURED.

KILL THE GERMS BY BREATHING HY-O-MEI. GIVES QUICK RELIEF.

Many people who have suffered with catarrh for years naturally think they cannot be cured, and become discouraged.

The reason they have failed of cure is because they have not treated the disease with the local remedy, Hy-o-mei, which is breathed through a neat pocket inhaler so that its healing antiseptic vapor reaches the remote air cells, kills all catarrh germs and restores the mucous membrane of the nose, throat and lungs, to a healthy condition.

Catarrh is not a local disease and to cure it, it must be treated by a remedy which reaches every part in the nose and throat where the disease germs lodge. Hy-o-mei does this and gives relief from the first day's use.

A complete Hy-o-mei outfit costs but $1.00 and T. B. Wallace gives a guarantee with every outfit to refund the money unless it cures.

NERVOUS INDIGESTION.

A SEVERE CASE CURED BY DR WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS.

"I suffered so much from nervous dyspepsia that I feared I would become insane," says Mrs. Alfred Austin, of Varney, Ont. "For months," says Mrs. Austin, "I was prostrated with this trouble. At times I got so bad I could not eat a mouthful of food without it nearly choking me. I was affected with such terrible feelings of dizziness and nausea that I had to leave the table sometimes with just two or three mouthfuls of food for a meal. My nerves were all unstrung, and I grew so weak that I could not even sweep the floor. In fact my nerves affected me to such an extent that I feared to be left alone. I could not sleep at nights, and used to lie awake until I feared my reason would leave me. I was taking medicine constantly, but it did not do me a bit of good. I had used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills on a former occasion with good results, and as a last I determined to try them again. I am happy to say before I had used these pills have been a blessing to me, as they have made me a well woman. Every trace of the indigestion is gone, and my nerves are as strong and sound as they were in girlhood. Now I can eat anything that is on the table, and I get sound refreshing sleep at nights, and all this I owe to the faithful use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which I shall never cease to praise."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills fill the veins with new rich red blood, and this is why they strengthen the nerves and every organ in the body. That is why they cure all troubles due to bad blood or weak shattered nerves, such as anaemia, with its grinding, wearing backaches, headaches and sideaches, rheumatism and neuralgia, heart palpitation, indigestion, St Vitus dance, partial paralysis, kidney troubles, and those special ailments that render the lives of so many women and growing girls a burden. But you must get the genuine pills with the full name, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People," on the wrapper around each box. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

MOTHER AND CHILDREN WERE SCALDED BY OIL.

Kingston, June 29.—A dreadful accident is reported at Read, in Tyendinaga township. It occurred at the home of Jas. Powers, a farmer. Mrs. Powers was engaged in boiling oil for use in paint, and in some manner as yet unknown, was badly scalded. It is presumed the oil boiled over, and that in trying to save it, the mass ran over her hands and arms. They were almost parboiled when she was found. Her husband, at the barn, heard her scream, and ran to her rescue.

Three small children were playing around the boiler, and the boiling fluid encompassed them. They were all badly scalded, one little girl so badly that she died shortly after. One of the other children was rendered unconscious, and was removed to Belleville Hospital, where careful treatment was accorded the little sufferer, who, all probability, will be all right again in a short time. The third child escaped with but trifling injuries.

Mrs. Powers is in a critical condition, her being a very delicate nature, and it will be some time before she will have the use of her hands.

POLICE COURT.

The morning in last week's Beaver re riding bicycles on the sidewalks of the town, evidently was not heeded, as a young man was before Police Magistrate Rankin yesterday morning and fined $2.00 costs, or five days in jail. He paid the fine. Who'll be the next?

Dominion Day passed off very quietly, only two drunks registering at Chief Graham's hotel. Both were fined and settled.

On Wednesday two more drunks were gathered in. They added $5.00 each to the exchequer.

The Chief is on the lookout for all offenders driving across bridges, etc., faster than a walk, and will gather them in as fast as they come along.

HAVE YOU A HAMMER IN YOUR STOMACH?

Of course you haven't but you would need to have a hammer to break some of the pills that are being sold in Napanee now, as they pass right through the stomach undissolved. You might just as well take bullets as far as results are concerned. To insure getting your Medicine Fresh and Good go to Wallace's Red Cross Drug Store. Everything reliable.

$195.00 AN ACRE.

Few people in town are aware that a real estate transaction was recently made, which means much to one of our enterprising citizens, and perhaps a great deal to our town at some future time. Mr. Harry Hooper, a 100-acre farm, north of the town, is covered with a fine bed of marl which is one of the principal ingredients in the manufacture of Portland cement. This has come to the knowledge of the Portland Cement Co., Belleville, and they at once secured an option on the whole farm at $195.00 acre. Ten acres were paid for at the time, and a spur track is now being laid from the G.T.R. to the farm, and work will soon be begun hauling the clay to the works at Point Anne, Belleville. There is probably much more of the same quality of clay in this section, and perhaps in the near future Napanee may have cement works.

A PETTY BUSINESS.

The Postoffice department has ordered the closing of the office here on Sunday, between the hours of 12 and 1 o'clock. For the past four years the public has been greatly inconvenienced through this privilege, and no additional benefit was imposed on the Postmaster or his staff. The front doors were simply opened, and people having boxes were allowed to get their mail. often very important and anxiously awaited. There was no snoozer or cause for complaint from the Lord's Day Alliance, which is evidently "straining at a knat." We understand a largely signed petition from our leading citizens will be forwarded to the government asking that the old privilege be restored.

June Brides

WARTMAN—BUCK.

The marriage of Miss Lila Victoria Buck to Mr. John A. Wartman, Newburgh, was solemnized at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Buck, Kepler, Ont., on Thursday, June 27th. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Shorts, Kingston, the bride's pastor, in the presence of only the immediate friends of the contracting parties. The bride and groom were unattended. The fair bride was given away by her father, and was dressed in brown cloth skirt with cream colored embroidered waist, and looked very pretty. After congratulations the guests partook of a dainty wedding breakfast at 2.30. The bride is one of our popular, accomplished young ladies and leaves behind her a large circle of friends, as was shown by the number of beautiful and costly presents she was the recipient of. The newly wedded couple were accompanied by Miss Wartman, Newburgh, and Dr. L. L. Buck, brother of the bride, to the G.T.R. depot, Kingston, where they left for Brockville and down the St. Lawrence for Montreal, Quebec and other places of interest. On their return a reception will be tendered them at Mr. Wartman's home, Newburgh.

KILBERT—HERON.

On Wednesday afternoon, June 26th, the spacious auditoriums of the first Congregational church, London, which was handsomely decorated with palms, ferns and marguerites, was taxed to its utmost capacity to accommodate the immense number of guests and friends that had congregated to witness the marriage of Miss Sarah Jean Heron, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Heron, to Mr. Lewis Max Kilbert, an artist of Chicago, Ill. As the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march were being played the bride entered the church leaning on the arm of her father. The bride was assisted by her sister Miss Nellie Heron, of London, and Miss Ethel McDonald, of Aylmer, cousin of the bride. The groom was supported by his brother, Dr. R. F. O. Kilbert, prof. of the Academy of Arts, and Mr. F. C. Shoemaker, mechanical engineer of the Chicago Street Railway Co. The flower girl was little Miss Annie MacRostie, of Milton. The bride was beautifully attired in a gown of oyster grey silk crepe de chene over white taffeta silk, with orange trimmings, bridal veil and orange blossoms, and carried a shower bouquet of bridal roses. The bridesmaid wore handsome gown of swiss organdies with lace and insertion trimmings and white hats. The flower girl in white flower girl was daintily dressed in swiss embroidery with pink ribbon trimmings and sash. She carried the ring hidden in a basket of flowers, and strewed sweet peas in the paths of bride and groom as they entered. The bride's travelling dress was an eton suit of navy taffeta silk and net waist with hat to match. The groom's gift to the bride was $1,000 in gold, to the bridesmaids and organist solid gold cuff links with monograms engraved, and to the flower girl a solid gold necklace and locket with her name neatly engraved, also the date of wedding. The groom presented the bride's parents with a portrait of bride and groom in water colors. After the impressive ceremony the company adjourned to the home of the bride's parents, where a sumptuous wedding dinner was served. The happy couple left on a shower of rice and confetti for Toronto, Niagara Falls, Napanee and Montreal, taking in the sports. They encountered some rough weather en route, but landed safe and sound on Monday evening at Bath, much to the relief of anxious friends, and now consider themselves old seafarers. Before leaving Toronto Mr. Hamm purchased a chart, which was a great aid in making the trip down.

We are over stocked and frankly admit it. The spring season has been a disappointment to manufacturers all over the country, who in the past month made frantic efforts to unload. Our buyers have had so many opportunities presented to them that they yielded to temptations and bought more heavily than conditions warranted. Luckily they bought under value, and by eliminating profits, we will quickly reduce our stock to its normal condition. There is not a firm anywhere could offer anything to compare with a sale of this kind where we know positively the public is sharing the great value giving of this mammoth Out-Let Sale.

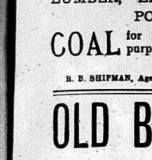
OLD BLEACH LINENS

And Their Advantages



Four reasons why "Old Bleach" Linens are so much superior to any other linen goods:—

(1) They are made of pure flax of the best quality.

(2) Elaborate precautions are taken to ensure perfect weaving.

(3) They undergo the tedious process of grass bleaching as practiced by our forefathers, who relied not on strong chemicals—but on the generous rays of the sun to whiten their flaxen treasure.

(4) They are finished without a grain of starch by the special "Old Bleach" process—the only one which can produce the everlasting silky lustre and delightful soft feel so characteristic of "Old Bleach" linen. We offer them in:—

TOWELS, HUCKABACKS, DIAPERS, SHEETINGS, PILLOW LINENS, TOWELLINGS ART LINENS FOR NEEDLEWORK, which are delightful to work on. Also a great range of DRESS LINENS.

We will be delighted to mail samples of these beautiful Linens to your address.

Ryan's Stores

There is so much we want to tell you about this week that we are taking a fall column instead of the usual space, and if this talk properly represents our stores this column will be full of news of genuine interest to many readers.

The season has been cold and backward and in many lines there are large stocks that must be cleared out quickly to make room for new imports which have already been ordered and will soon be shipped in

At last the warm weather has come and with it the demand for summer goods, more especially dress goods. Let us tell you something about what we have and then come and see for yourself what splendid offerings we are making.

Ladies' Summer Dress Goods

We have never been in such good position to meet every want in this line. The cold spring has had a tendency to make trade slow but now these goods must go with a rush. Among them are right fashion.

Persian Lawns, India Linens, Costume Linens

In white and cream and Batiste, that new goods which is almost as soft and fine as silk and makes such beautiful shirt waists. If you are not already familiar with the qualities of Batiste let us show you how far it surpasses anything in the line of summer waistings.

Dress Trimmings

You may be surprised at the complete line of trimmings we carry, such as Valenciennes Laces, Embroideries and Insertions.

Summer Waists

If you prefer to buy your waists ready to wear you will find here a splendid opportunity to select exactly what you want, at prices ranging from 50cts to $3.00.

Summer Suits

A complete line, Beautifully made up in the latest designs and in variety to meet your taste, Prices are $5 up to $18.00.

Skirts Ready-to-Wear

They come in black, grey and blue. For real warm weather there are some light greys which are particularly stylish looking and are attracting special attention. $2.00 to $5.00.

Long Gloves

Sleeves are made short this season and a wonderfully dressy effect is obtained by the wearing of long gloves. We have beautiful silk gloves in greys, black and white. Elbow lengths are popular.

Men's Clothing

While we are giving special attention this week to women's goods, we must not forget the men, for this store has long stood for what is best in men's clothing. There are good fitting, up-to-date suits here that would cost nearly twice as much at a custom tailor's and besides you have the advantage of seeing just how the suit will look before you buy.

Because of the reputation of our men's clothing department, we have men come twenty to thirty miles to be fitted and some have been coming back for the last thirty years. Prices run from $5 to $20.00.

Men's Shirts

In both soft and starched fronts. All the best brands and most up-to-date goods at from 50cts to $1.00.

But we cannot begin to tell you of all our lines of goods in one advertisement. Our stocks in House Furnishings, Boots and Shoes, Hardware, Groceries, etc., were never so complete.

These stores are literally packed with goods that were bought before the advance of prices and the benefits are for you to obtain. We fear no competition in neighboring towns, either in regard to stock or prices and only ask an opportunity to convince you of this by showing the goods.

☞ We pay cash for any produce the farmer has to sell and give the Highest prices.

ORONHYATEKHA'S SON.

Dr. Oronhyatekha Died Suddenly on Sunday.

Deseronto, July 7.—Dr. Acland W. H. Oronhyatekha died suddenly at his residence, "The Pines," a few miles west of Deseronto, at an early hour this morning. Dr. Rose, of Toronto, who was visiting at "The Pines" tried to awaken Dr. Oronhyatekha, but, getting no response to his call made a hasty examination, and found that he was dying. He did not recover consciousness, and died almost immediately. Death was due to heart failure.

Deceased was the only son of the late Hon. Dr. Oronhyatekha, Supreme Chief Ranger on the Independent Foresters. Mrs. Oronhyatekha, who has been to her former home in Christiania, Norway, is expected in New York next Tuesday. It is probable the funeral will not take place from the residence here Wednesday evening or Thursday.

JULY 'CANADIAN PICTORIAL'.

Truly Canadian is the July number of this progressive Canadian Monthly. The cover picture is a charming photographic study of a girl in the Western Ontario meadow, dotted with daisies. The public man featured this month is the Hon. Sydney Fisher, Minister of Agriculture, and a page of pictures illustrates the weird funeral customs which the Hindoos have brought from India to British Columbia. The new provinces' progress is shown in pictures of the great irrigation works and the kind of cattle Alberta produces. The Japanese Prince, who is now crossing the Pacific in a British man-of-war, is pictured at various places on his journey across Canada. Three pages are devoted to the Presbyterian General Assembly. Ten cents a copy; one dollar a year. The Pictorial Publishing Co., 142 St. Peter St., Montreal.

A very pretty wedding took place on June 26th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Russell, Empey Hill, when their daughter, Ida Evelyn, was united in marriage to Mr. Geo. W. Kinnear, of Tyendinaga. The parlor, where the ceremony was performed by the Rev. R. Duke, was beautifully decorated with flowers. The bride was given away by her father, and was dressed in cream cloth with cream silk blouse to match. After the ceremony a wedding supper was partaken of, by about 85 of the relatives of the bridal party. The bride was the recipient of many beautiful and valuable presents. FAREWELL PRESENTATION.

On the evening of June 27th, the parsonage at Selby was taken possession of by the members of the Methodist church there, to bid God speed to our pastor, the Rev. R. Duke, who was appointed to the Newburgh circuit at the recent conference.

It seemed that the entire congregation had turned out to show their respect for their pastor and family and best wishes for future happiness.

After partaking of a plentiful and varied refreshment, Mr. A. B. Hodgins, who is always to the front in such matters, came forward, and stated the object of the gathering. He then called on Mrs. Alex. Denike, President of the Selby Epworth League, to read an address to Mr. and Mrs. Duke. During the reading two other ladies presented gifts of useful and valuable chairs, one for Mrs. Duke, and the other, the latest style of study chair, to Mr. Duke. The presentation and address were suitably acknowledged by Mr. Duke, on his own behalf and that of Mrs. Duke and family.

The following is the address :

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Duke,—We have assembled here this evening to convey to you our appreciation of your services during your pastorate over us. Short though they have been, we have grown to love you ardently; and it is with regret we see you depart from us. We trust the gospel truths you have endeavored to impress on our minds will be indelibly stamped there, and bring forth fruit a one hundred fold.

From your daily walk through life we have learned many lessons of patience, forbearance, benevolence, and liberality. And to Mrs. Duke, we feel we must say a word in parting. We will miss you from our W. M. S. meetings, for we have ever found in you that happiness to make life happier, constant simple acts of kindness, deeds of sweetness and love radiate within your life. Your kind and hospitable disposition have made the parsonage a welcome retreat, or to use a quotation from Oliver Goldsmith, "A blest abode where every face finds a ready chair." So to-night we ask you to accept these two "Study Chairs" as a slight token of our esteem and good wishes. We trust you will find them comfortable and useful, and we, pray Providence that He may give you health and long life to enjoy them, with all other additional blessings.

Signed on behalf of the ladies of Selby congregation,

MRS. GEO. VALLEAU,
MRS. D. SCHERMAHORN
MRS. J. C. HUDGINS.

J. R. YOUNG,

Agent, Cartwright Block, two doors below Boyle & Son's.

Charles Allan and Alex. Gall, who were buried under tons of debris at Montreal, miraculously escaped death.

When Knighthood Was In Flower

Again the thrust which should have killed broke the sword, and the father died as the son had died.

After this came young Charles, expecting, but so great was his strong heart, not one whit fearing, to be beside his dead father and brother. He knew he was the superior of both in strength and skill, and his knowledge of men and the noble art told him they had not each been the superior of Judson, but the fellow's hand seemed to be the hand of death. An opening came through Judson's unskilful play which gave young Brandon an opportunity for a thrust to kill, but his blade, like his father's and his brother's, bent double without penetrating. Unlike the others, however, it did not break, and the thrust revealed the fact that Judson's skill as a defender in the light of mail which it was useless to try to pierce. Aware of this, Brandon feigned a thrust that was his and that soon he would have avenged the murders that had gone before. He saw that his adversary was strong neither in wind nor arm and had not the skill to penetrate his guard in a week's trying, so he determined to fight in the defensive until Judson's strength should wane, and then kill him when and how he chose.

After a time Judson began to breathe hard and his thrusts to lack force.

"Boy, I would spare you," he said, "I have killed cousin of your tribe. Put up your sword and call it quits."

Young Brandon replied: "Stand your ground, you coward. You will be a dead man as soon as you grow a little weaker. If you try to run, I will thrust you through the neck as I would a cur. Listen how you snort. I shall soon have you. You are almost gone. You would spare me, would you? I could preach a sermon or dance a hornpipe while I am killing you. I will not break my sword against your coat of mail, but will wait until you fall from weakness, and then— Fight, you bloodhound!"

Judson was pale from exhaustion, and his breath was coming in gasps as he tried to keep the merciless eyes from his throat. At last, by a dexterous twist of his blade, Brandon sent Judson's sword flying thirty feet away. The fellow started to run, but turned and fell upon his knees to beg for life. Brandon's reply was a flashing circle of steel, and his sword point cut lengthwise through Judson's eyes and the bridge of his nose, leaving him sightless and hideous for life—a revenge compared to which death would have been merciful.

The duel created a sensation throughout the kingdom, for, although little was known as to who Judson was, his fame as a duellist was as broad as the land. He had been at court upon several occasions, and at one time upon the king's birthday, had fought in the royal lists. So the matter came in for its share of consideration by king and courtiers, and when Brandon became a person of interest. He became still more so when some gentlemen who had served with him in the reconstruction wars told the court of his daring and bravery and related stories of deeds at arms worthy of the best knight in Christendom.

He had an uncle at the court, Sir Thomas Brandon, the king's master of horse, who thought it a good opportunity to put his nephew forward and let him take his chance at winning royal favor. The uncle broached the subject to the king, with favorable issue, and Charles Brandon, led by the hand of fate, came to London court, where that same fate had in keeping for him events such as seldom fall to the lot of man.

CHAPTER II,

HOW BRANDON CAME TO COURT.

WHEN we learned that Brandon was coming to court, every one believed he would soon be on the king's favorite. How much that would amount to none could tell, as the king's favorites were of many sorts and taken from all conditions of men. There was Master Wolsey, a butcher's son, whom he had first made chaplain, then chief minister and bishop of Lincoln, soon to be bishop of York and cardinal of the holy Roman church.

From the other extreme of life came young Thomas, Lord Howard, heir to the Earl of Surrey, and by favor of Buckingham, premier peer of the realm. Then sometimes would the king take a yeoman of the guard and make him his companion in jousts and tournaments solely because of his brawn and bone. There were others who were kept close by him in the palace because of their wit and the entertainment they furnished, of which class was I, and, I flatter myself, no mean member.

To begin with, being in no way dependent on the king for money, I never drew a farthing from the royal treasury. You, you may be sure, did me no harm, for, although the king sometimes delighted to give, he always hated to pay. There were another good reason, too, why I should be a favorite with the king.

My appointment as master of the dance, I am sure, was owing entirely to my manner. My brother, the baron, who stood high with the king, was not considered a dandy, so because my father had seen fit to bequeath me so good a competency in place of giving it all to the firstborn I was not dependent upon the tender mercies of an older brother. So I had no help from that source, and, as I say, am quite small of stature and therefore unable to compete with lance and gauge with those of greater mass, but I would do any man, of any size, on any game, at any place and time, in any amount, and, if I do say it, who perhaps should not, I basked in the light of many a fair smile which larger man had sighed for in vain.

I did not know when Brandon first came to London. We had all remained at Greenwich while the king moved up to Westminster to waste his time with matters of state and quarrel with the parliament, then sitting, over the amount of certain subsidies.

Mary, the king's sister, then some eighteen or nineteen years of age, a perfect bud, just blossoming into a perfect flower, had gone over to Windsor on a visit to her elder sister, Margaret of Scotland, and the palace was dull enough. Brandon, it seems, had been presented to Henry during this time at Westminster and had, to some extent at least, become a favorite before I met him. The first time I saw him was at a joust given by the king at Westminster

A VETERAN DEAD.

Pembroke, Ont., July 6.—There passed quietly to rest, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Harold Colton, in this town, S. P. Conroy, Napanee, at the age of eighty-two years. Mr. Conroy was born at Clonaslaborne, Queen's county, Ireland, on August 15th, 1825, and it is interesting to note that he was one of the oldest Oddfellows in America, having been a member of the order for 58 years, standing for fifty-seven years. He was first initiated into Washington lodge, No. 1, I.O.O. F., Washington, D.C., on June 18th, 1850, and received all the degrees of Oddfellowship. He remained in that lodge till February 24th, 1854, when he became connected with St. Catherines lodge, where he remained some time. He then had occasion to remove to Dixon, Ill., and there identified himself with the lodge in that city. He next removed to Mason City, and while a member of the lodge there had all the honors of the society conferred upon him.

About fifteen years ago he took up his residence in Napanee. Once here he became a member of Napanee lodge. He was undoubtedly one of the oldest Oddfellows in America to-day, and a past grand of some years standing.

Mr. Conroy was a veteran of the Mexican war, serving the United States as a member of the Texas Rangers, and obtained his honorable discharge a year or so after his initiation into Oddfellowship. He survived by two daughters, Mrs. Colton of Pembroke, and Miss Conroy, of Napanee. The remains were taken to Napanee for interment.

Canadian Fruitgrowers

In response to the pressing invitation of Court Lennox No. 78, C. O. F., Bro. Hugh Hamilton, and Bro. W. J. Strong, Superintendent of Organization, arrived in town from Brantford on the noon train Monday, to take part in the initiation of the large number of candidates for membership, secured by Bro. J. Halpany, Organizer for the C.O.F., Court Dominion, C. R. Walters, and Bro. Halpany met the Brantford delegates at the train, and after dinner the visiting brothers were treated to a drive around the town and were shown not only the many beautiful residences, but the various institutions and churches and they expressed themselves as being delighted with our town, and that it compared more than favorably with towns of its size in the Western part of the province.

At the evening twenty-five candidates were initiated, bringing the Court membership up to the number of two-hundred, and still leaving many applications pending which will probably be added to the membership at the next regular meeting night. Bro. Halpany, an old Napanee boy, whose home is in Peterboro', has been in town since Bro. 10th last, and over thirty accepted applications are the result of his labors.

The twenty-five candidates were given the amplified form of initiation in the beautiful hall in Court Lennox, in the Rennie Block, and the work of the degree team was pronounced by the visiting brothers as being all that could be desired. The perfection attained by the members of the team in the work of their various positions and in the rendering of the ritualistic work by the visiting brothers who found a new source of interest in the work of the Canadian Forestry. There were 125 members of the Order present, including the High Court Officers; the latter were introduced to the Court by Veteran Bro. James Wallace, and the visitors received a hearty grand honours due them. At the close of the Court the brothers adjourned to the town hall, and partook of refreshments, which were served in Bro. Riley's best style, after which a toast list was proceeded with, Bro. U. M. Wilson acting as Chairman. After the brothers had drunk to the health of the King and the High Court Rangers, Bro. M. S. Madole, in an eloquent speech, toasted the High Court which brought forth an eloquent and witty response from Bro. Hoag, and a forceful speech by Bro. W. G. Strong.

Bro. W. T. Waller proposed the toast of "Our Organization," in a facetious speech, and when Bro. Halpany responded, the chairman read to him an appreciative address on behalf of Court Lennox, referring not only to his labors in connection with the Order, but also to his generous response to invitations to assist at social functions, accompanying which was the presentation of a gold watch pin. Upon attempting to reply Bro. Halpany was overcome by the surprise which had overtaken him, but expressed his thanks in a few suitable words, and acknowledged the kind remarks contained in the address, and the kind reception by the various speakers to them.

The toast list needs no comment, as it was proposed by Bro. J. G. Fennell, Bro. Sills and Bro. Maiden, of Belleville, Bro. Halpany, Bro. Halpany, after repeated calls, gave a number of popular songs, and responded to the encore with a mirthful recitation. The proceedings were brought to a close with the singing of Auld Lang Syne.

The meeting was one of the most successful ever held in fraternal circles in the Town of Napanee, and the visiting brothers as well as the brothers of Loyal Court, were well satisfied with the wonderful progress and prosperity of Court Lennox No. 78, C.O.F.

The following is a copy of the address presented to Brother Halpany:

Bro. A. J. Halpany,
Organizer C. O. F.,
Peterboro', Ont.

Dear Sir and Brother,—The members of Court Lennox No. 78, C.O.F. desire to extend to you on this occasion, an expression of the deep gratitude they feel they owe to you, for your pains-taking efforts to build up the membership of this Court, and for many of thrifty applicants for membership having been brought into this Court, since your arrival on June 10th last. The class of members you have had the privilege to bring has been of a high standard, and such that the low average age of the membership of Court Lennox is two hundred mark, and we feel it must be largely due to the assistance in the department of High Court to which you are attached, that they have been able and efficient men in the field.

As citizens of Napanee and vicinity, we extend to you the thanks of the citizens for the generous manner in which you have responded to invitations for public entertainment during your short stay amongst us, and from the expression we have heard of the pleasure you have afforded the public on these occasions we know you will not be forgotten by them.

We ask you to accept this pin from Court Lennox as a slight memento of your visit amongst us, and we hope that it will always recall a pleasant period in what we hope will be a long, happy and prosperous life. May the same success which has crowned your efforts here always be the reward of zealous and energetic efforts on your part to keep the C.O.F. in the front.

Napanee, Ont., July 8th, 1907.

Yours in L. B. & C.,

Signed on behalf of Court Lennox No. 78, C.O.F.

WISE AND OTHERWISE.

"Eve wasn't afraid of measles, was she?"
"No, she'd Adam."

Sure Regulators.—Mandrake and Dandelion are known to exert a powerful influence on the liver and kidneys, restoring them to healthful action, inducing a regular flow of the secretions and imparting to the organs complete power to perform their functions. These valuable ingredients enter into the composition of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills, and serve to render them the agreeable and salutary medicine they are. There are few pills so effective as they in their action.

He (bashfully)—May I—er—kiss your hand, Miss Dolly?
She—Oh, I suppose so. But it would be much easier for me to remove my veil than my glove.

They Wake the Torpid Energies.—Machinery not properly supervised and left to run itself, very soon shows fault in its working. It is the same with the digestive organs. Unregulated from time to time they are likely to become torpid and throw the whole system out of gear. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills were designed to meet such cases. They restore to the full the flagging faculties, and bring into order all parts of the mechanism.

Aunt—Tommy! How cruel! Why did you cut that poor worm in two?
Tommy—He seemed so lonely.

No one can fear cholera or any summer complaint if they have a bottle of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial ready for use. It corrects all looseness of the bowels promptly and causes a healthy and natural action. This is a medicine adapted for the young and old, rich and poor and is rapidly becoming the most popular medicine for cholera, dysentery, etc., in the market.

"So you married the Widow Smith I thought you intended to marry the Widow Jones?"
"Well, you see, the Widow Smith's first husband's clothes were exactly my size."

One trial of Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator will convince you that it has no equal as a worm medicine. Buy a bottle and see if it does not please you.

Visitor—How long are you in for, my poor man?
Prisoner—Jumping, ma'am.
Visitor—How can that be?
Prisoner—It's a life sentence.

Hard and soft corns cannot withstand Holloway's Corn Cure; it is effectual every time. Get a bottle at once and be happy.

E. Z. Mark—My wife won't speak to me to-day.
E. Z. Mark—What's the trouble?
E. Z. Mark—Oh, she went to a bargain sale, bought a 39 cent shirtwaist, put $5 worth of lace and $10 worth of time on it, and asked me if she wasn't economical.

I'm Fields Far Off.—Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is known in Australia, South and Central America as well as in Canada and the United States, and its consumption increases every year. It has made its own way, and all it needs is a trial to make it keep its name before the public. Everyone knows that it is to be had at any store, for all merchants keep it.

Bonker—They are now talking of cathedrals in glass. What do you think of that?
Punker—Oh, that's all right! The rain will take the medicine just the same.

Little Ethel—There was a strange man here to see you to-day, papa.
Papa—Did he have a bill?
Little Ethel—No, papa, just a plain nose.

A ONE-EYED ENOCH ARDEN.

London, July 10.—Out in Brighley, Kent, they have a one-eyed Enoch Arden. Both of a trampish disposition, the man was accustomed to spend most of his time moving about the country with his sons. One day in April, the brained body of a man with only one eye, a broken nose, and a crushed face was taken from the Thames. That must be their father, they said, and when they had viewed the body at the morgue they identified it as their father's.

They took it home and gave it decent burial and congratulated themselves that the old man had gone to his everlasting reward.

On Monday night of this week, while drinking in a village hotel they heard a voice that made them quake. It was their father's voice.

"We buried you five months ago," said the oldest son, reproachfully. "You were drowned in the Thames."

The old man gave the boy a one-eyed look of contempt and coldly remarked: "It's a wise son that knows his own father."

TO THE MOSQUITOES.

Last night the mosquitoes they woke me,
Last night when all was still;
They sang in the dinky twilight,
With joy my dreams to fill.
I opened my eyes so gently,
And gave my cheek a smack,
But they gaily flew off and whispered
"Just wait, I'll soon be back."

O think not I can forget you,
I could not though I would;
I hear you all the night long;
I'd kill you, if I could.
Your music disturbs my slumbers,
It causes me to say d——
At night I wish you would keep away
And let my slumbers be calm.

THE FIRST COFFEE.

Accidental Discovery of the Aromatic Beverage.

Near the middle of the fifteenth century a poor Arab was traveling through Abyssinia, and, finding himself weary and weak from fatigue, he stopped near a grove. There, being in want of fuel to cook his rice, he cut down a tree, which happened to be covered with dead berries. His meal being cooked and eaten, the traveler discovered that the half burned berries were very fragrant. He collected a number of them, and on crushing them with a stone he found that their aroma increased to a great extent. While wondering at this he accidentally let fall the substance into the can which contained his scanty supply of water. Lo, what a miracle! The nearly putrid water was almost instantly purified. He raised it to his lips. It was fresh, agreeable, and in a moment the traveler had so far recovered his strength and energy as to be able to resume his journey. The lucky Arab gathered as many berries as he could, and, having arrived at Aden, in Arabia, he informed the mufti of his discovery. That worthy divine was an inveterate opium smoker and had suffered for years from the influence of that poisonous drug. He tried an infusion of the roasted berries and was so delighted at the recovery of his own vigor that in gratitude to the tree he called it cahuah, which in Arabic signifies "force."

THE CHAMOIS.

Ways of the Shy Animals of the Mountains of Europe.

Exciting sport, the more exciting because of the hardships connected with it, is offered by chamois hunting in the mountains of Europe. The chamois are found everywhere in the highest mountains of Germany, Austria, Switzerland, in Transylvania, in the Carpathians, also in the Alps; and these extremely shy animals are regarded by all true huntsmen as the most desirable of all game. The chamois belongs to the antelope species; but, unlike its kin of the broad plains, it prefers the barren wilds of the high mountains, and, like the mountain sheep, the ibex and the moufton, it selects in this territory full of chasms and canyons the most impassable regions as its lair. During the summer months the chamois roams in the higher altitudes, but in the winter time it must descend to find its feed. After feeding it returns to its old impassable nooks, where it feels secure. As in the case of the deer, the male is called a buck and the female a doe; but, unlike all other animals of this kind, both sexes are antlered, the horns being called "crickets," but those of the doe are somewhat lighter than those of the buck. The doe brings forth one fawn every year, sometimes two, but very seldom more, which are very dearly loved by the mother and which she protects against all dangers.—Outer's Book.

Male Blushers and Their Cure.

"A good many men blush," said a physician; "some so painfully that they come to me to be cured. The cure I recommend is an old one. It is the abandonment of overheavy clothing, especially of woolen socks. Amazing it is how many male blushers have a predilection for thick socks of wool. But some blushers wear light enough clothing. To them I can only recommend a nerve treatment. I advise them to make speeches at banquets, to be witnesses in murder trials, to go to teas and dances, to dayclean, in short, the nerve, as a wrestler develops his muscle. Blushing is a difficult disorder to cure. As a rule, it passes away of itself when the victim reaches his thirty-fifth year."

ARGAND LAMPS.

A Swiss Doctor's Invention and What It Accomplished.

What did Argand do for the lamp? Examine an ordinary lamp in which coal oil is burned. The chimney protects the flame from sudden gusts of wind, and also creates a draft of air, just as the chimney creates a draft. Argand's lamp was the first to have a chimney. Now the chimney and wick are open passages through which air may pass upward and find its way to the wick. Notice further that this draft of air passes upward. It is so directed that when the lamp is burning an extra quantity of air plays directly upon the wick. Before Argand the wick received no supply of air. Now notice—and this is very important—that the wick of an modern lamp is flat or circular, but thin. The air in abundance plays upon both sides of the thin wick and burns it without making smoke. Smoke is simply half burned particles (soot) of a burning substance. The particles pass off half burned because enough air has not been supplied. Now Argand, by making the wick thin and by causing plenty of air to rush into the flame, thereby caused it to burn with a white flame.

After the invention of Argand the art of lamp making improved by leaps and by bounds. More progress was made in twenty years after 1783 than had been made in twenty centuries before. New burners were invented, new and better oils were used and better wicks produced, but all the new kinds of lamps were patterned after the Argand.—S. E. Forman in St. Nicholas.

HIS RULING PASSION.

A Business Proposition That Just Failed of Success.

There lived in Detroit a man who was the champion letter writer to the newspapers and to the heads of all public enterprises. One of his fads was to write every day to President Ledyard of the Lake Shore Central railroad and tell Ledyard wherein he was failing in the conduct of his road.

There was a letter for Ledyard every morning. They annoyed him, and he sent for his general counsel one day and said: "Russell, I'm getting tired of these letters. I will give you $3,000 more a year if you will find that man and stop him for twelve months."

Three thousand dollars more a year appealed to Russell, and he went out to find the letter writer. He found him and made a business proposition. "Now, see here," he said, "I want you to stop writing letters to Mr. Ledyard. If you will quit for a year I will give you $1,500."

The letter writer consented gladly. Things went along swimmingly for eleven months. Ledyard was happy, and Russell was happy. Then there was a wreck on the road. The letter writer could not resist the opportunity, and he wrote to Ledyard and told him what he thought about the road and its president and its management.

Ledyard sent the letter to Russell with this indorsement: "This is where you lose $3,000." And it was.

Absinth Foretold.

A Paris paper publishes a letter from a correspondent who in the cause of temperance cites a great authority—St. John the Evangelist. It is claimed that the inspired writer proclaims absinth as a terrible scourge and foretells its baneful powers in the eighth chapter of the book of Revelation, where we read in verses 10 and 11: "The third angel sounded a trumpet, and a big star bright as a lamp fell from the sky on to the third part of the rivers and fountains and water. This star is called Wormwood, and the third part of the waters were changed, and many men died of thirst because they were bitter." Wormwood in the English authorized version is rendered "absinth" in the French translation of the New Testament.

I Was Mistaken.

A lively writer has said "I was mistaken' are the three hardest words to pronounce in the English language." Yet it seems but acknowledging that we are wiser than we were before to see our error and humbler than we were before to own it. But to it is, and Goldsmith observes that Frederick the Great did not disdain the honor by his letter to his senate stating that he had just lost a great battle by his own fault than by all the victories he had won. Perhaps our greatest perfection here is not to escape imperfections, but to see and acknowledge and lament and correct them.

Do Not Stare at the Officers.

Army officers in uniform abound in foreign cities, and in Germany they resent being stared at by tourists, often assuming contemptuous attitudes in retaliation. As the law permits them to shoot civilians on provocation, it is wise not to excite them. It is well to remember that they do not feel obliged to turn out for pedestrians, even ladies. —Travel Magazine.

Learning the Rules.

Little Elsie—Let's play keeping house. I'll be the lady of the house, Little Margie—And what will I be? Little Elsie—Oh, you'll be another lady come to call on me, and I'll pretend to be glad to see you.

The Drawback.

Mrs. Meeker (at the play)—I do wish you'd pay more attention to this play, George; it's as good as a sermon. Mr. Meeker (dozing)—It probably is, my dear, but the darn orchestra wakes me up between acts.

One's own thistle field is dearer to him than his neighbor's garden of roses.—German Proverb.

"MUNGO" PARK.

The Worse Than Shoddy Fabric That Gave Him His Name.

The old lady listened complacently to the compliments on her new gown.

"Well, at any rate," she said as she unfolded the lustrous folds, "it isn't made of mungo."

"Mungo? What is mungo?" asked her niece.

"Have you never heard of Mungo Park?" said the old lady.

"Yes, I think I have. I don't know what I've heard, though."

"Well, I'll tell you. Mungo Park was an Englishman, and he lived at the time when shoddy was invented. He invented a stuff that was far worse than shoddy—a stuff beside which shoddy was fine, new wool—and I'll tell you why this stuff was called mungo.

"Park, after making up a batch of it out of shoddy dust and grease, gave it cautiously to his carder to card.

"The carder tried it. Then he sent for the boss.

"'This new stock of yours won't do, Mr. Park,' he said.

"'Mum go,' said the other in his Yorkshire dialect. 'It mun go, mak.'

"And go it did, and Park got his name, and thus that abominable stock that he invented came to get the name of 'mungo.'"

OUR GLOBE'S CAPACITY.

The Time When the Earth Will Be Fully Peopled.

Professor Ravenstein, of the Royal Geographical society estimates that the fertile lands of the globe amount to 25,000,000 square miles, the steppes to 14,000,000 and the deserts to 1,000,000.

Fixing 207 persons to the square mile for fertile lands, ten for steppes and one for deserts as the greatest population that the earth could properly nourish, the professor arrives at the conclusion that when the number of inhabitants reaches about 600,000,000 the earth will be peopled to its full capacity. At present it contains somewhat more than one-quarter of that number.

If the rate of increase shown by the latest census statistics should be uniformly maintained, Professor Ravenstein shows that the globe would be fully peopled about the year 2072.

The Father of West Point.

George Washington must be given the credit of causing the first steps to be taken toward the founding of a national military academy. In 1794, while serving his second term as president, Washington succeeded in having congress create the grade of cadet in the army. West Point was chosen as the best army post at which cadets could be trained, for the reason that it was then the most important station of the artillerists and engineers. The cadets of those days did not pass entrance examinations, and the standard of proficiency in studies did not amount to the tenth part of what is exacted nowadays. A smattering of engineering, mathematics and artillery practice was all that was deemed necessary. — St. Nicholas.

Lucknow's Great Hall.

Connected with the Mohammedan mosque at Lucknow, India, is the largest room in the world without columns, being 162 feet long, 54 feet wide and 53 feet high. It was built during the great famine in 1784 to supply work for a starving people. It is a solid mass of concrete of simple form and still simpler construction. In its erection a mold or framework of timber and brick several feet in thickness was first made, which was then filled with concrete. The concrete was allowed about a year to set and then the mold was removed. Although the building has been standing so long, it is in no sense any signs of decay or deterioration.

The Evening Meal.

The principal meal of the busy work filled day, says a prominent New York physician, should be eaten at night, when the nerves and muscles and whole physical system need resting and strengthening and stimulating after the day's demands upon them. Sleeplessness results from this, the healthy, cheerful person who has dined wisely and well at any time from 7 to 9 o'clock.—New York Times.

Angels Would Forbid Spanking.

John's mother used to tell him that there were little guardian angels watching over him, keeping him from harm, etc. One day when he had been naughty his mother said, "Now, dear, what do you suppose your guardian angels thought when they saw you so naughty?" "Haven't got any guardian angels," he replied. "If I had they wouldn't let me get spanked."

His Motto.

"My motto is 'Never give up,'" said Mr. Closefist. "Yes," remarked the deacon, "I've noticed that when I passed you the plate in church."

THE WOMEN OF TREE.

How the Milk Is Treated After the Plant Is Tapped.

Para rubber is obtained from a large tree sixty feet high. The trees are tapped in the evening, and the juice is collected on the following morning. A native is employed to each grove, and he has the lease of the tree, and then from it a vertical one extending up the trunk, with others at right angles, making an oblique direction. Small shallow cups made from clay and dried in the sun are placed below the incisions to receive the milk, each cup being attached by sticking a piece of soft clay to the bottom of the cup and pressing it. Each tree yields only about six ounces of juice in three days.

When collected the juice is heated in the following manner: A piece of wood about three feet long, with a flattened clay mold at one end of it, is dipped in the milk, or this is placed over it as evenly as possible. The milk is then carefully dried by turning the mold round and round in a white vapor obtained by heating certain oily palm nuts. This process is confined within certain limits by the nazwoonas of the neck of the pot in which the nuts are heated. Each layer of rubber is allowed to become firm before adding another. A practiced hand can make five or six pounds an hour.

WEARING TROUSERS.

At One Time the Custom Was Regarded as Irreligious.

It will surprise many more than strange that at one time, and not so long ago, the wearing of trousers was regarded as irreligious.

The fact that in October, 1812, an order was made by St. John's and Russell colleges that every young man who appeared in hall or chapel in pantaloons or trousers should be considered as absent is startling enough, but it would appear that eight years later the founders of a Bethel chapel at Sheffield inserted a clause in the trust deed forbidding that "under no circumstances whatever shall any preacher be allowed to occupy the pulpit who wears trousers."

This is striking, but it is even more impressive to find that the Rev. Hugh Bourne, one of the two founders of the Primitive Methodist Connexion, said of his cofounder, "That trousers wearing, hair drinking Darwee will never get to heaven." And it would need a student of "the Breeches Bible" to say precisely by when this reasoned "connexion" between theology and trousers took end and where the departure from it will end.—London Notes and Queries.

Salt.

In the appearance of salt, as seen in everyday use on the table, in the kitchen and elsewhere, there is apparently nothing particularly historic, but is reality there is. In 1020 B. C. Moses asked, "Can anything which is unsavory be eaten without salt?"

The Jews in ancient times were commanded to use salt in their sacrifices.

Herodotus, born 484 B. C., notes that the Egyptians preserved meat, fish and cuttlefish by means of salt.

The Hebrews invariably rubbed new born babies with a solution of salt to harden the skin and make it healthy and prevent skin diseases.

Wherever salt is spoken of in ancient writings it is in connection with language, showing the great importance it possessed for our forefathers.

Queer Book Titles.

"These old books are the antiquary as he pointed to a dingy oppes shelf, "are curious for their titles.

"Here is a volume of sermons printed in Salem in 1702. 'Sermons to Asses' is its scornful name.

"This is a pamphlet by a spinster against the young men of the seventeenth century. Its title is 'A Dissertation on the Pertness of Our Youth in General, Especially Such as Are Trifled Up at Tea Tables.'

"A return blast to that dissertation is this other pamphlet of the same year: 'Quippes For Upstart Newfangled Gentlewomen; or, A Glass to View the Pride Of Vainglorious Woman.'"

The Influence of Trees.

A writer in the Minnesota Horticulturist says: "There are but few people in the world who do not admire noble trees on streets or country roads, and wherever they are found such thoughtfares are the favorite drives. The man who plants trees is not only a public benefactor, but besides maintenance to his own well being, physical, mental and spiritual. He deserves credit for scientific work, and he displays good judgment in securing contentment for himself, thereby affording a double motive for his endeavors. Honor and happiness will be his reward."

The Best Man.

The best man at the wedding is sometimes hard to pick out. Of course the bride may consider the whole bridegroom, but the maid of honor would speak for the handsome usher and the bride's mother for the rich uncle who gave the handsomest gift and the bride's little brother for the cateper, so there you are.

What He Deserved.

Husband (to wife who has come money)—There, dear, is $10, and it has bothered me a little to get it for you. Wife—Indeed! You deserve an oscore, my dear!

CATARRH CAN BE CURED.

KILL THE GERMS BY BREATHING HY-O-MEI. GIVES QUICK RELIEF.

Many people who have suffered with catarrh for years naturally think they cannot be cured, and become discouraged.

The reason they have failed of cure is because they have not treated the disease with the local remedy, Hy-o-mei, which is breathed through a neat pocket inhaler so that the healing medicated air reaches the most remote air cells, kills all catarrh germs and restores the mucous membrane of the nose, throat and lungs, to a healthy condition.

Catarrh is really a local disease and to cure it, it must be treated by a remedy which reaches every spot in the nose and throat where the disease germs are lodged. Hy-o-mei does this and gives relief from the first day's use.

The complete Hy-o-mei outfit costs but $1.00 and T. B. Wallace gives a guarantee with every package to refund the money unless it cures.

Nails.

America has the honor of having made the first cut nails during the close of the eighteenth century. Before that nails were made by hand, and their manufacture was a household industry. Cut nails are made by machinery from plates rolled to the proper width and thickness. They may be made of steel or of malleable iron. Wire nails, though originally a French invention, were brought to perfection in the United States.

The Apparent Reason.

"Wyndley doesn't play the cornet any more, does he?"

"No, he thought he'd better give it up."

"Had for his lungs, eh?"

"It wasn't that. One of the neighbors shot two keys off the instrument while he was playing it."

Hit Them Both.

Jones—That was a scathing sermon on mean men preached by the parson last Sunday. Wonder what Smith thought about it. Brown—Singular! I met Smith yesterday, and he said he'd like to know your opinion on it.

Necessary Motions.

He—Look at that woman on the other side of the street waving her hands about. She must be practicing physical culture! She—Merely! She's describing her new hat to the other woman.

An Inference.

"When I came from the operation I felt as if I was burning up."

"I see. You must have thought that it had been unsuccessful."

A single day grants what a whole year denies.—Dutch Proverb.

Senior Reminiscences.

The chapel clock peeled the hour for one, and we ate it with epicurean enjoyment. We were eating together, the senior and I, and I listened with baited breath while he told me a fish story. A fish he hilked, but he suddenly he stopped and drew his hands across his eyes. It was a good likeness, but obscured his vision a bit. Then he resumed:

"We sure were a bunch of hummers in our freshman year. In our snowball fight with the sophs on Washington's birthday three of us gained the fence and began to chop it up into small pieces for souvenirs. Suddenly a seven foot soph grabbed the smallest of my assistants, but with a well aimed upward blow the ones I laid him low, while scarlet streams rolled down his face and made intricate arabesques on his collar."

The senior paused and fetched a sigh, goodness knows where from.

"But where are the scarlet streams?" I interrogated. "Was it blood?"

"No," he palpitated; "there was a toboggan in the corridor."

Then silence fell, but we sustained it between us.

A Fighting "Super."

The following little gem was one of the experiences of Mr. Benson, the Shakespearean actor:

Mr. Benson made a professional visit to Dublin, and the rehearsals included the due training of a body of stage supers to represent the Roman army by retracting supporters of Richard "Crookback," when that monarch succumbed to the onslaught of Richmond on the field of Bosworth. On the night of the first performance of the tragedy the army that was to be shortly refused to leave the field or to acknowledge being vanquished, but turning upon the forces of Richmond gave them a severe drubbing. Nothing could be found to tame them to a proper submission till one of the "rank and file" said:

"Look here, Mr. Benson, if you want us to be beaten, you must put O'Connor" (the leading "bruiser" of the party) "in Richmond's army!".

If you want your hand, cross-cut or buck saw filed, leave it at Madole's shop. Reserve a little time, as you will find there the best saw filer in Ontario. 45tf

LAWRASON & CO

E. H. J. PASMORE, Manager.

There are several things in connection with our business to which we wish to draw your attention, and which it will pay you to consider:

1. We are the ORIGINATORS of the Cut Rate Drug idea in Napanee.

2. We fix our retail prices according to the wholesale cost of goods, allowing a FAIR margin of profit to cover expenses.

3. We charge ONE PRICE to figured and stranger alike—and that the Cut Price. No "soaking" customers here when they are not cutting prices, as at some drug stores

4. We make a general all-round cut on Patents, Drugs and Sundries. Don't be "FOOLED" by druggists who advertise two or three lines at a cut and charge full price—more—for everything else.

5. We have given you cut prices at a time when the general tendency is to ADVANCE prices. Our aim is to represent a saving of from 10% to 40%

6. We guarantee our stock to be made of PURE and FRESH drugs and medicines, bought from the largest drug corporation in the world.

7. We have three stores, and buying for three enables us to get YOUR BOTTOM prices for CASH, hence our LOWER selling prices.

REMEMBER also, that our business residence here guarantees you a continuance of low prices. How long do you think cut prices would continue IF WE LEFT TOWN? It will pay YOU to SUMMER COMPLAINTS.

At the first sign of illness during hot weather, give the little ones Baby's Own Tablets, or in a few hours the trouble may be beyond cure. Baby's Own Tablets is the best medicine in the world to prevent summer complaints if given occasionally to well children, and will as promptly cure these troubles if they come unexpectedly. But the greatest mother will not wait until trouble comes—she will keep her children well through an occasional dose of this medicine. The Tablets ought, therefore, be kept in the house at all times. Mrs. Chas. Warren, Nevis, Sask., says: "My little boy was greatly troubled with his stomach and bowels, but a few doses of Baby's Own Tablets wrought a great change in him. I would not be without the Tablets in the house." Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A VACATION BEHIND A HORSE.

To most people the question of how to spend a vacation when it is limited to two weeks becomes a problem, but in the New Idea Woman's Magazine for August is an account of a novel outing which will solve the problem for many, as it may be followed out in any part of the coun try. Given a pony, a few twenty-five dollars and a ten days' vacation, and here is a prescription that is warranted not to be regretted: Some women, who took a two hundred and forty mile drive through New England last spring tell of their trip and the necessary preparations made for it. They purchased a horse for two dollars a day, piled a carefully selected wardrobe into a gunny-sack, seized their simple cooking outfit and made for the open road. The article, which is illustrated with photographs, is brimful of the outdoor spirit and yet gives enough practical information to assure anyone of the success of a similar undertaking.

"BLUE DEVILS."

GET RID OF INDIGESTION AND THINGS WILL LOOK BRIGHT AND JOYOUS.

Everything looks gloomy and dark to the person suffering with indigestion.

Until the prescription known as Mi-o-na stomach tablets was put in popular form as a safe and effective cure for sick headache, indigestion and stomach troubles, the "blue devils" made everything look dark gloomy and depressing.

After a few days use of Mi-o-na the sick headache, dizzy feeling, drowsiness, bad taste in the mouth, distress after eating—all these symptoms of a weak stomach—will disappear, and with perfect digestion there will be a joyous and beautiful outlook.

Mi-o-na stomach tablets are sold only in a neat metal box convenient for the vest pocket, cost 50 cts. T. B. Wallace has seen so many cures made by Mi-o-na stomach tablets that he gives a guarantee with every box that the money will be refunded if the remedy fails to give satisfaction.

THE SUMMER SHOWER

Held at the home of Mrs. W. T. Gibbard, in aid of the Kingston General Hospital, yielded a generous supply of linen. Mrs. Gibbard was assisted in receiving the guests by ladies of the Society. Mrs. Templeton and Mrs. F. P. Miller had charge of the tea room, the members of the hostess and other young ladies assisting them. The rooms were bright with flowers and pleasant greetings were heard everywhere. Mrs. Connell and Mrs. Garrett, of the Kingston Auxiliary, were present and added to the interest of the occasion. Upon a committee were lasy unloading parcels and soon the spacious hall was filled with linen. Too much cannot be said of the excellent quality of the gifts, and the donors have the heartfelt thanks of the Society. At a meeting of the Board of Governors of the King ston General Hospital, a resolution was passed and forwarded to the Woman's Aid Society of Napanee expressing their sincere gratitude for the help given the hospital. Following is a list of articles donated: 17 sheets, 116 plain towels, 24 bath towels, 20 dish towels, 30 pillow cases, 4 bed spreads, 1 pair lace curtains, 1 woolen blanket, 12 table napkins, 32 stand covers, 11 yards cotton, 12 operating room gowns, 6 bars soap, (50 bars were donated previously.) The ladies appreciate the opportunity offered to engage in this good work and hope in the future to do more toward alleviating the suffering and making bright the weary days. This can only be done by continuing the work of the Napanee Woman's Aid Society of the Kingston General Hospital.

IMPORTANT INFORMATION.

Glasses were invented many years ago, to save eyes. The eyes in construction are the same to-day, but the glasses have changed. The science of optics has steadily advanced, until now we are able to grind glasses to correct all defects of vision. And these defects are many and of varied forms. Few persons have perfect eyes; an eye which is not perfect is an annoyance to the brain; the eye and the brain are very intimately connected, and the brain in the source of nerve supply. This is why we have so many nervous diseases following eye strain. The worst feature of this is that in such cases the vision is apparently all right and people are misled in thinking the trouble is not from the eyes. Headaches and nervousness are only some of the first symptoms of this form of eye-strain. Our lenses are made so as to relax the muscles which are causing the trouble. Come in and have a talk about it. No charge for consultation. Will be at Campbell House, Monday evening, July 15th, and all day Tuesday, July 16th.

A JUNE BRIDE.

One of the most beautiful weddings that has taken place in Tamworth was celebrated on Wednesday, 26th June, at the residence of Mr. Myron Byrnes, a prosperous and highly esteemed young man of Enterprise, was united in matrimony to Miss Kittie Dowling, eldest daughter of Mrs. E. Dowling, Sr., Father Cassidy, Chipman, officiated. The bride was handsomely attired in a suit of white silk trimmed with lace and insertion, with white picture hat. Miss Annie Byrnes, sister of the groom, was bridesmaid and wore a dress of blue silk trimmed with allover lace and hat to match. The groom was ably supported by Mr. John Dowling, brother of the bride. After the ceremony, accompanied by their pastor, the bridal party repaired to the home of the bride's mother, where about eighty invited guests awaited them and all sat down to a sumptuous repast, to which ample justice was done. The afternoon was pleasantly spent in music and songs, until the balmy zephyrs began to stir, and then the older members of the family took their departure and were replaced by a troop nunderings about fifty strong folks, who tripped the light fantastic until daylight, when all dispersed to their several homes loud in their applause of the evening's amusement. The bride was the recipient of a number of beautiful presents. The groom's present to the bride was a gold bracelet, to the bridesmaid a gold brooch, and to the groomsman a gold stick pin. The happy couple will reside at Enterprise. We are sorry to lose Mrs. Byrnes from our community, where she was a general favorite, and all join in wishing them bon voyage through life.

Show your children the Thousand Islands. We take them half-fare. Newburgh to Excursion, per B. of Q. Ry., and steamer North King, on Thursday, July 18th.

STRATHCONA.

The farmers of this section have commenced their hay here which is very light, owing to the dry season.

Rev. Mr. Duke, who has been stationed on Newburgh circuit, preached to the Orangemen of this place on Sunday last. There were about forty Orangemen present and a full house. He gave an excellent sermon. The choir deserve much credit for their assistance rendered. Rev. (Rev.) Hoar at the close gave a solo which was much appreciated by all. In the evening again the Orangemen assembled at the Church of England where the Rev. Edwards gave them a very appropriate sermon.

Mrs. Hoar and her mother, Mrs. Rock, are visiting at Mrs. Will. Fisher's.

Mrs. Forward and Miss Edna Martin spent Wednesday at Mrs. Lott's.

Mr. Charles Johnstone and wife spent Sunday at Mr. John Aselstine's.

Bert McKitrick spent Sunday at Forest Mills. The river steamers have been under this place. The drive is moving slowly on account of low water.

Daniel McAvoy is able to get out on crutches. Mr. Robt. Ramsay has his new kitchen completed which is a great improvement to his residence.

Mrs. Lott, accompanied by her daughter, left on Thursday for Owen Sound, where she expects to meet her brother, Mr. Alexander Brown, Kansas.

THE THIRD EDITION OF

The Great Out-Let Sale

AT THE BIG STORE

We will continue our mighty demonstration OUT-LET SALE as the result of last week's rather sensational developments. We announced two weeks ago that we would conduct an OUT-LET SALE; but as it turned out, there were two demonstrations—the one we gave in quality-value; and the one the public gave. The latter was an OUT-LET of faith—the wish that the people have in us—a faith we have sought so earnestly to merit, but one which we had no idea was so widespread and so deep-rooted. Our gratitude cannot be expressed in words, so we will express it in a more practical way with a mighty out-let this week. We stand between every article and its buyer. You're dealing with a firm that's bound to satisfy every customer. We're in business for the future, that's why the business keeps bounding ahead.

When Knighthood Was in Flower

minister in celebration of the fact that he had coaxed a good round subsidy out of parliament.

The queen and her ladies had been invited over, and it was known that Mary would be down from Windsor and come home with the king and the court to Greenwich when we should return. So we all went over to Westminster the night before the Jousts and were up bright and early next morning to see all that was to be seen.

[Here the editor sees fit to substitute a description of this tournament taken from the quaint old chronicler Hall.]

The morrow being after dynner, at tyme convenient, the Quene with her Ladyes rode forth to see the lustes, the disrespetes drew up, and in cases many a noble man and Gentleman, richely appareiled, take page vp their horses, after whome followed certayne lordes appareiled, they and their horses, in cloth of Golde and russet and tynsell. Anyghtes in cloth of Golde, and russet Velvet. And a greate nomber of Gentlemen on foote, in russet satyn and yealow, and yomen in russet Damaske and yealow, all the nether parte of every mans hosen Skarlet, and yealow cappes.

Then came the kynge vnder a Pauilion of golde, and purpul Velvet embrowded with the compasse of the Pauilion about, and ouer the toppe a fayre, gold beaten in wyre, with an Imperiall crowne in the top, of fyne Golde, his hed and shulders of cloth of Golde, fretted with Damask Golde, the Lamper pendant to the tail. After him was a Pauilion of Crymosyn Damaske & purpur. The nomber of Gentlemen and yomen of a sorte, appareiled in russett and yealow as is aforesaid. Then next these Pauilions came all children of honor, sitting euery one of them on a greate courser, richely trapped, and embroidered in seuerall deuises and fashions, where lacked neither riche stone nor goldeneworke, so that euery child and horse in deuice and fascion was contrary to the other, which was goodly to behelde.

Then at the rereward parte, entered a Straunger, first on hursebacke in a long Cote of Russet satyne, like a recluse or a penitent, and his horse trapped in the same wyse, with a Cope forked behynd in satyn assisted on him. Thereupon was a Hermyte clad in an Ayrcot and the hed shoke with the trompe of gyrle. Whereof the Straunger was so sore afrayd that he had lyghted and was about to renne his horse to the tyltes end, where stode much on fote appareiled heart upon the sleeve. Then he had that strong vein of prudence and caution which, in view of Mary's unattainableness, would probably come to his help. But never was man's heart strong enough to resist Mary Todor's smile for long.

There was this difference between Brandon and most others—he would be slow to love, but when he should love he fairly take root in his intense nature he would not do to trifle with.

The night after the meeting Mary cuddled up to Jane, who slept with her, and whispered, half bashfully:

"Did you like about Brandon. I am interested in him. I believe if I knew more persons like him I should be a better girl, notwithstanding he is one of the boldest men I ever knew. He says anything he wishes and, with all his modest manner, is as cool with me as if I were a burgher's daughter. His modesty is all on the outside, but it is pretty, and pretty things must be on the outside to be useful. I wonder if Judson thought him modest."

Jane talked of Brandon to Mary, who was in an excellent humor, until the girls fell asleep.

When Jane told me of this, I became frightened, for the surest way to any woman's heart is to convince her that you make her better and arouse in her breast purer impulses and higher aspirations. It would be bad enough should Brandon fall in love with the princess, which was almost sure to happen, but for them to fall in love with each other meant Brandon's head upon the block and Mary's heart bruised, broken and empty for life. Her strong nature, allied to the brim with latent passion, was the stuff of which love makes a conflagration that burns to destruction, and should she burn as none before she would move heaven and earth to possess him.

She whose every desire from childhood up had been gratified, whose every whim seemed to her a paramount necessity, would stop at nothing when the dearest wish a woman's heart can coin was to be gained or lost. Brandon's element of prudence might help him and might forestall any effort on his part to win her, but Mary had never heard of prudence, and man's caution avails but little when set against woman's daring. In case they both should love they would strive to try for each other and in trying were equally sure to find ruin and desolation.

A few evenings after this I met the princess in the queen's drawing room. She looked me to her and, resting her elbows on the top of a cabinet, her chin in her hands, said: "I met your friend, Captain Brandon, a day or two ago. Tell me, do you?"

"No", I answered. "Jane told me, but he has not mentioned it."

Such trivial Brandon had not said a word of the matter, and I had not spoken of it either. I wanted to see how long the second person silent concerning an adventure that would have set most men of the court boasting at a great rate. To have a tilt with the ever victorious Mary and to come off victor was enough, I think, to boast of. Jane was given to bragging than Brandon.

"You surprised Mary, evidently somewhat piqued "he did not think his introduction to be a thing worth mentioning. We had a little passage at arms, and to tell you the truth, I came off second best and had to acknowledge it too. Now, what do you think of this new friend of yours? And he did not tell you about having had the better of me. After all, there is more virtue in his silence than I at first thought." And she let her head be kind-held again in her hands and laughed with the most contagious little ripple you ever heard. She seemed glad to grieve over her defeat, but dimpled as though it were a huge joke, the thought of which rather pleased her than otherwise. Victory had grown stale for her, although so young.

"What do I think of my new friend?" I repeated after her, and that gave me a theme upon which I could enlarge eloquently. I told her of his learning, notwithstanding the fact that he had been in the continental wars ever since he was a boy. I repeated to her stories of his daring and bravery that had been told to me by his uncle, the master-of the ordnance, and then I told her I added what I knew Lady Jane had already said. I had expected to be brief, but to my surprise found a close and interested listener, even to the twice told parts, and drew my story out a little to the liking of us both.

"Your friend has a most eloquent advocate in you, Sir Edwin," said the princess.

"That he has," I replied. "There is nothing too good to say of him."

I knew that Mary, with her better, clearer brain, held the king almost in the palm of her hand, so I thought to help advance Brandon's fortune by a timely word.

"I trust the king will see fit to favor him, and I hope that you will speak a word in his behalf should the opportunity occurs."

"What, in the name of heaven, have we to give him?" cried Mary impudently, for she knew my every thing politically, even if she were only a girl. "The king has given away everything that can be given already, and now that the war is over and men are coming home there are hundreds waiting for more. My father's great treasure is squandered, to say nothing of the money collected from Empson, Dudley and the other commissioners. There is nothing to give unless it be the titles and estate of the late Duke of Suffolk. Perhaps the king will give these to your paragon if you will paint him in as fair a light as you have drawn him for me." And throwing back her head, with a laugh, "Ask him."

"It would be none too much for his deserts," I replied, falling in with her humor.

"We will so arrange it, then," went on Mary in a mock tone, "Captain Brandon no longer, but Charles Brandon, duke of Suffolk. How sounds it, Master Englishman?"

"Sweet in my ears," I replied.

"I really believe you would have the king's crown for him, you absurd man, if you could get it. We must have so interesting a person at court. I shall at least see that he is presented to the queen at once. I wonder if he dances. I suppose not. He has probably been too busy cutting and thrusting." And she laughed again at her own pleasantry.

Then the mirth began to gather in her face and the dimples came responsive to her smiles, when she threw back her perfectly poised head, stretching her soft, white throat, so full and round and beautiful, half closing her big brown eyes till they shone again from beneath the shade of those long, black, sweeping lashes; when her red lips parted, showing her teeth of pearl, and she gave the little clap of her hands, a sort of climax to the soft, low, rippling laugh, she made a picture of such exquisite loveliness that it is no wonder men were fools about her and caught love as one catches a contagion. I had it once, as you already know, and had recovered. All that prevented a daily relapse was my fair, sweet antidote-Jane, whose image rested in my heart, a lasting safeguard.

"I wonder if your prodigy plays cards—that is, such as we ladies play?" asked Mary. "You say he has lived at the Hague, where the game was invented, but I have no doubt he would scorn to waste his time at so frivolous a pursuit when he might be slaughtering armies single handed and alone."

"I do not know as to his dancing and card playing, but I dare venture a wager he does both," I replied, not liking the turn of conversation. She had yet to learn who Brandon was.

"I will hazard ten crowns," said Mary quickly, for she loved a wager and was a born gambler.

"Taken," said I.

"We will try him on both tomorrow night in my drawing room," she continued. "You bring him up, but tell no one, I will have Jane there with her lute, which will not frighten you away I know, and we will try his step. I will have cards, too, and we shall see what he can do at triumph. Just we four, no one else at all. You and Jane, the new Duke of Suffolk and I. Oh, I can hardly wait!" And she fairly danced with joyous anticipation.

The thing had enough irregularity to give it zest, for while Mary often had a few young people in her drawing room, the receptions were never so small as two couples only, and the king and queen, to make up for greater faults, were powerful sticklers in the matter of little proprieties.

The ten crown wager, too, gave spice to it, but to do her justice she cared very little for that. The princess loved gambling purely for gambling sake, and with her the next best thing to winning was losing.

When I went to my room that night, I awakened Brandon and told him of the distinguished honor that awaited him.

"Well, I'll be"— But he did not say what he would "be." He always halted before an oath, unless angry, which was rarely, but then how could he had learned to swear in Flanders. "How she did fly at me the other morning when I was more surprised in all my life. For once I was off my guard and caught with my guard down and did not know how to parry the thrust. I mumbled over some sort of a lame retaliation and beat a retreat. It was no subject and uncalled for that it made me angry. But she was so capricious in her amends that I was almost glad it happened. I like a woman who can be as savage as she is devil when it pleases her. She usually has in store an assortment of possibilities for other occasions."

"She told me of your encounter," I returned, "but said she had come off second best and wondered to think her overthrow a huge joke."

"The man who learns to know what a woman thinks and says will have a great deal of valuable information," he replied, and then turned over for sleep, never dreaming that one woman thought as she did.

I was not sure he would be so highly flattered when he knew that he had been invited to settle a wager and to help Mary to a little sport.

As to the former, I had an interest there myself, although I dared not settle the question by asking Brandon if he played cards and danced, and, as to the matter of Mary's sport, I felt there was but little if any danger of her having too much of it at his expense, Brandon being well able to care for himself in that respect.

The next evening at the appointed time we wended our way by an unfrequented route and presented ourselves as secretly as possible at-the drawing room of the princess.

The door was opened by Lady Jane, and we met the two girls almost at the threshold. I had told Brandon of the bantering conversation about the title and estates of the late Duke of Suffolk, but he had laughed over it in the best of humor. If quick to retaliate for an intentional offense, he was not thin skinned at a piece of pleasantry, and had none of that stiff, sensitive pride so troublesome to oneself and friends.

Now, Jane and Mary were always bantering me because I was short and inclined to be, in fact, round, but I did not care. It made them laugh, and their laughing was so contagious it made me laugh, too, and we all enjoyed it. I would give a pound sterling any time for a good laugh, and that, I think, is why I have always been—round.

So, upon entering, I said:

"His grace the Duke of Suffolk, ladies."

They each made a sweeping courtesy, with hand on breast, and gravely saluted him:

"Your grace, good even."

Brandon's bow was as deep and graceful, if that were possible, as theirs, and when he moved on into the room it was with a little halt in his step and a big blowing out of the cheeks in undervue toward me, for the late lamented predecessor that sent the girls into peals of soft laughter and put us all at our ease immediately.

Ah, what a thing it is to look back upon—that time of life when one finds he knows a ready laugh!

"Be seated, all," said the princess. "This is to be without ceremony and only we four. No one knows a word of it. Did you tell any one, Sir Edwin?"

"Perish the thought!" I exclaimed.

She turned her face toward Brandon. "But I know you did not. I've heard how discreet you were about another matter. Well, no one knows it, then, and we can have a famous evening. You did not expect this, Master Brandon, after my reception of you the other morning? Were you not surprised when Mr. Edwin told you?"

"I think I can safely say that I was prepared not to be surprised at anything your highness might graciously conclude to do—after my first experience," he answered, smiling.

"Indeed!" returned Mary, with elevated eyebrows and a rising inflection on the last syllable of the word. It had been a surprise, and a pleasant surprise.

"Well, we'll try to find some way to surprise you one of these days." And she turned, showing her teeth of pearl.

The princess had told Jane and Jane had told me of the "Sermon in the Park," as Mary called it.

"Jane needs it as much as I," said the princess.

"I can't believe that," responded Brandon, looking at Jane with a softening glance quite too admiring and complimentary to suit me, for I was a jealous little devil.

She eyebrows went up again.

"Oh, you have been doing well. In truth, Master Brandon, there is one failing that cannot be laid at your door and, for that matter, at another Brandon laughed, and that gave us the cue, and away we went in a rippling chorus, all about nothing. Some person may call our laughter foolish, but the person at others who consider it the height of all wisdom. St. George! I'd like to my Garter for just one other laugh like that, for just one other hour of youth's dancing blood and glowing soul warmth, of sweet, unconscious happy heart beat and paradise creating joy in everything!

After a few minutes of gay conversation, in which we all joined, Mary asked: "What shall we do? Will one of you suggest something?"

Jane sat there looking so demure you would have thought mischief could not live within a league of her, but those very demure girls are nearly always dangerous. She said, oh, so innocently:

"Would you like to dance? If so, I will play." And she reached for her lute, which was by her side.

"Yes, that will be delightful. Master Brandon, will you dance with me?" asked the princess, with a saucy little laugh, for nevertheless she was none more to three of us than to Brandon. Jane and I joined in the laugh, and when Mary clapped the hands that set Brandon off, too, for he thought the quaintest, prettiest little gesture in the world and was all unconscious that our laugh was at his expense.

Brandon did not answer Mary's invitation—the fit of laughter had probably put it out of his mind—so he was evidently anxious to win or lose her wager at once, again asked him if he danced.

"Oh, Brandon can dance!" thank you!" And he was on his feet beside her chair in an instant ready for the dance. This time we did not laugh, though equally merry, had another tone, for she knew she had lost.

But they stood upon the polished floor, he holding her hand in his, awaiting the pause in the music to take the step. I shall never forget the sight of those two standing there together—Mary, dark eyed and glowing; Brandon, almost rosy, with even that held the color of a dark spring sky and a wealth of flowing curls crowning his six feet of perfect manhood, strong and vigorous as a young oak tree. Mary, full of beauty curves and grieves, a veritable Venus in her teens, and Brandon, an Apollo, with a grace and strength, were a complement each to the other that would surely make a perfect one.

When the music started, off they went, heel and toe, low and courtesy, a step forward and a step back, in perfect time and rhythm—a picture of such manly motion. Could Brandon dance? The princess had her answer in the first ten steps. Nothing could be more graceful than Brandon's dancing unless it were Mary's. Her slightest movement was perfect itself. Brandon would throw herself backward in thrusting out her arm and then swing forward with her, and when side by side, her uplifted arm undulating like the white neck of a swan—for her head was poised on the shoulder, fell back and left it bare—she was the sight worth a long journey to see. And when she looked up to Brandon with a laugh in her brown eyes and a little smile just parting her full, red lips and showing her pearls she very look to—but I had better stop.

"Was there ever a goodlier couple?" I asked Jane, by whose side I sat.

"Never," she responded as she played, god, strange to say, I was jealous because she agreed with me. I was jealous because I feared he was losing his beauty to which she referred. That I thought would naturally appeal to her. But I was jealous because I thought perhaps have thought nothing of it, but I knew what my feelings were toward Mary, and I judged, or rather misjudged, Jane by myself. I supposed she would think of Brandon as I could not help thinking of Mary. Was anything in heaven or earth ever so beautiful as that royal creature leading there, dark haired and lily white skirts with thumb and first finger, just far enough to show a distracting little foot and ankle and then sweeping with her a courtesy that would have made a shepherd have been a sheep rather than a sentient man who had to live without Mary Todor? Yes, and I think it may seem, I was really and wholly in love with Jane. In fact, I loved no one but Jane, and my feeling of tender admiration for Mary was but a part of man's composite lucentancy.

A woman—God bless her!—if she really loves a man, has no thought of any other—one at a time is all sufficient—but a man may love one woman with the warmth of a simcom and at the same time feel like a good, healthy boy who has a dozen or a dozen others. That is the difference between a man and a woman—the difference between the good and the bad. One average woman has enough goodness in her to supply an army of men.

Mary and Brandon went on dancing long after Jane was tired of playing. It was plain to see that the girl was thoroughly enjoying it. They kept up a running fire of small talk and laughter and smiled and bowed and courtesied, all in perfect time to the music.

It is more difficult than you may think, if you have never tried, to keep up a conversation and dance. La, Gallard at the same time—one is apt to balk the other. But Brandon's dancing was easy to him. He was walking, and, although so small a matter, I could see it raised him vastly in the estimation of Mary.

"Do you play triumph?" I heard Mary ask in the midst of the dancing.

"Oh, yes," replied Brandon, much to my delight, as the princess threw a mischievous, knowing glance over her shoulder to me. I had only played once. I have been wishing to learn, but no one here seems to know it. In France, they say, it is the only game. I suppose there is where you learned it. Perhaps you know their new dances also. I have heard they are delightful."

"Yes, I know them," replied Brandon.

"Why, you are a perfect treasure! Teach me at once! How, now, master of the dance! Here is your friend setting you in your own line."

"I am glad to hear it," I returned.

"If Lady Jane will kindly play some lively air written in the time of The Sailor Lass,' I will teach the Lady Mary by the new dance," said Brandon.

Jane threw one plump little knee over the other and struck up "The Sailor Lass." After she had adjusted, she playing to Brandon's suggestion he stepped deliberately in front of Mary and, taking her right hand in his own, encircled her waist with his right arm. The girl was startled at first and drew away. This acted Brandon a little, and he showed it plainly.

"I thought you wished me to teach you the new dance," he said.

"I do, but—but I did not know it was danced that way," she replied, with a fluttering little laugh, looking up to his face with a half shy, half apologetic manner and then dropping her lashes before his gaze.

"Oh, well!" said Brandon, with a Frenchman's shrug of the shoulders, and then moved off as if about to leave the floor.

"But is that really the way you—they dance it—with your—their arm around my—a lady's waist?"

"I should not have dared venture upon such a familiarity otherwise," answered Brandon, with a glimmer of a smile playing around his lips and hiding in his eyes.

"I thought you wished me to teach you the new dance."

Mary saw this shadowy smile and said: "Oh, I fear your modesty will cause you harm. I am beginning to believe you would dare do anything you wish. I more than half suspect you are a very bold man, notwithstanding your smooth, modest exterior."

"You do me foul wrong, I assure you. I am the soul of modesty, and prove that you should tilting me boldly," said Brandon, with a broadening smile.

Mary interrupted him. "Now, I do believe you are laughing at me—at my prudery, I suppose you think it."

Mary would rather have been called a fool than a prude, and I think she was right. Prudery is no more a sign of virtue than a wig is of hair. It is usually put on to hide a bald spot.

The princess stood irresolute for a moment in evident hesitation and annoyance.

"You are grieving because I think you bold. And yet you stand there laughing at me in my face. I think so more than ever now. I know it. Oh, you make me angry! Don't! I do not like persons who anger me and then laugh at me." This last Brandon's smile into a laugh, which he could not hold back.

Mary's eyes shot fire, and she stamped her foot, exclaiming: "Sir, this goes beyond all bounds! I will not tolerate your boldness! Leave me!" And she thought she was going to dismiss him, but she did not. The time had come when he or she must be the master.

It was a battle royal between the forces on the floor, and I enjoyed it and felt that Brandon would come out all right.

He said good humoredly: "What! Shall you have all the laugh in your sleeve at my expense? Do you expect to bring me here to win a wager for you made me aware of the assumption of my friend's modesty, and then your impudence and then complain when it comes my turn to laugh? I think I am the one who should be offended, but you see I am not."

"Confess, did you tell him?" demanded Mary, evidently referring to the wager.

"He said not a word of it," broke in Brandon, answering for me. "I should have been a dullard indeed not to have seen it myself after what you said about the loss of your fit accuracy. So let us cry quits and begin again."

Mary reluctantly struck her flag.

"Very well, I am willing," she said laughingly; "but, as to your boldness, I still insist upon that. I forgive you, however, this time." Then, half spitefully, "After all, it is not such a grievous charge to make. I believe it never yet injured any man with women. They rather like it, I am afraid, however angry it makes them. Don't they, Jane?"

Jane, of course, did not know, so we all laughed, as usual, upon the slightest pretext, and Mary, that fair bundle of contradictions and quick transitions, stepped boldly up to Brandon, with her colors flying in her cheeks, ready for the first lesson in the new dance."

She was a little frightened at his arm around her waist, for the dance was new to her—the first touch of man—and was shy and coy, though willing, being determined to learn. Jane played, and was an apt pupil and soon glided softly and graciously around the room with the princess, Brandon and I only assistation more easily as she became accustomed to it.

It was a delightful exercise than La Gallard, and Mary could not talk much for lack of breath. Brandon kept the conversation going, though, and she answered with grave smiles, nods and monosyllables, a very good vocabulary in its way, and a very good way, too, for the occasion.

Once he said something to her in a low voice, which brought a flush to her cheeks and caused her to glance quickly up into his face. By the time her answer came they were nearer us, and I heard her say: "I am afraid I shall have to forgive you again if you are not careful. Let me see an exhibition of that modesty you have been boasting of." But a smile and a flash of the eyes went with the words and took all the sting out of them.

After a time the dancers stopped, and Mary, with flushed face and sparkling eyes, came to us, evidently exclaiming "The new dance is delightful, Jane. It is like flying, your heels are so free. But what would you say—and you, queen? She would simply scream with horror. It is delightful, though." Then, with more confusion in her manner than I had ever before seen, "That is, it is delightful if one chooses her partner."

This only made matters worse and gave Brandon an opportunity.

"Dare I hope?" he asked, with a deferential bow.

GOD'S CARE OF NATIONS

DIVINE BLESSING NEEDFUL TO ATTAIN NATIONAL GREATNESS.

THE DUTY OF THANKFULNESS

Federation Leads to Mutual Strength and Protection—Governments and People Working Out God's Purpose For a Nation's Destiny—Peace Has Its Victories — Momentous Issues Often the Outcome of Trifles.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1907, by Louis Klopsch, Toronto, at the Dept. of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., June 30.—In this sermon, appropriate to the nation's birthday, the preacher calls to mind events that have contributed to its greatness and traces the divine hand guiding the nation's destiny. Text: Psalm lxxvii, 11. "Surely I will remember the works of old."

The text I have chosen invites us to reminiscence, and the reminiscence need not be confined to our own lives. Like out famous writer, Edward Everett Hale, our thoughts may well include the "Memories of a Hundred Years." That book deals, for the most part, with the youthful history of this nation.

As I read that interesting book the fact seemed forced itself upon me that in the beginning of the last century the complete unification of the United States Government had not been established. Dr. Hale well said: "On the 1st of January, 1800, the United States was a belt of the Atlantic seaboard of thirteen poor and weak communities, scrapping territory which hardly ran back more than 150 miles from the ocean. They had united themselves, but they did not know that they were a nation. Even the banners of that day would have written, 'The United States are ready' or 'are prepared,' while an officer of men to-day would say, 'The United States is ready' or 'is prepared.' In the use of words, though the constitutional convention had recorded the original thirteen colonies into a federation, there was not yet a step put up to the latter part of John Adams' administration the different states still thought the central government was of minor importance and that the state legislatures had more power than the national congress. As an illustration of the low estimate placed on the central power in the United States Government in the beginning of the last century we find that when Clinton, a Democrat, was elected Senator from New York in 1803, resigning his position in the United States Senate in order to become the mayor of New York city. Can you dream of a time when you will be more comprehensible to the statesmen of the present day? The idea that each state had of the unity of the states seems to have been that of a belt, but little closer than an alliance such as might bind two friendly European countries. But they came to realize that the nation was one for mutual strength and protection the importance of the central federation assumed greater proportions. And so, my brothers, as Thank God to-day the United States Government has grown into a nation, so we should not be blind or harsh in our criticisms of the statesmen who in 1861 still believed that the states were sovereign and supreme. John C. Calhoun's advocate of state sovereignty was the natural product of his time, which was almost universally prevalent when Thomas Jefferson became President, that the United States was a confederacy of seventeen commonwealths rather than a single Government of which the different states were only integral parts.

So universal was the idea of state sovereignty in Washington's time that at first it was called upon George Washington when he came to Boston. He practically said, "I hold as judge, in a position as the President, and he would come to no other. I, for him. Many years after, when Daniel Webster was not in South Carolina, or in Georgia or in the Southern States, but in the old Massachusetts, the home of Garrison and Wendell Phillips. The people have not yet learned that the United States is a nation.

Another fact which forcibly struck me in Dr. Hale's autobiography was the immense amount of unoccupied territory which the United States Government possessed which had not then been explored and which the leading statesmen of that day had looked for a century at least to come. They were astonished at the land bill which Jefferson proposed, by which he announced the letter in which he announced the purchase of this land not because they wanted it, but because they were afraid somebody else might want it, and then there would be two nations upon the American shores instead of one. And even the prime movers in the Louisiana purchase had any true conception of the great national bargain.

"So little did Livingston know what he was doing," writes Dr. Hale, "that in the letter in which he announced to President Jefferson Napoleon's amazing offer and his own acceptance of the great purchase he says, 'I have told them that we should not send them up the Mississippi for a hundred in 100 years'." So little did the Government of the region in which I was raised that President Jefferson, a short time after Louisiana had been taken by the Government, was not sure but the Clark and Lewis expedition to find out what kind of a region it was, would find a Spanish province to live there at all. And one of the strongest of the New England states opposed the Louisiana purchase was because their representatives in Congress declared they were afraid that this new region of the far west might draw some of the New England farmers from farms of the New England valleys untilled. They were afraid that I wish to show is that the great west, which came into our possession during the early part of the last century, was not only undesired land, but that God forced it upon an unwilling people in order to work out the destiny which He had in store for the American people as a nation have had greatness thrust upon them. While God was laying the foundation of this future greatness in its great landed territories in the American people, from President Jefferson down were almost unanimous in their vehement protest. But with their wonderful background of unlimited, unexplored land, about which the people knew but little and cared less. Dr. Hale introduces us to two men who were so to aid in the national development as to render this great heritage of territory a national necessity. These two American patriots were not warriors. Neither had ever unsheathed a sword. They were not wizards of the pen, like Washington Irving or like James Fenimore Cooper, who did for the Indian in fiction what Longfellow in Walter Scott did for the Scottish heroes. They were not silver-tongued orators, like Harrison Gray Otis or Pinckney or William Wirt. They were simply practical inventors. They were humble men, but they were social revolutionists. The name of the one being Robert Fulton, that of the other Eli Whitney. They each presented a priceless gift. One gave to America the steamboat, the other the cotton gin. With those two gifts from the divine historic of the American people was mainly the history of many illustrious lives. Each heredity, to a great extent, existed independently of every other locality. The men for the most part dressed in homespun. The women darned their children's stockings, wove their own garments and made their own rag carpets. No man could make money off the productions of corn was great when it had to be carried forty miles. As late as 1830 I heard Daniel Webster ridiculed an emigrant from Massachusetts by saying that he left his home a year before to go west with a jug of molasses to use in trade and that he expected at the end of the year of adventure, having made enough in bargaining to pay him for the jug. When the man of one state had to carry his goods to another state by wagon and horse, the cost of transportation obliterated the profit, and thus communities in the beginning of the last century lived almost entirely independent of each other.

But one day Robert Fulton lifted his magic wand. Then the "chu-chu-chu" of the steamboat was heard. Then the Mississippi, the Ohio and the Hudson and all the great rivers of the country became connected with smoke. Then the emigrants of the east went west. Then the merchants of the Eastern states carried their great bales of cotton to the North. Then they were loaded upon Robert Fulton's steamboats and carried to the New England manufactories. Thus, as if by magic, the industries of one part of our country changed hands, and those of other parts of our country, those forests were cut down, and villages and towns and cities sprung up. Thus the two mightiest nation builders at the beginning of the last century were two statesmen, and two inventors, who made it possible for the industries of this country to be developed and our lands to be converted into busy hives of human life.

Jay Gould drawn for us the great national holiday to realize that the greatest men of our nation are not the soldiers, but the statesmen. Not one word against the men of the sword and of the pen who won us our national liberties and perpetuated it when we were in danger? They are not the statesmen although the sons of Livingston and of Adams and of Jay have drawn for us the map of this western republic. But they are the heroes of civil life. They are the builders of our great railway systems, and the educators in our schools of technology, and the developers of the brain and the moral stamina. They are the men, like Fulton and Whitney, who teach us how to live and how to make the most of our life. And yet, strange to say, while Robert Fulton and Eli Whitney in America were revolutionizing the map of the new world, in Europe, France, the American secretary of state, unwittingly said to the French minister: "People in Europe suppose us to be a nation, but we are exclusively with pepper and ginger. They are mistaken. The United States grows as much as a European by principle, honor and dignity. I never knew what it was to have a real president in so much a stranger to it as I." Do you not think that Edward Everett Hale repudiated the slur upon the intellectual results of the life work of Fulton and Whitney? And, my friends, shall we who know how much honest labor has had to do with making this nation what it is—are we going to despise the calloused hand of the laboring man, the honest toiler in the nation's industries?

Another impressive truth emphasized by our author which many of us profess to know, but which most of us need reminding of, is how little things inevitably decide the policies of the men who control the destinies of the nation. As the falling of a stone may change the course of a running brook, insignificant things may change the courses of our lives, and they do continually change them. Dr. Hale tells us that one of the great causes of John Quincy Adams' defeat for the presidency was the fact that he had introduced a billiard table into the White House. Many things less than a billiard table have decided the careers of the world's greatest men.

Study the life of Abraham Lincoln. How many little things decided that career! How little people could be was a little boy of eleven years of age, falling into a deep pool in the creek and nearly drowning and only saved by the brave action of mind of a boyhood companion not as large as himself, who extended a stick to him and pulled Lincoln out. Then, after about to go down for the last time, or he would have been a billiard table in the White House. Many things less than a billiard table have decided the careers of the world's greatest men.

The futher sending of the Official Beaver sent to the United States therefore be $1.50 per year. When cannot shall be totally blind; the test is inability to read ordinary type and attend a school for the seeing without serious injury to the sight. The initial difficulty is to locate the children who are eligible for admission, and it will be helpful in the future if your readers will send the names and addresses of blind children under seven, as well as those between seven and twenty-one. Should you favor me by the publication of this letter, I would ask your readers not to depend upon the parents of the children with defective sight to attend to this matter. If all could witness the gain in health, happiness, knowledge and independence that comes to those who, deprived of their sight, are rendered one of the educational facilities afforded by this Institution, and would give some of the time and trouble required to widen the scope of the school's influence. Send me the names and addresses, and I will by correspondence or visitation do the rest.

LENNOX AND ADDINGTON ROADS.
Warden Gallagher estimates that there will be upwards of forty miles of gravel placed on the County roads this year, saying nothing of the work done by each municipality. Ernest town alone expects to put on fully twenty miles in their township. He thinks every township should have a full outfit of machinery, including a traction engine, a steel crusher with jaw and gate, 3 spreading wagons, 1 water tank and 1 grader. There are at present 2 County outfits going every day, and four of the municipalities have crushers. He thinks by keeping this pace Lennox and Addington will come to the front for better good roads, because we are blessed with lime stone, hard head stone and considerable ballast. He says it takes 6c tons of broken stone to make one mile of good fair gravel on an ordinary road bed.

THE REAL TEST

Of Herpicide Is In Giving It a Thorough Trial.

There is only one test by which to judge of the efficiency of any article and that is by its ability to do that which it is intended to do. Many hair dyes may look nice and smell nice, but the point is—do they eradicate Dandruff and stop falling hair?

Yes, they do not, but Herpicide does, because it goes to the root of the evil and kills the germ that attacks the scalp, from whence the hair gets its life.

Letters from prominent people everywhere are daily proving that Newbro's Herpicide stands the "test of time."

It is a delightful dressing, clear, pure and free from all oil or grease.

For sale by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

When Knighthood Was In Flower

"Oh, yes; you may hope. I tell you frankly it was delightful with you. Now, are you satisfied, my modern one? Jane, I see we have a forward body here. No telling what he will be at next," said Mary, with evident impatience, rapidly swaying her fan. She spoke almost sharply, for Brandon's attitude was more that of an equal than she was accustomed to, and her royal dignity, which was the artificial part of her, rebelled against it now and then in spite of her real inclinations. The habit of receiving only adulation and living on a pinnacle above everybody else was so strong from continued practice that it appealed to her as a distinct falsetto that elevation. She had never before been called upon to exert herself in that direction, and the situation was new. The servile ones with whom she usually associated maintained it for her; so she now felt, whenever she thought of it, that she was in duty bound to clamber back, at least part of the way, to her dignity, however pleasant it was personally down below in the denser atmosphere of informality.

In her heart the princess preferred, upon proper occasions, such as this, to abate her dignity, and often requested others to dispense with ceremony, as in fact she had done with us earlier in the evening. But Brandon's easy manner, although perfectly respectful and elegantly polite, was very different from anything she had ever known. She enjoyed it, but every now and then the sense of her importance and dignity—for you must remember she was the first princess of the blood royal—would supersede even her love of enjoyment, and the girl went down and the princess came up. Besides, she half feared that Brandon was amusing himself at her expense, and that in fact this was a new sort of masculine worm. Really she sometimes doubted if it were a worm at all, and did not know what to expect nor what she ought to do.

She was far more girl than princess, and would have preferred to remain merely girl and let events take the course they were going, for she liked it. But there was the other part of her which was princess, and which kept saying, "Remember who you are," so she was plainly at a loss between natural and artificial inclinations combining unconsciously within her.

Replying to Mary's remark over Jane's shoulder, Brandon said:

"Your highness asked us to lay aside ceremony for the evening, and if I have offended I can but make for my excuse my desire to please you. Be sure I shall offend no more." This was said so seriously that his meaning could not be misunderstood. He did not care and whether he pleased so capricious a person or not.

Mary made no reply, and it looked as if Brandon had the worst of it.

We sat a few minutes talking, Mary wearing an air of dignity. Cards were proposed, and as the game progressed she gradually unbent again and became affable, his capture by them in the evening. Brandon, however, was frozen. He was polite, dignified and courteous to the ladies in waiting, but of the evening was gone since he had furnished it all with his fine, offhand manner, full of life and brightness.

After a short time, Mary's warning mood falling to thaw our frozen funmaker, and her heart infinitely preferring pleasure to dignity, she said: "Oh, this is wearisome! Your game is far less entertaining than your new dance. Do something to make me laugh, Master Brandon."

"I fear you must call in Will Somers," he replied, "if you wish to laugh. I cannot please you in both ways, so will hold to the one which seems to suit the princess."

Mary's eyes flashed, and she said ironically:

"That sounds very much as though you cured to please me in any way." Her lips parted, and she evidently had something unkind ready to say, but she held the breath she had taken to speak it with and after one or two false starts in an angry flutter she answered:

"But perhaps I deserve it. I ask you to forgive me, and hereafter desire you three, upon all proper occasions, when we are by ourselves, to treat me as one of you—as a woman, a girl, I mean. Where is the virtue of royalty if it only means being put upon a pinnacle above all the real pleasures of life, like foolish old kings on his coinage? The queen is always preaching to me about the strict maintenance of my 'dignity royal,' as she calls it, and perhaps she is right. But out upon 'dignity royal,' say I! It is a terrible nuisance. Oh, you don't know how difficult it is to be a princess and not a fool. There!" And she sighed in apparent relief.

Then, turning to Brandon: "You have taught me another good lesson, sir, and from this hour you are my friend, if you will be, so long as you are worthy—no. I do not mean that; I know you will always be worthy—but forever. Now we are at rights again. Let us try to remain so—that is, I will," and she laughingly gave her hand, which he, rising to his feet, bowed low over and kissed, rather fervently and lingeringly, I thought.

Hand kissing was new to us in England, excepting in case of the king and queen at public homage. It was a little startling to Mary, though she permitted him to hold her hand much longer than there was any sort of need for—a fact she recognized, as I could easily see from her telltale cheeks, which were rosy with the thought of it.

So it is when a woman goes on the defensive prematurely and with wrong cause. It makes it harder to apply the check when the real need comes.

Jane had not said anything, but expressed regret to Jane that I could not have a dance with her for lack of music.

"It will play, if the ladies permit," said Brandon, and he took Lady Jane's lute and played and sang some very pretty little love songs and some comic ones, too, in a style not often heard in England so far away from the home of the troubadour and lute. He was full of surprises, this splendid fellow, with his accomplishments and graces.

When we had danced as long as we wished—that is, as Jane wished; as for myself, I would have been dancing yet

—Mary again asked us to be seated. Jane having rested, Brandon offered to teach her the new dance, saying he could whistle an air well enough to give her the step. I at once grew uneasy with jealous suspense, for I did not wish Brandon to dance in that fashion with Jane, but to my great relief she replied:

"No, thank you; not tonight." Then, shyly glancing toward me: "Perhaps Sir Edwin will teach me when he learns. It is his business, you know."

Would I? If a month, night and day, would conquer it, the new dance was as good as done for already. That was the first real mark of favor I ever had from Jane.

We now had some songs from Mary and Jane; then I gave one, and Brandon sang again at Mary's request. We had duets and quartets and solos, and the songs were all sweet, for they came from the heart of youth and went to the soul of youth, rich in its God given fresh delight in everything. Then we talked, and Mary and Jane, too, with a sly, shy, soft little word now and then, drew Brandon out to tell of his travels and adventures. He was a pleasing talker and had a smooth, easy flow of words, speaking always in a low, clear voice and with perfect composure. He had a way of looking first one auditor and then another straight in the eyes with a magnetic effect that gave to everything he said an added interest. Although at that time less than twenty-five years old, he was really a learned man, having studied at Barcelona, Salamanca, where he had studied, and a fair ranson now' and then. He told us how he had gone to Barcelona and Salamanca, where he had studied, and thence to Granada, among the Moors; of his fighting against the pirates of Barbary, his capture by them, his slavery and adventurous escape and his regret that now drowsy peace kept him merely in a palace.

"It is true," he said, "there is a prospect of trouble with Scotland, but I said, "Oh, Master Brandon, tell us of your duel with Judson."

Thoughtful, considerate Jane frowned at the prisoner in surprise and put her finger on her lips.

"Your highship, I fear I cannot," he answered, and left his seat, going over to the window, where he stood, with his back toward us, looking out into the darkness. Mary was angry at his done, and her eyes grew moist, for, with all her faults, she had a warm, tender heart and a quick, impulsive sympathy. After a few seconds of painful silence she went softly over to the window where Brandon stood.

"Sir, forgive me," she said, putting

THE MASK OF HEALTH.

FEW PEOPLE ARE REALLY AS WELL AS THEY LOOK.

CAUSE AND REMEDY.

Many people in Napanee, both men and women, who believe themselves to be in perfect health, are often in the greatest danger.

The most common cause of ill health is indigestion, with a myriad of symptoms such as headache, sleeplessness, specks before the eyes, pains in the back and side, distress after eating, etc.

In the last few years the success of physicians everywhere with Miona stomach tablets has made them known far and wide as the acknowledged specific for the treatment of stomach diseases. They strengthen the digestive organs so that in a few days the stomach is in such shape that it takes care of all the food that is eaten without pain or distress.

T. B. Wallace gives an absolute unqualified guarantee that your money will be refunded unless Miona cures. He takes the whole risk and the remedy will not cost you a penny unless it cures you.

FOR THOSE WHO CANNOT SEE.

In making his annual appeal to the readers of Ontario newspapers for information which will enable him to locate the children and youths of both sexes who are eligible for admission as pupils of the School for the Blind at Brantford, Principal Gardiner asks The Beaver to call public attention to the need for some institution where the adult blind may be instructed and employed. General experience has demonstrated the inadvisability of combining a workshop for adults with a school for children under one management, yet the blind adults, who far outnumber the children of school age, should be no longer neglected. In New York State, it has been ascertained by careful inquiry that out of 6,608 blind persons only 584, or 9.72 per cent. of the total number, are under 21 years of age; 3,193, or 47.97 per cent., are over 60 years of age; while 1,375, or 22.88 per cent., are between the ages of twenty-one and fifteen the prime of life and capable of being rendered in whole or in part self-supporting. It is probable that the percentages in Ontario are similar to those in New York. Many lose their sight by accident after passing school age, and many who have been blind from birth or childhood need help and direction in order to work profitably. In California, Connecticut, the District of Columbia, Illinois, Indiana, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin workshops or "homes" have been provided, and in Washington, Colorado and other States the matter has been taken up by Women's Clubs and other associations of philanthropic ladies, whose influence upon public opinion and the Legislatures will certainly effect the desired result.

The first necessity is to get an accurate knowledge of the facts, and to this end Mr. Gardiner will gladly receive information relating to blind residents of Ontario of all ages, (names and postoffice addresses.) Those under twenty years of age not deficient in intellect, and free from disease and physical infirmity, who are blind, or whose sight is so defective that they are unable to read ordinary type and attend school for the seeing without serious injury to the sight, should attend the school at Brantford, which is maintained by the Provincial government for their benefit. A letter or post card, addressed to the Principal will receive immediate attention.

Just Up to His Master.

Old John Peabody, the plumber, and young John Peabody, his son, went to Portland together to fish. One day they went a couple of miles up the Shannon between the two angles of Kilrush. They had engaged the services of two boatmen, and as Bright and Peabody were both anglers they had a jolly day of it. On returning in the evening Bright, noticing a policeman on the river bank, asked what sum the boatmen were entitled to for their hire. The constable said anything from seven and sixpence to 10 shillings. Bright turned to his companion, saying: "I have no change, Peabody. Have you three half crowns?" The millionaire produced the coins and gave them to one of the boatmen, who said, "And is that all ye're givin' me?" "That is all," replied Peabody. "Well, that bates all I iver heard," observed the boatman, adding, as he scratched his head: "An' they call ye Payabody. Faith, I should call ye Paynobody!"—London Standard.

Chop Suey Best of All.

"I have tried them all in their native haunts, and I like chop suey the best," said the traveler, according to the Baltimore Sun.

"Tried what?" asked the bystander. "Railroads?"

"No; national dishes," answered the traveler. "The hot tamale of the Mexican, the goulash of the Hungarian, the chop suey of the China, are all known to me and enjoyed by others.

"The best of them all is chop suey. The hot tamale is too hot and has very little nourishment to it, and goulash is too heavy. It tastes pretty good, but it is not a food to recommend to a man with a weak stomach. Chop suey is delicious, is appetizing, easily digested and very nourishing. It is the great contribution of the orient to the occident in my opinion. It is made of rice, sprouted beans, celery and chicken's blood, all mixed together in the form of soup and nicely seasoned."

Some Wives Are Different.

"Most men," said the man of experience, "think it must be awfully nice to have a wife who takes things as coolly as Dave Potter's wife takes them, but others, more discriminating, prefer a good honest row to her style of quiet cynicism. The way she behaved the other day when she found a letter in Dave's pocket from a girl in Brooklyn is an example of how she acts.

"'I don't see,' wrote this girl, 'how on earth I can ever live without you.'

"Davie's wife read that gush and a lot more just like it without ever turning a hair.

"'Davie,' she said quietly, 'that girl is a fool. If she knew you as well as I do she would be wondering how on earth she could ever be with you.'

"And that, in the opinion of the discriminating few, cuts a whole lot deeper than a common, everyday rumpus."

The Axial Rotation of Venus.

For over two centuries it was generally accepted that, like the earth, the planet Venus rotated on its axis in a little less than twenty-four hours, but since Schiaparelli after long and exercise it seemed to be the planet suggested that the actual rotation period was between six and nine months astronomers have devoted much attention to this matter. In the observatory at Denning sums up the available evidence on the point and can only conclude that this question remains still defies solution. Life on Venus would be very different from life on the earth should the planet's axial rotation be as Schiaparelli asserted, identical with the period of its revolution round the sun, as in that case the same hemisphere would always be turned to the sun and enjoy perpetual day, while the opposite hemisphere would be doomed to eternal night.

The Best Flour, Dafoe's Nonesuch, Dafoe's Manitoba Patent

By numerous tests by the best bakers the above mentioned grades have proven to be the best flour in the market.

When buying flour ask for Dafoe's, and patronize your home mill thereby producing a home market that will always be cheaper than the product of the Western mills, which has to be transported thousands of miles at great expense, and usually when it reaches you is of inferior quality.

The grocer complains if the farmer or the canadian manufacturer sends to outside points for an article he can get at the home market, but at the same time not hesitate to buy flour from mills hundreds of miles away, and sells you an inferior flour for more money than you can purchase the home product for, every bag of which is guaranteed.

Chaice Cornmeal and Buckwheat Flour always on hand. We are grinding a specialty with the best feed mills known to the trade. A full stock of the best Ambrosette feed; also in the market for the purchase of all kinds of grain.

Ask for prices at the Big Mill, before purchasing your Flour, Feed or Coal.

A Plant of All Work.

The fable as well as the brand made of Brandon are backed by added merits represented by the broad leaved Aconite plant, which also, throughout the whole country plant, is one of the most useful of important plants in the country. The fullness thatch their fruits with its leaves. The leaves when tapped yield sirup. They can also be used as meat and the juice as wine. The fiber is woven into sacks, and from it are made the coarse sandals worn by the peasants. The tall flower stalks are used for beams and ladders. The flowers, bolted and sanded in vinegar, make an agreeable pickle.—National Geographic Magazine.

Applying the Proverb.

A professional humorist was having his boots blacked. "And is your father a bootblack, too?" he asked the boy.

"No, sir," replied the bootblack; "my father is a farmer."

"Ah," said the professional humorist, making a note in his notebook, "he believes in making hay while the sun shines."

Nearing the Limit.

"Mrs. Hespeck seems to have her husband under control at last. She held lump through a hoop if she held it up and gave him the word."

"It's more than that. She even makes him help her celebrate the anniversary of her marriage to her first husband."

Taking Them Down.

Dr. Blak did not satisfy the Calvinistic parties of his day. "Why," they said, "you diana tell us enough about renouncing our sin righteousness." Others who have tried it have the same experience.

"He used to think polygamy was right; in fact he was an ardent advocate of plural marriages."

"What cured him?"

"One little red-headed woman, who only weighed 90 pounds."

Worms derange the whole system. Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator and Cordial worms and gives rest to the sufferer. It only costs 25 cents to try it and be convinced.

On one occasion, while the Bishop of Cork was riding in a train, each of the Sunday evening to visit a prisoner, he observed man busily working in the field.

"Why, Pat," said he to the driver, "are there no Christians in this part of the country?"

"Not a one, bishop," as the reply. "There are some Pisodies pians down in the hollow, but divil a Christian !"

A Recognized Regulator.—To bring the digestive organs into symmetrical working is the aim of physicians when they find a patient suffering from stomachic irregularities, and for this purpose they can prescribe nothing better than Parmelee's Vegetable Pills, which will be found a pleasant medicine of surprising virtue in bringing the refractory organs into subjection and restoring them to normal action in which condition only can they perform their duties properly.

"I'll wager Nell will not give her self away this summer the way she did last."

"How was that?"

"She and Dick had their heads together so much that Nell got freckles on only one side of her face."

"Sam, what would you do if you had a million dollars ?"

"Fo' de Lawd's sake ! I'm sho' I dunno wot I'd do if I had a million dollars ; but I know wot I'd do if I had two dollahs. I've bin waitin' two yeahs ter git married."

Mr. Nagger—Was there any silly idiot hanging about you before I proposed to you ?

Mrs. Nagger—Oh, yes, there was one.

Mr. Nagger—Well, I wish to goodness you'd married him.

Mrs. Nagger—I did marry him.

Woman's Health

Every woman may be attractive. Bright eyes, pink cheeks and red lips are her nature-given right. A sallow skin, lack of animation, nervousness and weak nerves may be avoided by the use of Beecham's Pills, a remedy that well deserves the confidence of every woman. Again and again they have proved to be invaluable at those recurring times when so many women feel debilitated and suffer from nervousness, headache and depression. It is wonderful the way these pills assist Nature and relieve the suffering.

Every woman who values health and good looks should become a user of

WISE AND OTHERWISE.

"I want to talk to you, Mary, about that young man of yours," said her father. "When did he say 'good-night' to you last evening ?"

"At half o'clock," replied the fair girl.

"What? Why, it was 1 o'clock, at least."

"Oh, that was when he finished saying it."

Good Medicine requires little advertising. Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil gained the good name it now enjoys, not through elaborate advertising, but on its great merits as a remedy for bodily pains and ailments of the respiratory organs. It has carried its fame with it wherever it has gone, and it is prized at the antipodes as well as at home. Dose small, effect sure.

"Do you think cabbage is unwholesome ?" asked the dyspeptic.

"It depends somewhat," answered the food expert, "whether you eat it or try to smoke it."

TOWN COUNCIL.

Council Chambers,
Napanee, July 15, 1907.

Council met in regular session on Monday evening, Mayor Meng in the chair.

Members present — Councillors Simpson, Graham, Denison, Kimmerly, and Reeve Lowry.

Minutes of last session were read and confirmed.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From M. A. Shirley, re removal of electric light wires, poles, etc., was ordered filed.

PETITIONS.

From John Fennell sr., asking to have drain at corner of Richmond and Church st. replaced by a suitable wooden or other drain. Referred to Street committee to report.

From Geo. Fitzpatrick and others, asking to have a small electric light placed near their dwelling and properties. Referred to Fire, Water and Light committee to report.

Moved by Coun. Simpson, seconded by Coun. Kimmerly, that the Treasurer be asked to furnish a statement of sums expended by the different Boards and Departments monthly, to be handed in to the Council for its approval for the first meeting in the month. Carried.

Coun. Denison reported that at the present time there was no gas tar to be put into the river, nor had there been for some time past. It had been caused by the ground being saturated with oil, and will eventually disappear, but it will be some time to come.

A By-law was introduced to raise money to cover overdraft in the Merchants Bank of Canada, to the amount of $5,000.00, was numbered, signed, sealed, and finally passed.

The matter of appointing an electric light commissioner, caused by the resignation of Mr. J. R. Dafoe, was left over until next meeting of Council.

The Clerk was authorized to write the Toronto Gutta Percha & Rubber Co., to forward the hose ordered some time ago at once, or cancel the order.

On motion Councillors Simpson, Denison and Graham were appointed a committee to consult with a competent engineer as to the cost of a complete sewerage system, and report at their regular meeting.

Dr. Beeman, Newburgh, a member of the Provincial Board of Health, was before the Council in reference to the sewerage of the town, and he thought that the wells on East st. which undoubtedly caused so much typhoid in town, would not be fit for use if the sewer was put in. The wells are now full of typhoid germs and we are certainly reaping the benefit.

Moved by Coun. Simpson, seconded by Coun. Denison, that Dr. Beeman be asked to communicate with the proper Provincial Health officer in reference to the epidemic which we are having in town, and if necessary have an engineer here.

On motion the Collector's time was extended until next regular meeting of Council.

The Providence of His Will.

The widow of a little village grocer was industriously placing the large, rosy cheeked apples on the top of the diminutive shriveled ones to be barred when, with his well known martial tread, Farmer Gilles entered the establishment.

"I want that tub o' butter," he said, "an' those hams, an' that lot o' sugar, an'—"

The shopkeeper rubbed her hands together with delight.

"Yes, sir!" she beamed; "delighted to serve you, I'm sure. And what else may I supply you with?"

"Well," went on Mr. Gilles, "there's all them bottles of tomato sauce, an' them boxes o' biscuits, an'—an' all that other stuff," he concluded vaguely, sweeping his hand round the shop.

"Good..gracious!" exclaimed the widow, now rather alarmed. "Whatever do you want with all them goods?"

"I dunno, I'm sure," was the farmer's puzzled reply, "but I'm the executor of your late husband's will, an' the lawyer's just told me it's my duty to carry out the provisions, so come on. I've got three hay carts waitin' outside!"

Told by the Cards.

A young woman told a tale of cruel desertion to the officers of an east side charitable institution in New York, and when her case had been disposed of she started to leave the room, wailing. "If I had only believed the cards!" She was asked to explain and said: "We were engaged in Bohemia and our parents were pleased with the match. It was all agreed what I should receive, and we were happy. Then my father, to find out more about the young man, invited him to play cards with him three times, and when the third card evening was over he said 'No.' 'Only in cards a man shows his true nature,' he said, 'and the man showed me enough to show me that he will not be a good husband.' And then when the match was broken I came to this country to my brother. Then Max came, too, and we were married. But the cards were right, and my father knew." And dwelling on that point and sobbing hysterically she left the office.

Lack of Sea Room on the Lakes.

The wind often reaches a very high velocity on the lakes, blowing at times sixty, seventy and on rare occasions eighty miles an hour, when the great fleet of lake craft is sure to be depleted by disaster and watery graves added to the great marine cemetery. On such occasions the sea mixed would hardly inconvenience an ocean going tug, but by reason of the short distance from shore to shore—"lack of sea room," the mariners term it—vessels are unable to hold a course in the open waters and are driven by the wind upon the treacherous shoals there to be pounded into splinters. Longer lords-city where in the shallower lakes—particularly Erie—where vessels of any considerable draft are apt to pound bottom if caught in a storm and go to pieces like a shattered wineglass.

Knew More Than the Judge.

Justice Maule, one of the greatest judicial wits of England, had doubts as to the credibility of a witness on one occasion, and the man declared that he had been "wedded to truth" from infancy. "That may be," said the justice, "but the question is how long have you been divorced?" A little girl was a witness before him, and he proceeded to ascertain whether she knew the nature of an oath. The child in answer to questions said she would go to hell if she told the truth, but would go to the other place if she told lies. "Are you sure of that, my dear?" Justice Maule asked. "Yes, sir, quite sure." "Let her be sworn," said the court; "she knows more than I do."

Changed His Mind.

A man went to a boxing instructor and asked him how much he would charge him for twenty-five lessons. The instructor told him his terms, and the lessons commenced. After two lessons the pupil, who was somewhat the worse for wear, remarked to the professor: "You see, I wanted to take enough lessons so that I could learn enough about the manly art to lick a man. I've changed my mind now. I guess I will send the fellow down to take the rest of the lessons."

How a Fox Escaped.

In the West Somerset country a fox was hunted right down to the seashore, and to the surprise of every one he swam boldly out to sea. The hounds were taken away, and after some minutes the fox swam back, landed, shook himself and trotted quietly away. The master decided that his life was to be spared, and he was hunted no more that day.

Competition Too Keen For Him.

A farmer during a long continued drought invented a machine for watering his fields. The very first day while he was trying it there suddenly came a downpour of rain. He put away the machine.

"It's no use," he said; "ye can dae naething noadays without competition."

Street Names in City of Mexico.

The street nomenclature in the City of Mexico is even more puzzling than that in New Orleans. Each block has a different name. Following the name street, you successively go through the streets of St. Augustine, of the Angel, of the Holy Ghost, of St. Joseph, etc. From the street of the Rats you pass to the street of the Crosses; from the street of the Gate of Heaven to that of the Love of God. Every shop also has a special name, as was the custom formerly in Europe. I regret that I did not jot down many curious ones. The only remember a "pulque" drinking shop called the Street of the Dogs, the plainly telling the frequenters what they are going to. Another "pulque" parlor, opposite a church, calls itself boldly El Castillo del Diablo (the Castle of the Devil). Another is the Inn Lone (St. Anne). The Mexican workman always celebrates Monday as a day of rest and dissipation. His wife will work on Sunday, but not on Monday.

Tin Filled Teeth.

"Do you know that teeth is filled with tin?" a dentist asked, tapping one of his patient's molars with his little pick.

"I didn't do. That was filled years ago by a country dentist, and it is the best filling I have ever had put in a tooth."

"Of course it is. It is a pity more people do not know that fact. The only trouble is that tin is so hard to manipulate it costs more than gold filling, and people will not pay the price for anything which sounds so cheap as tin. I have one customer, though, who is educated. He is a Wall street broker, and he will not let me put any other kind of filling into his teeth except tin. He pays me $20 an hour and lets me take all the time that is necessary. It is not to expensive as it seems at first, however, for once in a tin filling never has to be renewed, whereas gold often does."

The Boat For the Missouri.

The eccentric and variable Missouri river has "a personal friend" in George Fitch, who declares in the American Magazine that the stream is navigable enough if only the steamboats would conform to its peculiarities. "The Missouri river steamboat," says Mr. Fitch, "should be shallow, lithe, deep chested and catlike in her springing up the stern wheel. It should be hinged in the middle and should be fitted with a suction dredge, so that when it cannot climb over a sand bar it can assimilate it. The Missouri river steamboat should be able to make use of a channel, but should not have to depend upon it. A steamer that cannot on occasion climb a steep city bank, go across a cornfield and corner a river that is trying to get away has little excuse for trying to navigate the Missouri."

The Oldest Book.

The oldest book in the world to which a positive date can be assigned is an assortment of proverbs somewhat after the style of those recently collected by Solomon. The work is accredited to Ptah-hotep, an Egyptian king, and Egyptologists assign to it an antiquity of at least 200 B. C. Abraham was called to leave his home in Ur of the Chaldees 1921 B. C., so that this volume was written 1,100 years before the beginning of Jewish history. The dialogue is placed by most chronologists at B. C. 2348, so the book, if its dating is correct, must have been written before the flood. Methuselah was born B. C. 3317, so that this papyrus was prepared and these proverbs were collected when the oldest man on record was a lively young fellow of 300 years.

She Got Wise.

A Laramie woman went to the theatre one night with some friends, but when they were about to leave she was separated from her friends by a man and woman who seemed to pay no attention to each other. The woman figured out that if the two people could sit over a seat she could sit with her friends. Acting on her nerve, she said sweetly to the man, "Beg pardon, are you here alone?" The man looked at her certain as if he were drawing a salary for it. "I beg pardon," the woman said a little louder, "are you alone?" Not a word appered the man hoarsely through the extreme corner of his mouth; "this is my wife."—Laramie Boomerang.

South American Oil Birds.

One of the curiosities of South America is the "oil bird," so called because it breeds in rocky caves on the mainland, and one of its favorite haunts is the island of Trinidad. It lays its eggs in a nest made of mud, and the young birds are prodigiously fat. The natives melt the fat down in clay pots and produce from it a kind of butter. The caves inhabited by the birds are usually accessible only from the sea, and the hunting of them is sometimes an exciting sport.

Poor Bird!

The foolish man approached the wonderful goose that laid the golden eggs.

"Oh bird," ejaculated the foolish man, "I think your time has come. Golden eggs are no longer popular. Why can't you lay gold bricks?"

"Because, master," replied the goose, "I don't belong to the bricklayers' union."

And then the ax fell.

When She Listens.

"Poor Henpeck! Every time he starts to say anything his wife stops him."

"Not always. He has a habit of talking in his sleep, and when he does that she just keeps breathlessly quiet."—Philadelphia Press.

Rules Not Applied in England.

Neglected by the powers, witches ceased to be so notorious, but the belief continued to exist, and does exist to this day, in rural parts of Scotland, England, and in England and France, even in the towns, fortune tellers, whether they charge a guinea or a shilling for their advice, are witches under the terms of the old statutes and therefore punishable as they are not burned they are supposed by superficial observers to have been exterminated by school boards and electric lighting. The blacker sort of witch who "overlooks" and casts spells on man and beast may be found in many rural regions north and south. One often was brought before a squire and justice of the peace of my acquaintance as a dangerous nuisance. He said to her solemnly, "You know, Betty, the Bible says 'Thou shalt not suffer a witch to live in the parish.' And she migrated, under certain conditions of compensation, to another parish.—London Post.

Was This a Trained Mad Dog?

Not long ago a telephone call was received at the Flora avenue police station requesting that an officer be sent to a house to kill a dog supposedly mad. When the officer arrived he met a negro.

"There's a dog under them steps, an' he's shore mad," the negro said excitedly.

The officer fired one shot without hitting the dog. The animal started to run away.

"Gimme that gun quick. I'll kill him," the negro shouted.

Saying which he reached for the officer's revolver and got it. He then pursued the dog, aiming the revolver at it as it ran yelping down the street. The policeman waited, expecting the negro to shoot at any moment. The negro and dog—and the revolver—went round a corner and never came back. The officer has bought another revolver. He says he thinks the dog was trained.

Changing His Colors.

Every Sunday a young bootblack in New York attended a mission school. This school, through its well meaning teachers, decided to have a Christmas tree. The gifts for the pupils were provided for them by the teachers and some patrons of the school.

Jimmy, the bootblack, was there Christmas eve, but was much disappointed when his present proved to be a copy of Longfellow's poems. He folded it carefully in the paper in which he received it and took it home.

The next Sunday the superintendent of the mission school announced that any child who was disappointed with his or her gift could exchange it.

Jimmy marched boldly to the front with his.

"What have you there, Jimmy?"

"Browning, sir."

"And what do you want in exchange?"

"Blacking, sir."

Quadrupeds That Lay Eggs.

The salesman as he wrapped up the eggs conversed politely.

"There are quadrupeds that lay, ma'am," he said.

"That lay eggs?"

"Yes. They are mammals, ma'am, too. Their home is Australia, where their names are the ornithorhynchus or duck billed platypus, and the echidna, or porcupine ant eater. They are the lowest mammals known."

"Really?"

"Oh, yes! The duck billed platypus lays two eggs at a time. But the echidna lays but one egg, which it carries in a natural pouch beneath its stomach—there's an idea for the hen there—until the kid echidna, so to speak, is hatched out."

Her Ambition.

This incident was told by an actress who was once playing Rosalind, and playing it, as she fancied, rather acceptably. As she entered her dressing room at the theater one night a note from a woman was handed to her which read in this wise:

"Dere lady I work for a dentist but I have spoiled so many of his teeth saying over your part in the play that now I can say it just as well as you do, and I want you to let me try it tonight and see if I can't for the dentist says he cannot have me any more and I must pay for his teeth, and so I must go on the stage and I will be here at 7 o'clock."

The exchange was not made.

"Not Worth a Corse."

CURE SICK HEADACHE.

Mamma's Definition.

Mamma—Willie, you will have to be punished if you don't stop using such naughty words. What does "damn" mean?

Willie—Why, mamma, it means "not worth a cent."

Mamma—Where did you learn such a word?

Willie—I heard it said with emphasis by Mr. Kirk's uncle.

Mamma—I suppose "not worth a cent" was used frequently nowadays in theaters not properly profane, though it is frequently intensified by a profane explative.

A Little in Doubt.

Hostess—I hope we shall see you again next Wednesday. I'm giving a dance. Mr. Young—I'm awfully sorry, but I'm going to a wedding. Hostess—Oh, indeed! I'm sure you'll enjoy yourself far more. Mr. Young—I'm not so sure. You see, it's my own wedding.

Recipe For Happiness.

To watch the corn grow or the blossoms set, to draw hard breath over plowshare or spade, to read, to think, to love, to pray—these are the things that make men happy.

'Animals to the number of 70,000,000 are killed yearly for the sake of their fur.

Silence and Science.

Before it was determined scientifically that smoke is waste, smoke was fired as the final indication and proof of prosperity. Today a smokeless chimney means nothing less than thrift and good management. Similarly we now hear that noise is proof of urban life, progress and activity. Who say answer that noise is loss as surely as smoke is waste. Decreased comfort is loss that's noise demonstrates. Disturbed minds are loss through a reduction of mental force. But these and similar consequences are indirect loss. There is direct loss also. A rattling car means worn bearings and a short lived vehicle. Otherwise rails roads would not spend so much on their roadbeds, and they would run trains at higher speed.

Never Loses His Head.

Many years ago, when William J. Stillman of New York city was reporting a disturbance in Greece for the London Times, a report was sent out that he had been beheaded. One of his friends, hearing the report, telegraphed to the correspondent this message: "Rumor here that your head has been taken off. Is it true?" It was not until the message had been sent that it occurred to the sender that if the rumor were true Stillman would be the last man in the world to speak about it. But the message reached Stillman, and this was his reply: "My dear boy, a newspaper man never loses his head."

A Story of Whewell.

Sydney Smith said of the great Dr. Whewell, master of Trinity college, that "science was his forte and conscience his foible." On one occasion two fellows of the college, thinking to get beyond his range, read up the subject of Chinese metaphysics and then disputed about it in the doctor's presence. He listened in silence for a time and then observed, "Ah, I see you have been reading a paper which I wrote for an encyclopedia of science."

A Mean Advantage.

"You say he accused you of being untruthful?"

"That's what happened," answered Pixie Pete, with much embarrassment. "And lives to tell the tale?"

"Well, you see he used long words in such a roundabout way that he was out o' town before I had figgered out exactly what he meant."

Siamese Object to Walking.

The Siamese, above all nations in the world, hate to walk. No such mode of progression is tolerated by a Siamese if he or she can by any means ride. A Venetian gondolier will walk sometimes, even a Hollander will ride on his rough cart, but a Bangkok man—not if he can help it. His family boat for him.

Attention Caused.

"Is Willie still paying attention to Tillie?"

"No."

"Did he jilt her?"

"No; he married her."—Illustrated Bits.

Not Her Full Weight.

Mistress—Now, Bridget, you'll break that fragile table with your full weight on it. Letts—I haven't my full weight on it; I'm standing on one foot.

The one who will be found in trial capable of great acts of love is ever the one who is doing considerable small ones.—F. W. Robertson.

Knew Dormant, but Not Hamlet.

The Lady—Do you know you think Hamlet was insane or merely assumed insgdo be?

The Victim—I beg your pardon. I didn't catch the name.

The Lady—Hamlet.

The Victim—Oh, yes. Odd name, isn't it? Friend of yours?

The Lady—I'm talking of Hamlet, Prince of Denmark.

The Victim—To be sure. Hamlet, Prince of Denmark. I know a lot of those Denmark princes, but I don't seem to place him. By the way, Denmark's getting to be quite a town. They tell me they have two regular theaters there now, one of them a freight. And I heard just the other day that eastern capital had secured an option on the building across the street from the Ivory stable for a clothespin factory. Denmark is certainly booming.

The literary lady glares at the victim coldly and removes herself to another part of the room.

Wherever the victim wanders.

Too Flippant.

The specialist surgeon, but with indignation, exclaimed, "No, I will not take his case. I have not been a fool to cure a woman's flippancy."

"Why, Dr. ——, what do you mean?" asked the family doctor, surprised, who have always found Mrs. Jones a lady in every way."

SORE, ACHING BLISTERED FEET

Farmers, farmers' wives, labor girls, clerks, bricklayers, policemen and postmen—all who have to be on their feet all day, and suffer from sore feet, chafing or blistering, will find relief in Zam-Buk.

Mr. Wm. Ashley, 227 Seigneurs St., Montreal, says:—"I suffered cruelly from sore feet, which became raw and blistered. Some days I was hardly able to walk home from work, and others I had to leave off about 3 o'clock. Powders, lotion and ointments of all kinds I tried in vain, sometimes actually working with them in my boots. I was advised to try Zam-Buk, and in a few hours it reduced the smarting and soreness. I kept on with it, putting a little on each night. In a few days the soreness was all gone, the blisters healed and I was free from pain. Zam-Buk is a genius. Cures eczema, poisoned sores, burns, cuts, bruises and all skin injuries and diseases.

CHEESE MAKING ON THE SABBATH.

An Absolute Necessity That Work be Continued Early Sunday Morning.

Messrs. C. C. James, Deputy Minister of Agriculture; Geo. A. Putman, Director Dairy Instruction, and G. G. Publow, Chief Instructor, Eastern Ontario, have prepared a report for Premier Whitney on the question of Sunday work in connection with the manufacture of cheese. They say in part:

"In Western Ontario, out of 218 factories, 68 are manufacturing cheese on Saturday night; in Eastern Ontario less than one-quarter of the one thousand factories are taking in milk on Saturday night and manufacturing it into cheese. In the majority of cases where milk is taken in on Saturday night, it is found impossible to properly complete the work before twelve o'clock on Sunday. It is, therefore, continued for a period of from one to four or five hours in the beginning of the Sunday. It will be seen that, in the future, to handle the milk at present made on the Saturday night and Sunday, either the factory must be reconstructed or equipped with other facilities, or the patrons must put in additional appliances at home and provide ice supplies.

"If the law against doing any work in cheese factories during any of the hours of Sunday were strictly enforced at once, there would, of necessity, be a very large waste of milk on the farm in addition to the increasing of the Sunday work on the part of the producer to a very large extent.

"Having considered the question from all standpoints and obtained opinions from many persons interested in the question, we beg to recommend that, for the present year, permission be granted to continue the cutting of curd in cheese factories until not later than 5 a.m. Sunday morning. In this connection we might state that, in the great majority of cases, the work can easily be completed by 2 a.m., but in some cases beyond the control of the maker, it may be found impossible to make up the cheese at so early a time."

"Further, we would suggest that early notification be given to the dairymen of the Province (owners of cheese factories, makers and patrons), that it will be necessary next year to fully comply with the requirements of the Sunday Observance Law, and that they should now make arrangements whereby either the patrons of the factories shall now begin to make provision to keep the milk at home under proper conditions or utilize it at home, or that the factories shall make such provision as may be necessary to enable them to handle the milk on Monday morning."

CAMDEN EAST.

The pretty little village of Camden East, nestling in amongst the trees, looked its brightest and best July 12th when honored by the Orangemen, who held their annual county celebration here. Some fifteen lodges were present and marched to the Anglican and Methodist churches as well as by orange individuals. The Orangemen were loud in their praises of the dinner and tea served to the members of the Church of England in Hirsch's hall. Certainly all taking part in getting up the dinner and tea deserve the warmest thanks and praise. The rector and wardens of St. Luke's church extend their heartiest and best thanks to all who helped in any and every way to make the day the splendid success it undoubtedly was. Gross proceeds $23.00.

MCLENNEN—KENT.

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized Wednesday evening, July 17th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Kent, Lennox, when their daughter, Miss Martha, was united in marriage to Mr. Arthur McClennen, of Lindsay, by Rev. E. Frazer Bell. Only the immediate friends and relatives of the contracting parties were present. The ceremony was performed at 6.30 p.m., after which the company sat down to a delicious three-course supper in the dining room. The time was then spent in social chat and a general good time until midnight, when the young couple boarded the eastbound train for Kingston, Thousand Islands and Montreal, where they will spend their honeymoon, after which they will go to Lindsay to live. Miss Kent is one of Napanee's popular young ladies with a wide circle of friends, all of whom join in wishing her success and happiness. Mr. McClennen is a popular engineer of the G. T. R. and a very capable and worthy young man, and showed his good judgment in the wife he has chosen.

MARTIN—MACKLAM.

A quiet but very pretty wedding was solemnized on Tuesday, July 16 at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. R. B. Macklam, Main st., Brighton, when her daughter, Mary, was united in marriage to Fernan P. Martin, of Cleveland, O. Rev. A. McLeod performed the ceremony in the presence of the immediate friends and relatives of the contracting parties. The house was profusely decorated with cut flowers, daisies and ferns, the service being read with the bridal party standing under the floral arch and stars and stripes, being intertwined above a back ground of ferns and daisies. The bride, who entered leaning on the arm of her grandfather, Mr. John P. Stork, looked very pretty and was becomingly attired in a gown of white louisene silk, wearing the conventional veil with a wreath of orange blossome, carring a bouquet of white roses and maiden hair ferns. Her only ornament was a pearl necklace, the gift of the groom. Mr. Wilbert D. Price, of Cleveland, was best man. Miss Vera Sister of the bride, attended as bridesmaid in a gown of cream voile over pink, carrying pink roses. The occasion was made very pretty by two little flower girls, Kathleen, sister of the bride, and Vera Ferguson, niece of the groom, with arms filled with lilies of the valley. After congratulations the guests repaired to the dining room where dainty refreshments were served. The popularity of the bride was attested by the large number of beautiful presents sent her. Mr. and Mrs. Martin left by evening train for Rice Echo Inn, Lake Massasauga, to spend a couple of weeks and on their return will reside in Cleveland, O. The bride travelled in a smart etton suit of navy blue voile.

her hand prettily upon his arm. "I should have known. Believe me, I would not have hurt you intentionally."

"Ah, my lady, the word was thoughtlessly spoken and needs no forgiveness. Set your heart shows itself in the asking and I thank you. I wanted but a moment to throw off the thought of that terrible day." Then they came back together, and the princess, who had not enough when she cared to use it, soon put matters right again.

It carried to tell one of my best stories in order to cheer Brandon, but in the midst of it Mary, who, I had noticed was restless and uneasy, full of laughter and hesitancy and with a manner as new to her as the dawn of the day, was to love awakening world, abruptly asked Brandon to dance with her again. She had risen and was standing by her chair, ready to be led out.

Suddenly," answered Brandon as he bent by her side and took her hand. "Which shall it be—La Gallard or the Volta dance?" And Mary, standing in the picture of waiting, willing, shyly, lifted her free hand to his shoulder, tried to raise her eyes to his, paused and softly said, "The new one."

Some time the dancing was more solemn, and when Mary stopped it to perform the delightful eyes, for she felt the tingling of a new, strange power in Brandon's touch. A man is a man, but a proud man, with irresistible, infinite attractions and may have for a woman—the dawning of the bolesome for the iron-hand come into her lonely secret it was to her intoxicating cup in that it first knowledge of that two-edged which makes a heaven or a hell on earth, which sows its very seed to love.

It seem that Mary was in love, and that Brandon, even the subtle, the poach, yes, even the subtle-souled, diplomatic, force-ago to woman, of the man she could had known the rarest throb tudes in that choice of all God's handiwork—a woman's heart—took that goes before, the John Lindell, as it were, of coming love. Brandon offered wine. After three sips of wine, from each of which took a sip, and handed them to Brandon and went to fill his cup anew, very soberly thanked us and we were at liberty to go.

Brandon would have spoke some word that, guessing were just as well.

She is perfect! But you were mistaken. I am still thank am not in love with her. I still upon my word if I were."

He spoke true twice a week during the and never trusted any other man had trusted him, but I thought to leave it instead. Trouble was come of its own accord soon

Truth, I may as well tell you that the princess asked me to bring to her that she might have a subject and to gain admission she looked rough, but found a sigh.

CHAPTER V.

AN ENEMY AND AN ENEMY.

A DAY or two after this Brandon was commanded to an audience and presented to the king and queen. He was now able to all palace entertainments and quite openly there many invitations, being a favorite with both their majesties. As to his standing with those who really felt the most importance socially about the court, I did not exactly say. She was such a mass of contradictory impulses and ambitions, and was so full of whims and caprice, the inevitable outcome of her blood, her rank and the position which she had always held, that I could not predict for a moment her attitude toward any one, and never shown so great favor to any man as to Brandon, but just enough of her condescension was given to whisper of the favor of the hour, of the moment and subject to change, I could not tell. I believed, however, that I had erected upon a firm foundation with this changing, changing quicksand of a girl than with those of their majesties.

At first, I thought he rested upon her favor itself. But to guess correctly what a girl of that sort will do or think would require inspiration.

Of course most of the entertainments given to the king and queen included the ladies nearly all the court, but Mary often had little fetes and dancing parties which were smaller, more select and informal. These parties were held with the consent and encouragement of the king, to avoid the reproach of not inviting everybody. The larger affairs were very dull, and whether ones enjoy offense to those who were left out. The latter, therefore, were turned over to Mary, who cared very little who was offended or who was not, and invitations to these parties were highly valued.

One afternoon a day or two after Brandon's presentation a message arrived from Mary notifying him that she would have a little fete that evening in one of the smaller halls and directing him to be present at the hour of dance. Accompanying the message was a note from no less a person than the Princess Dowager Brandon.

This was an honor indeed—an autograph invitation from the hand of Mary." But the Princess Dowager did not seem to consider it anything unusual, and when I handed him the note upon his return from the hunt he simply read it carelessly over once, tore it in pieces and tossed it away. I believe the Duke of Buckingham would have given 10,000 crowns to receive such a note and would doubtless have shown it to half the court in triumphant confession before the middle of the night. To this great captain of the guard it was but a scrap of paper. He was glad to have it, nevertheless, and with all his brief restraint and stolidity could not conceal his pleasure.

Brandon at once accepted the invitation in a personal note to the princess. The boldness of this actually took my breath, and I was quite at a loss to understand it. Mary had spoken of these private balls, as he was supposed at least not to be their patron, and the queen, who was, undoubtedly, the leader after Mary was averse to such things. Both princess opened her own balls, dancing for a few minutes only, and then withdrew to herself and partner. It was the honor of the evening to open the ball with the queen, and Brandon, as I have said, had read it clipped off into her private room, read it again and put it on her dance, chose. Another after Mary had drifted into a corner of the room back of a group of people and was talking to Brandon as she always very friendly to him—and to Master Cavendish, a quaint, quiet, easy little man, full of learning and kindness, and a warm friend to the Princess Mary.

It was time to open the ball, and from my place in the musicians' gallery I could see Mary moving about among the guests, evidently looking for a partner. Whom she would ask I quickly enough and left her without another word. In a few minutes she went into an adjoining room where I knew she was alone. The door was open, and the music could be heard there, so I followed.

"My lady, there is no one to see us here. I can teach you now, if you will," said I.

She saw she was cornered, and replied, with a toss of her saucy little head, "But what if I do not wish?"

Now, this was more than I could endure with patience, so I answered, "My young lady, you shall ask me before I teach you."

"There are others who can dance it much better than you," she returned, without looking at me.

"If you allow another to teach you that dance," I responded, "you will have seen the last of me." She had made me angry, and I did not speak to her for more than a week. When I did—but I will tell you of that later on.

The evening was devoted to learning the new dance, and I saw Mary busily engaged imparting information among the ladies. As we were about to disperse I heard her say to Brandon:

"You have greatly pleased the king by bringing him a new amusement. He asked me where I learned it, and I told him you had taught it to Caskoden and that I had it from him. I told Caskoden so that he can tell the same story."

"Oh, but that is not true. Don't you think you should have told him the truth or have evaded it in some way?" asked Brandon, who was really a great lover of the truth, "when possible," but who, I fear, on this occasion wished to appear more truthful than he really was. If a man is to a woman's taste and she is inclined to him, he lays up great stores of favor by making her think him good, and shameful impositions are often practiced to this end.

"But what if I do not wish?"

Mary flushed a little and answered; "I can't help it. You do not know. And I told Henry that you four had enjoyed such a famous time in my rooms he would have been very angry, and—and you might have been the sufferer."

"But might you not have compromised matters by going around the truth some way and leaving the impression that others were of the party that evening?"

That was a mistake, for it gave Mary an opportunity to retaliate; "The best way to go around the truth, as you call it, is by a direct lie. My lie was no worse than yours. But I did not stop to argue about such matters. There is something else I wished to say. I want to tell you that you have greatly pleased the king with the new dance. Now teach him 'honor and ruff' and your fortune is made. He has had some Jews and Lombards in of late to teach him new games at cards, but yours is worth all of them." Then, somewhat hastily and irrelevantly, "I did not dance the lave dance with any other gentleman, but I suppose you did not notice it," and she was gone before he could thank her.

CHAPTER VI.

A RARE MIND TO WINDSOR.

THE princess knew her royal brother. A man would receive quicker reward for inventing an amusement or a gaudy costume for the king than by winning him a battle. Later in life the highroad to his favor was in ridding him of his wife and helping him to a new one, a dangerous way, though, as Wolsey found, is he survive, when he sank his glory in yon Anne Boleyn.

Brandon took the hint and managed to let it be known in his play-acting that he knew the latest French games. The French Duc de Longueville had for some time been an honored prisoner at the English court, held as a hostage from Louis XII., but De Longueville was a blockhead, who could not keep his little black eyes off our fair ladies, who hated him, long enough to tell the dance of spades from the ace of hearts. So Brandon was taken from his duties, such as they were, and placed at the card table. This was fortunate at first, for, being the best player, the king always chose

"I would have been glad to teach her, but I knew that you would take care of yourself. I was sure you would be equal to the occasion. It was better than a monument, and I was glad to see it. I do not like him."

A RARE MIND TO WINDSOR.

The French Duc de Longueville had for some time been an honored prisoner at the English court, held as a hostage from Louis XII., but De Longueville was a blockhead, who could not keep his little black eyes off our fair ladies, who hated him, long enough to tell the dance of spades from the ace of hearts. So Brandon was taken from his duties, such as they were, and placed at the card table. This was fortunate at first, for, being the best player, the king always chose

"Will the universe crumble into nothingness, my darling little one?" he asked. But somehow what my mind should answer I tried to give to my face. Men do not read our inflections. It was a part of the speech which I had prepared and delivered to myself in the mirror. "Will it, Jane?" he asked. "Will it, my darling?"

"No," I answered, "but I think he let heart whole, or nearly so. He told me he was not fool enough to fall in love with the king's sister, and I really believe he will keep his heart and head, even at that dizzy height. He is a cool fellow, if there ever was one."

"He certainly is different from other men," returned Jane. "I think he has never spoken a word of love to her. He has said some pretty things, which she also has repeated to me; has moralized to some extent, and has actually told her of some of her faults. I should like to see any one else take that liberty. She seems to like it from him, and she inspires her with higher, better motives and a yearning to be good, but I am sure he has made no love to her."

"Perhaps it would be better if he did. It might cure her," I replied.

"Oh, but it will not yet! At first, perhaps, but not now. What I fear is that if he remains silent much longer she will take matters in hand and speak herself. I don't like to say that—it doesn't sound well—but she is a princess, and we would be different with her from what it would be with an ordinary girl. She might have to speak first, or there might be no speaking at all. You have brought his position before me in a new light, and I am very glad you did. I will keep his heart and head, even at that dizzy height. He is a cool fellow, if there ever was one."

"He certainly is different from other men," returned Jane. "I think he has never spoken a word of love to her. began to suspect his attempts to avoid love, and she grew cold and distant through pique. Her manner, however, had no effect upon Brandon, who did not, or at least appeared not to, notice it. This the girl could not endure, and, lacking strength to resist her heart, soon returned to the attack.

Mary had not seen Brandon for nearly two weeks and was growing anxious, when one day she met Jane out with him in a forest walk near the river. Brandon was sauntering along reading when they overtook him. Jane forgot her afterward that Mary's conduct upon coming up to him was pretty and curious beyond the average. At first she was inclined to be distant and say cutting things, but when Brandon began to pay courtesy under them and showed signs of turning back she changed front in the twinkling of an eye and was all sweetness. She laughed and smiled and dimpled, as only she could, and was full of bright glances and gracious words.

She tried a hundred little schemes to get him to herself for a moment—the hunting of a wild flower or a four leaved clover or the exploration of some little nook in the forest toward which she would lead him—but Jane did not at first take the hint and kept close at her heels. Mary's impulsive nature was not much given to hinting —she usually nodded, and most emphatically at that—so after a few failures to rid herself of the waiting lady she said impatiently: "Jane, I hear the name of heaven, don't keep so close to us. You will move out of reach of my hand, and you know how often it baffles to box your ears!"

Jane laughed merrily for Mary's sake to say, how often the fair hand was given to such spasms; so with this emphasized hint she walked on ahead, half sulky at the indignity put upon her and half amused at her whimsical mistress.

Mary lost no time, but began the attack at once.

"Now, sir, I want you to tell me the truth. Why do you refuse my invitations and so persistently keep away from me? I thought at first I would simply let you go your way, and then I thought I—I would not. Don't deny it. I know you won't. With all your faults, you don't tell even little fibs; not even to a woman—I believe. Now there is a fine compliment—is it not?—when I intended to scold you!" She gave a flattering little laugh, and, with a bantering lead, continued: "Tell me, sir, is not the king's sister of quality sufficient to suit you? Perhaps you would have the queen or the Blessed Virgin? Tell me how?" And she looked up at him half in banter, half in earnest.

"My duties"—began Brandon.

"Oh, bother your duties! Tell me the truth."

"I will, if you let me," returned Brandon, who had no intention whatever—at least anything of the sort. "My duties now occupy my time in the morning."

"That will not do," interrupted Mary, who knew enough of a guardsman's duty to be sure it was not onerous. "You might as well come to it and tell me the truth; that you do not like our society." And she gave him a vicious little glance without a shadow of a smile.

"In God's name, Lady Mary, that is bad it!" answered Brandon, with a frown on the rack. "Please do not think it. I cannot bear to have you say such a thing, when it is so far from the real truth."

"Then tell me the real truth."

"I will, indeed. I beg of you not to go. Leave me, or let me leave you. I refuse to answer further." The latter half of this sentence was uttered decisively and sounded sullen and dismissed, although of course it was not so intended. He had been so perilously near speaking words which would probably have lighted, to their destruction—to his certainly—the smoldering flames within their breast that he frightened him, and the manner in which he spoke was but a tone giving utterance to the pain in his heart.

Mary took it as it sounded and in unfeigned surprise exclaimed angrily: "Leave you? Do I hear aright? I never thought that I, the daughter and sister of a king, would live to be dismissed by a—by—any one."

"Your highness"—began Brandon, but she was gone before he could speak.

He did not follow her to explain, knowing how dangerous such an explanation would be, but felt that it was best for them both that she should remain offended, painful as the thought was to him.

Of course, Mary's womanly self esteem, to say nothing of her royal pride, was wounded to the quick, and no wonder.

Poor Brandon sat down upon a stone, and as he longingly watched her retiring form wished that he had never been dead. This was the first time he really knew how much he loved the girl, and he saw that, with him at least, love is not a matter of bad to worse and at that rate would soon be—worst.

Now that he had unintentionally offended her and had permitted her to go without an explanation she was dearer to him than ever, and as he sat there with his face in his hands he knew that if matters went on as they were going they would soon come when he would throw caution to the dogs and would try the impossible—to win her for his own. Caution and judgment still sat enthroned, and they told him now what he knew full well they would still tell him after a short time—that failure was certain to follow the attempt and disaster sure to follow failure. First, the king would in all probability cut off his head upon an intimation of Mary's possible fondness for him and, second, if he should be so fortunate as to keep his head Mary could not and certainly would not marry him even if she loved him with all her heart. The distance between them was too great, and she knew too well what she owed to her position. There was but one thing left —New Spain, and he determined while sitting there to sail with the next ship.

The real cause of Brandon's misery had never occurred to Mary. Although she knew her beauty and power, as she could not help but know it—not as a matter of vanity, but as a matter of fact—yet love had blinded her where Brandon was concerned, and that knowledge failed to give a right key to his motives, however brightly it might illumine the conduct of other men toward whom she was indifferent.

So Mary was angry this time—angry in earnest—and Jane felt the irritable pain under the sting. She was sorry for my share of her ill temper, as most certainly would Brandon had he allowed much pain and effort? Was this the answer to all his prayer, "Lead me not into temptation?" He had done his part, for he had said all he could. Heaven had not helped him, since there was temptation thrust upon him when least expected and when the way was so narrow he could not escape, but must meet it face to face.

Mary soon recovered her self possession—women are better skilled in this art than men—and continued:

"I am not intending to say one word about your treatment of me that day over in the forest, although it was very bad and you have acted abominably to her since. Now I am speaking to me!" And she softly laughed as she peeped up at the poor fellow from beneath those sweeping lashes that she had said from, bristol in about twenty days and another six weeks later. So he chose the former and was making the arrangements to leave as soon as possible.

He told me of his plans and spoke of his situation. "You know the reason for my going," he said, "even if I have never spoken of it. I am one of the Joseph and am very little given to running away from a beautiful woman, but in this case I am fleeing from death itself. And to think what a heaven it would be! You are right, Catskoden—the man and I—was making the light of that girl's smile. I am unable to tell how I feel toward her. It some times seems that I cannot live another hour without seeing her. Yet, think God, I have reason enough left to know that every spoke of her only adds to an already incurable malady. What will it be when she is the wife of the king of France? Does it not look as if will life in New Spain is my only chance?"

I assented as we joined hands, and my eyes were moist as I told him how I should miss him more than any one else in all the earth—excepting Jane, in mental reservation.

I told Jane what Brandon was about to do, knowing full well she would tell Mary, which she did at once.

Poor Mary! The sight began to come now, and such small vestiges of her ill humor toward Brandon as still remained were frightened off in a hurry by the fear that she had seen the last of him.

She had not before fully known that she loved him. She knew he was the most delightful companion she had ever met and that there was an exhilaration about his presence which almost intoxicated her and made life an ecstasy, but she did not know that it was love. It needed but the thought that she was about to lose him to make her know her malady and meet it face to face.

Upon the evening when Mary learned that Brandon was to sail she left her chamber very early and closed the door. No one interrupted her until Jane went in to rebe her for the night and to retire. She then found that Mary had raised herself and was lying in bed with her head covered, apparently asleep. Jane quietly prepared to retire and lay down in her own bed. The girls usually shared one couch, but during Mary's ill temper she had forced Jane to sleep alone.

After a short silence Jane heard a sob from the other bed, then another and another.

"Mary, are you weeping?" she asked. "Are?"

"What is the matter, dear?"

"Nothing," with a sigh.

"Do you wish me to come to your bed?"

"Yes, I do." So Jane went over and laid beside Mary, who gently put her arms about her neck.

"When will he leave?" whispered Mary, shyly confessing all by her question.

"I do not know," responded Jane, "but he will sail before long, I guess."

"Do you believe he will?"

"I know it." And with this consolation Mary cuddled herself to sleep.

After this, for a few days, Mary was quiet enough. Her irritable mood had subsided, but one could see that she was on the lookout for some one all the time, although she made the most heroic little efforts to conceal her watchfulness.

At last a meeting came about in this way: Next to the king's bedchamber was a luxuriously furnished little apartment with a well selected library. Here Brandon and I often went afternoons to read, as we were sure to be undisturbed.

Late one day Brandon had gone over to the library to entrust and, having selected a volume, took his place in a secluded little alcove half hidden in arras draperies. There was a comfortable seat along the wall and a small diamond shaped window to furnish light.

Brandon had been there hour when in came Mary. I cannot say whether she knew Brandon was there or not, but she lit cooperate and he was there, which is the only thing to the point, and finding him, she stepped into the alcove before he was aware of her presence.

Brandon was on his feet in an instant and with a low bow was backing himself out when Mary prevented by leave her in sole possession. If she wished to rest.

"Master Brandon, you need not go. I will not hurt you. Besides, if this place is not large enough for us both, I will go. I would not disturb you." She spoke with a tremulous voice and a quick, uneasy glance, and started to move toward one end of the alcove.

"Lady Mary, how can you speak so? You know—you must know—oh, I beg you"— But she interrupted him by taking his arm and drawing him to a seat beside her on the cushion. She could have drawn down the Colossus of Rhodes with the look she gave Brandon, so full was it of command, entreaty and promise.

"That's it. I don't know, but I want to know, and I want you to sit here beside me and tell me. I am going to be reconciled with you despite the way you treated me when last we met. I am going to be friends with you whether or you will or not. Now what do you say to that, sir?" She spoke with a humorous little laugh of affected assurance, which showed that her heart was not nearly so confident nor so bold as her words would make believe. Poor Brandon, usually so ready, had nothing "to say to that," but sat in helpless silence.

Was this the sum total of all his wise determinations made at the cost of so much pain and effort? Was this the answer to all his prayer, "Lead me not into temptation?" He had done his part, for he had said all he could. Heaven had not helped him, since here was temptation thrust upon him when least expected and when the way was so narrow he could not escape, but must meet it face to face.

"There, now, you are kind again, as kind as even you can be. Be sure, I thank you, though I say it only once," and he looked into her eyes with a gaze she could not stand even for an instant. This was growing dangerous again; so, catching herself in time, she turned the conversation back into the bantering vein.

"Ah, you want to pay the debt that I may have no excuse to remain? Is that it? Perhaps you are not so kind after all."

"No, no; you know better. But let me pay the debt. How much is it, and to whom is it owing? Tell me at once, I command you."

"No, no, Lady Mary; I cannot."

"Please do. I beg, if I cannot command. Now I know you will. You would not make me beg twice for anything." She drew closer to him as she spoke and put her hand unconsciously on his arm. With an irresistible impulse he took the hand in his and lifted it to his lips in a lingering caress that could not be mistaken. It was all so quick and so full of fire and meaning that Mary took fright, and her primness for the moment came uppermost.

"Master Brandon!" she exclaimed sharply and drew away her hand. Brandon dropped the hand and moved over on the seat. He did not speak, but turned his face from her and looked out of the window toward the river. Thus they sat in silence, Brandon's hand resting listlessly upon the cushion between them. Mary saw the eloquent movement away from her and his speaking attitude with averted face: then the primness went into eclipse, and the imperial woman was ascendant once more. She looked at him for a brief space with softening eyes and, lifting her hand, put it back in his, saying:

"There it is again—if you want it."

Want it? Ah, this was too much! The hand would not satisfy now. It must be all. And he caught her to his arms with a violence that frightened her.

"Please don't; please! Not this time! Ah, have mercy, Charl— Well! There! There! Mary mother, forgive me!" she cried. Then all reserve fell before the whirlwind of his passion, and she was on his breast, with her white arms around his neck, paying the same tribute to the little blind god that he would have exacted from the lowliest maiden of the land.

Brandon held the girl for a moment or two, then fell upon his knees and buried his face in her lap.

"Heaven help me!" he cried.

She pushed the hair back from his forehead with her hand and as she fondled the curls leaned over him and softly whispered:

"Heaven help us both, for I love you!"

He sprang to his feet. "Don't! Don't, I pray you," he said wildly, and almost ran from her.

Mary followed him nearly to the door of the room, but when he turned he was at the door and stopped and was standing with her hands over her face, as if in tears.

He went back to her and said, "I tried to avoid this, and if you had helped me it would never"— But he remembered how he had always despised Adam for throwing the blame upon Eve, no matter how much she may have deserved it, and continued: "No, I do not mean that. It is all my fault. I should have gone away long ago. I could not help it. I tried, oh, I tried!"

TRIUMPH OVER SORROW

GOD'S GOODNESS BRIGHTENS LIFE'S DARKEST HOURS.

VISITS OF WEEPING JEREMIAHS

Silver Lining Is Always There—Sometimes Hard to Realize—Dawn Must Follow the Longest Night—Trouble Often Blessing In Disguise—Prevailing Power of Prayer—God a Comforter.

Entered according to act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1907, by Frederick Fisher, Toronto, at the Dept. of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 7.—To all who have sorrow with a sense of despondency on account of sickness, loss of friends, misfortune or the failure of worldly prospects, the text selected comes as a message of consolation and encouragement. It is found in Psalms xxx, 5, "Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning."

The Bible declares that it is better to go to the house of mourning than to join in the frolics of the merry makers. But that does not mean that we should talk or those in trouble with the lugubrious and sepulchral countenance of an undertaker officiating at a funeral. If there is any time in life when we need the curtain up and the sunlight flooding every room in the house, it is when the dark clouds of bereavement have showered the heartbreak of the home with bitter, scalding tears. If there is ever a time when we should enter a room with a smile on the lip and with a ringing note of joy in his salutation and with hope and peace and comfort radiating from every feature of his countenance, that time is when he is standing by a sick bed or is extending the warm clasp of affection to one who is bowed under the heavy burdens of grief. Yet the sad fact is that not one in fifty knows how to smile the house of mourning. Instead of going there with a message of comfort and peace and hope, the visitor was entering the house of trouble depresses the barometer of suffering and adds the gloomy days of trouble still more gloomy.

Almost all of us hold in memory the recollection of the Jeremiahs among whom some weeping Jeremiahs made when our cup of anguish was filled to the brim and overflowing. They came to us with long tales of woe. Tell us how we had gone to their physician and used his medicines our baby would not have died. Tell us how we had our husband's life insurance policy and perhaps God took away our dear ones because we were not living close enough to him and had not fully consecrated our lives to his service. Or they would say, "My dear young friend, you should thank God that he has taken away your boy, because your child might have lived to grow up a very bad man, to be some day executed for the crime of murder, or he might have become a drunkard, a libertine or a thief."

Or they poured out sick rooms and homes of death as the miserable comforters of Job came to the patriarch after he had lost money, children and health. Those men had the idea that their friend was the result of hard, ous sin. They believed that God punished a man in this way when he had been guilty of some awful crime, and suffering the loss of property and the death of children, they concluded that he had committed some awful crime. They hinted their belief to him and urged him to repent and confess, and when the poor harassed man insisted that he was innocent they warned him not to add sin to sin and worse by hypocrisy. Thus they aggravated Job's trouble, and he exclaimed, "Miserable comforters are ye all!"

But though the world may have its Eliphases and Zophars and Bildads, thank God that the human race also has its Davids. It has the noble men and women who, in times of great trouble, can come into our lives and speak the sympathetic word in just the right way. These men may have a tear in their eyes, but they always have a smile beaming on the lip. They come to us in our distress and say: "Brother, it may be dark for you now, but the sun will come out again. I am sadly that all things will come to you who love God, and who live for him. Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning." Thank God for the sunrise of hope that comfort can always follow the darkest night of sorrow.

David could speak from experience about nights of weeping. He was no stranger to them. He had tasted the bitter cup of woe and had drunk its contents to the dregs. And as I pored over the history of the shepherd boy who afterward became the King of Israel, I found his experience to help you to find the peace that passeth all understanding which the sweet singer of Israel knew.

David, in the first place, knew all about the mental sufferings of an unhappy child. He knew what it was to have a little boy's heart beat and throb with anguish. He knew what it was to go sobbing night after night to bed. He may have known what it was to crave for parental love and receive it not. And of all a child's troubles I believe there is not one greater than to feel that a father or a mother loves the rest of the children better than they love him. Oh, the awful sufferings that come from parental favoritism! I could pity the boys or the girls who have to bear that heavy trial in their youth.

There did find the consolation that David had an unhappy childhood? I think we have it in the story of Samuel's boyhood. The record carefully studied this incident? Why, parental favoritism is sticking out all over it. When Samuel came to Bethlehem to find a new king of Israel among Jesse's sons, what did her father do? He brought every son he has before the prophet, except one. He seemed to say, "Samuel, these are my seven boys. Did you ever see a finer lot of young men? Any one of them is fit to be a king." And as the father speaks thus a look of loving pride ripples over his features. But the prophet is still not satisfied. He keeps looking and looking. He is looking for some one else. Then he says to Jesse, "Are here all thy children?" With that a look of disdain comes into the father's face as he answers, "Ah, yes; there is still another; but he is a puny, undersized stripling. He does not amount to much. He is surely do not want him. There yet remaineth the youngest, and, behold he keepeth the sheep." Thus as Jesse pushed David his son into the background on account of parental favoritism for the other children, some of whom have brought a bitter childhood. We have angrily felt that our father or mother did not care for us as they cared for others. David well knew what it was to weep during the long nights of his childhood. And yet today he comes to all boys and says, "My young friends, do not worry. Do not let your countenance gloom. There is a bright dawn coming for you. Look how God had led me out of the sunless midnight. Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning." Boys and girls! Young men and young women, with your fresh young cheeks wet with a shower of sorrow, I believe that David would like to whisper in your ear and recognize their physical and mental capabilities. They are young men of brain and power. By the injustices and jealousies of their fellowmen they are kept in the background, and young with half their capabilities are pushed to the front. Was this not young David's experience?

Read the story of his offer to fight Goliath. Why was it now that the Young David is in the camp of King Saul? Because him stalks the great Goliath defying the armies of Israel. What did David do? Why he said, "If no one else will go forth to meet this giant I will go." Had he not earned the right to go? Was he not one of the keenest if not the most expert marksman with the sling in all the Hebrew nation? Had not his bravery been tested again and again? Alone with the sheep, "way off among the mountains," had he not defied the wild beasts and the Bedouin robbers? And yet when young David said, "I will go and fight the mighty Goliath," what happened? His elder brothers, who were honored soldiers of Saul's army, began to sneer and to laugh. "Aha," they said, "you had better go home and mind your mother's sheep or apron strings! You are a pretty-faced baby to come here and talk like a warrior! You had best go back to the literal words: "And Eliab's anger was kindled against David and he said, Why camest thou down hither? and with whom hast thou left those few sheep in the wilderness? I know thy pride and the naughtiness of thy heart; for thou art come down that thou mightest see the battle." Then young David had to struggle to get his foothold in life. Has not King David a right to come to our young folks, battling and struggling to get a foothold in life, and say: "Young people, I know your trials. I know how hard it is to make the world recognize your powers. Just keep on. God will see you through. The darkness and despair are sure to be followed by the sunrise of triumph. "Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning." To young folks, keep on in your struggle; all will be well."

But to-day David comes to bring us gospel comfort which he has found in the times of great sorrow and also in the trials and misrepresentations and struggles of his early life. When David's sun was well westward in the man, with the kingly crown upon his head and the royal purple robe about his shoulders, he had a Goliath to fight more formidable than the one he encountered when a boy. He was again faced shepherd boy. And when David met the second Goliath he became not the conqueror but the conquered. And yet to-day, as a repentant liberated captive, he comes to us and says: "Friend, your earthly success may have been the means of destroying your spiritual life, but you can save you yet, for he has saved me, the chief of sinners." Has your experience, successful man, been that of King David? With a kingly crown upon your head and with royal purple about your shoulders, have you never been compelled to shed repentant tears over some spiritual fall, some mean, disgraceful thing you have done under strong temptation?

The material conflicts of a whole youth cannot be compared to the spiritual conflicts of the human heart when finding some of the best days of his life. Some time ago I saw in a picture gallery one of my elders a most exquisite picture. It was entitled "Darkness and Light." In the foreground of that picture is a beautiful sunshine of the noontide. A happy woman, with a baby in her arms and a sturdy child of five years tagging after at her skirts, has brought a well filled lunch basket to her young husband working as a day laborer. It is a magnificent specimen of a man. With his abounding health and laughing face he seems to say: "Life is a battle, but my barn arm is strong enough to fight it. Life has its burdens, but my shoulders are broad enough to carry them." The baby stands, holding out his hands to be taken by the father, and the sturdy child may be a struggle, but it is a struggle I joy we ever pictured in a man's life and in a woman's. Surrounded by her child's smile it is to be found in the foreground of that picture.

But hardly has your eye studied the four happy figures in the foreground than you look into the background of the picture. There under the deep shadow in a beautiful garden stands a woman, and how sad she looks. She has been walking, but her walk is far away with the dead. Suddenly she turns and catches sight of one happy family group. It has had its mountain days and its valley face many anything, they seem to say. "Oh, if I could only give up my money, my home and my diamonds and my wealth and have my husband and baby like that! O God, can I ever be as once was?" So some of us seem to be walking amid the garden of our temporal prosperities. But we are not studying the pictures upon the walls or the grandeur of our home. We are looking at the spiritual streaks of our past lives. Like David, we see the heinous sin rising up before us. We are saying, "O God, will this be all my life over again and I be what I was?" But no sooner are we repentant than we begin to fall through the libertine. David the murderer comes to us and says: "Friend, what will forgive you your sins if you will give me my sins if I throw yourself upon God?" Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning." Yes, David, the sunlight of hope is the destruction of every sorrow that wayward boy. I have drunk out of the same bitter cup. I know what it is to sit up night after night waiting for him to come home while you listen for the footsteps of the wanderer. Ah, no night is so dark that night when a loving parent is listening for the step of a wayward boy. I would have been thrown it all and will be comforted to know that you have been through it all. Trust him, father. Trust him, mother. He is the Jesus who is with him to bring you comfort at a time like this. Will you trust him, you who have fear for those who are going out? Will you trust this Christ even now? Will you trust Jesus and ask him to help him help?" If you cannot get help from Christ at this time, you can get help from no other source.

There are some sorrows beyond the reach of an earthly comforter. Carry them where David carried his and learn at least the value of the heavenly power.

Perhaps King David's sorrow over Absalom may not have been free from self reproach. It may be that he neglected to pray for his son Absalom until it was too late. Should we not trust Christ for our children? You have tried your own strength long enough to know that you have not and you will not ask for the divine help? Some years ago a poor wife and mother was taken to the great London preacher, Charles H. Spurgeon. She told the pastor her sad story. It was the old story of a dissipated husband and a heart broken wife and mother. "There is nothing we can do," said Mr. Spurgeon, "but to kneel down and pray for the Lord for the immediate conversion of your husband. What he needs is not human aid, but the mighty Spirit of God." And the great preacher, "and I prayed that God would bring the strong one bound and overthrow him, and bless him a loving husband and a true Christian. When we rose from our knees I turned to the poor woman and said: "My dear woman, do not fret and worry about this any more. Trust God. I feel sure God will bring your husband back home." The prayer was answered. Some time after she came back to Mr. Spurgeon and with radiant face exclaimed: "He has come back home to me and the children. He has come a converted man. He has been saved."

It was found that that husband in family bands and was delivered of his sins and brought to Christ at the very time his wife and Mr. Spurgeon were on their knees praying for his conversion. Such incidents could be found in scores and thousands of homes, if we could only get time to enter hearts of men and women. Wives have dragged their husbands into the fold of God. Mothers and fathers have prayed their children into the kingdom. Friends have prayed their friends into the kingdom. Can you not pray for your husband? Can you not pray and get this peace of the gospel for the joy of your own soul and also for the deliverance of dear ones who do not turn the darkness of the night into the joy of morning?

"But," you may say, "when is this gospel morning to break? Oh, the gospel morning has long for some of us. Why, I have been praying for my wayward child for twenty years. It has been a long, long time to wait." And this awful sin of my youth—I have been praying for God to forgive me. I believe he has. I know he has. But that forgiveness does not wipe out its awful results. When will the day breaking day? When is my eastern horizon to be covered by the golden light of the rising sun?" When? Why, my brother, the gospel sun is rising now. The dawn has been illuminating your eastern hills from the time you first gave your heart to Christ. It is not as bright now as it will be a few years hence; but if you only trust Christ and live for Christ your day will grow brighter and brighter every year, from day to day, until the eternal morning breaks, and God shall wipe all tears from your eyes.

Ray Farley is visiting in Deseronto

ODESSA.

A lawn social was held on Mr. A. Booth's lawn. Music was provided by the band. The usual fare was indulged in—cake, ice cream and lemonade, after which social converse was in order. But where our friends, the Wilkinsons? only a few being present. Proceeds, something over $50.00, to be expended on the Public Library, which will be ready about the second week in August.

Another lawn social will be given on Saturday, July 27th, on the parsonage grounds, a conjoint affair, between the band and the ladies of the church. A thoroughly good time is expected, so come along. The band will again supply the music.

The usual annual visitors are arriving weekly, with the addition of a few new ones.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Booth and children, accompanied by Miss Baker, of Brooklyn, Mrs. Stan Mabee and son Clarence, Mr. and Mrs. John Denyes, of Pittsburgh, Pa., and Peter Mabee's.

Mrs. MacKinnon and Miss Ball, of Ottawa, Mr. Carter, of Trenton, at his aunt's, Mrs. Geo. Ferguson.

Mrs. H. Cooke, Jack and Eileen, of Cobourg, at the Dominion, visiting Mrs. John Cooke.

Mrs. Wycott, of Watertown, and Mrs. Amey, of Cobourg, at Mr. Wycott's.

Mrs. Dr. Mabee and Mr. Decker, with their guests, took in the excursion to the Islands one day last week.

Mr. Jones spent a couple of days in Kingston.

Mr. and Mrs. Milne, of Toronto, are spending the holidays at Mr. H. Davey's.

Report hath it, pro-bono publico has been chosen as librarian, and therefore will become a resident of Odessa. Needless like the old friends, and no place like the old home place, eh?

Sunday next new under the sun was indulged in by some twenty-of our village people, viz., a straw ride (what is in a name?) to Bath, on Tuesday evening. There seems to be some attraction there, especially one of our young men in that direction, no doubt it is the beautiful sheet of water which is certainly fine, which draws him there.

Mr. Jas. Bird has gone on excursion on Wednesday to the Islands. At Kingston she will meet Mr. R. Cooke, who also joined the excursion at Cobourg. Then he will come back to Odessa for a few days' outing.

Bert Sproule and sister Pearl, with Gladys Calder and Maud Lovering went to the Islands on Wednesday.

Our C. M. pulpit will be occupied next Sabbath by E. F. Bell, of the Congregational church, Michigan.

REQUEST TO COUNTY EX-WARDENS AND RELATIVES OF DECEASED.

Editor Beaver:

At the instance of the present Warden, L. L. Gallagher, of Wilton, a movement has been started to place in the County Council chamber photographs of all the gentlemen occupying the honorable position of Warden of this County since 1863, the date of the separation of Lennox and Addington and Frontenac, and I have been requested to outline the scheme in your columns. Many ex-Wardens have departed this life, yet no doubt their children, grandchildren or other relatives will gladly perpetuate the remembrance of the deceased by contributing photos, and thus the links in the Wardens' chair will not be broken and the photos will hang on Council walls in yearly order. Before proceeding to take advance steps it is desired that all ex-Wardens or relatives should send to me their photos for enlargement by the photographer, and then a committee will be formed to have the work done. Uniform frames will be secured for all and the cost is to be borne individually alike. In this way the cost will be considerably reduced. This letter is in order to bring the matter home to parties interested as speedily as possible. Below is a list of the Wardens to date. If any of the ex-Wardens have now enlarged photos just forward as they are and they will be framed to correspond with the others. It is hoped that all will respond promptly.

The present Warden has written to me saying that if the scheme goes through he will contribute a large picture of our King to be hung in Council walls. I will be pleased to give enquirers any information in my power.

I remain,
Yours sincerely,
W. G. WILSON,
County Clerk.

GO TO YOUR DRUGGIST FOR MEDICINES.

When you want groceries, go to your grocer, for he is an authority on that line of goods. When it is a matter of dentistry which is one that is wise to consult your druggist, who has spent years in the study of his profession and knows from practical experience just what may be expected from the use of any medicine.

Ask your druggist about Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, for instance, and he will tell you that there is no medicine which is more strongly recommended as a means of overcoming liver complaint biliousness, kidney derangements and constipation.

Druggists are ever ready to endorse Dr. Chase's medicines, because there at once comes to mind so many cases in which these preparations have brought about cures—often remarkable ones.

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are sold by all druggists, price 25 cents per box. 29d MORVEN'S W. M. S.

On the afternoon of July 11th, the Woman's Missionary Society of Morven, held their monthly meeting, at the home of the President, Mrs. Edward Kayler. A large number of members were present, and a very helpful and interesting programme was rendered. This is the second year Mrs. Kayler has been President and at every meeting she has taken great pains in adding something special to the suggested programme, which has been enjoyed by all. After the programme the President treated the ladies to cake, coffee and sandwiches. A pleasant time was spent and all voted Mrs. Kayler an ideal hostess.

SPECIALLY GOOD.

All of you who are anticipating a holiday trip this summer should go through the Thousand Islands, on Saturday, August 3d, by the fast sailing steamer Taruna; leaving Desoronto at 10.15 a.m., and Picton at 12.15 p.m. Returning will leave the Islands at 6 o'clock on Monday morning. Members of choirs and young people's societies are especially invited. Management Committee — W. Ed. Stevens, J. G. Whiten, B.A., B.Ph., W. J. Armstrong.

A WARNING.

But few who handle fire arms are aware the distance a ball will carry from a 32-calibre rifle. One day last week Mr. J. M. Richmond, of Forest Mills, took down a rifle of the size mentioned, to fire a crow in his cornfield. Before he fired, he took a look beyond the bush on which the bird sat, but there was nothing in sight. When he fired he tipped the crow over, but only stunned it. Shortly afterwards he was surprised to learn that the bullet had travelled across the width of four hundred acres, and embedded itself in the kitchen door of a neighbor, Mr. Ira Bradshaw. Mrs. Bradshaw was at the time in the act of opening the door, and received quite a shock. This should prove a lesson to parties using weapons of this description.

ANNUAL EXCURSION.

The steamer of Q. Ry. Employees will this year take their excursion through the Bay of Quinte, passing Belleville, Consecon Park, and stopping at Massassaga Park, Deseronto, Anne and Belleville. FIRST WIFE ALLEGES FRAUD IN DIVORCE.

The Sioux City (Iowa) publishes a Sioux Falls, South Dakota, special which states that the first wife of Dr. Acland Oronhyatekha, Supreme Chief Ranger, alleges that there was perjury and fraud in the divorce from her, and it is said the decree may be vacated. The case comes to trial before Justice Jones, of the Circuit Court.

When the divorce case first came to trial he was refused a decree by Judge Jones. But about six months later, in August, 1903, he renewed his application, and after a hearing was granted a divorce. In this instance, as well as on the first occasion, no defence was offered, service upon the defendant was by publication.

Within a few days after securing the divorce, Dr. Oronhyatekha was married at Canton, S.D., about twenty miles south of Sioux Falls, to Therese Henrike Hansen, whom, one report has it, he first met while he was travelling in Australia.

Should the divorce proceedings be vacated the valuable estate of the dead chief will go to his first wife.

12th July Celebration at Camden East.

A large crowd gathered to celebrate the 12th of July at Camden East. The weather was quite favorable, with exception to the slight shower at 1 p.m., and in the evening. At 1.30 p.m. the procession was formed, consisting of the following lodges:

Enterprise Brass Band.
L. O. L. No. 150, Tamworth, fife and drum band.
L. O. L. No. 201, Strathcona, fife and drum band.
L. O. L. No. 358, Napanee, fife and drum band.
L. O. L. No. 431, Enterprise, fife and drum band.
L. O. L. No. 490, Croydon, fife and drum band.
L. O. L. No. 524, Roblin, fife and drum band.
Yarker Brass Band.
L. O. L. No. 532, Colebrook, fife and drum band.
L. O. L. No. 756, Centreville, fife and drum band.
L. O. L. No. 1113, Lime Lake, fife and drum band.
L. O. L. No. 1244, Forest Mills, fife and drum band.
L. O. L. No. 368, Camden East, fife and drum band.
'Prentice Boys' Lodge, who marched through the village to the grove, kindly provided by Mr. Stewart, where addresses were delivered by prominent Orangemen.

The County Master, Fred. Sexsmith, called the meeting to order, and the following were invited to the platform:

W. Bro. James Reid, Past Co. Master.
W. Bro. Chas. Riley, Past Co. Master.
W. Bro. Walter Lasher, District Master.
W. Bro. J. R. Lochhead, District Master.
W. Bro. Rev. G. S. White, Co. Chap.
W. Bro. Rev. Dixon.
W. Bro. Rev. McConnell.
W. Bro. Rev. Farnsworth.
W. Bro. Rev. DeMille.
W. Bro. Rev. Wright.

The celebration was a decided success. The platform meeting was interesting, and the addresses delivered were instructive to the members of the Orange order as well as those outside the Association.

The Methodist and Anglican churches worked hard to supply the wants of the people at dinner and tea times, and the provisions supplied were good, and an abundance of it.

The conduct of the people was excellent, and scarcely any disturbance prevailed throughout the day.

Great credit is due to L. O. L. No. 368, Camden East, and the people from that place and surrounding district who assisted them in making it one of the most successful celebrations ever held in the County of Lennox and Addington.

COUNTY LODGE.

The number of deaths occurring among young children during the summer months is simply appalling. In the city of Montreal last year, 1753 children under the age of five years died, and nearly all of these were due to stomach and bowel troubles. With ordinary care most of these little lives might have been saved. Watch the food given the little ones. Do not forget, above all, that the milk given is pure, and use an occasional dose of Baby's Own Tablets, a medicine which surpasses all others in preventing and curing stomach and bowel troubles.

FOREST MILLS.

Mr. Ferman Martin and bride have returned to Cleveland, after spending a week with his mother, Mrs. Breeze.

Miss Enid Fraser is spending the holidays with her cousin, Mrs. S. Windover.

Radcliffe, Rev. J. W. Jones, Mr. McGreer and the Incumbent of the Parish. Last Sunday, July 21st, the Foresters of Court Selby attended service in a body.

The Kingsford picnic was a great success in every way this year. The gross proceeds were $200.00.

Services next Sunday as follows: Strathcona, 10.30 a.m. Holy Communion. Kingsford, 3 p.m. Selby, 7.30 p.m.

Cholera and all summer complaints are so quick in their action that the cold hand of death is upon the victims before they are aware that danger is near. If attacked do not delay in getting the proper medicine. Try a dose of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial, and you will get immediate relief. It acts with wonderful rapidity and never fails to effect a cure.

Mr. R. L. Borden's tour of the dominion opens at Halifax, on August 20th, and there will be a meeting at Cape Breton and Annapolis Valley. The opposition leader will proceed to New Brunswick, Quebec and Ontario and then to British Columbia and Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba.

When Knighthood Was In Flower

"No," said Mary, with a despairing shake of the head, as the tears began to flow again. "No, never." And falling upon his knees he caught both her hands in his, sprung to his feet and ran from the room.

Her words showed him the chasm anew. She saw the distance between them even better than he. Evidently it seemed further looking down than looking up. There was nothing left now but flight.

He sought refuge in his own apartments and wildly walked the floor, exclaiming: "Fool, fool that I am to lay up this store of agony to last me all my days! Why did I ever come to this court? God pity me—pity me!" And he fell upon his knees at the bed, burying his face in his arms, his mighty frame shaking as with a palsy.

That same night Brandon told me how he had committed suicide, as he put it, and of his intention to go to Bristol and there await the sailing of the ship and perhaps find a partial resurrection in New Spain.

Unfortunately, he could not start for Bristol at once, as he had given some challenges for a tournament at Richmond and could furnish no good excuse to withdraw them, but he would not leave his room or again see that girl who was driving him mad.

It was better, he thought, and wisely, too, that there be no leave taking, but that he should go without meeting her.

"If I see her again," he said, "I shall have to kill some one, even if it is only myself."

I heard him tossing in his bed all night and when morning came he arose looking haggard enough, but with his determination to run away and see Mary no more stronger than ever upon him.

But Providence or fate or some one ordered it differently, and there was plenty of trouble ahead.

CHAPTER VIII.

THE TROUBLE IN BILLINGSGATE WARD.

ABOUT a week after Brandon's memorable interview with Mary an incident occurred which changed everything and came very near terminating his career in the flower of youth. It also brought about a situation of affairs that showed the difference in the quality of those two persons thrown so marvelously together from their far distant stations at each end of the Index of fortune in a way that reflected very little credit upon the one from the upper end. But before I tell you of that I will relate briefly one or two other matters that had a bearing upon what was done and the motives prompting it.

To begin with, Brandon had kept himself entirely away from the princess ever since the afternoon at the king's archery butts. The next day or so she sighed, but thought little of his absence, then she went and, as usual, began flirting, played and irritable.

What was left of her judgment told her it was better for them to remain apart, but her longing to see Brandon grew stronger as the prospect of it grew less, and she became angry that it could be gratified. Jane was right; an unsatisfied desire with Mary was torture. Even her sense of the great distance between them had begun to fade, and when she so wished for him and he did not obey their positions seemed to be reversed. At the end of the third day she sent for him to come to her rooms, but he by a mighty effort sent back a brief note saying that he could not and ought not to go. This, of course, threw Mary into a great passion, for she judged him by herself, a very common but dangerous method of judgment, and thought that if he did not all he did he would throw prudence to the winds and come to her, as she knew she would go to him if she could. It did not occur to her that Brandon knew himself well enough to be sure he would never go to New Spain if he allowed another grain of temptation to fall into his balance against him, but would remain in London to love hopelessly, to try to win a hopeless cause and end it all by placing his head upon the block.

It required all his strength, even now to hold fast his determination to go to New Spain. He had reached his limit. He had a fund of that most useful of all wisdom, knowledge of self, and knew his limitations, a little too far for concerning which nine men out of ten are all their lives in blissless ignorance.

Mary, who was no more given to self analysis than her pet linnet, did not appreciate Brandon's potent reasons and was in a flaming passion when she received his answer. Rage and humiliation completely smothered for the time her affection, and she said to herself over and over again: "I hate the lowborn wretch. Oh, to think what I have permitted!" It seemed only too clear that she had been too quick to give, no very comforting thought to a proud girl even though a mistaken one.

As the days went by and Brandon did not come her anger cooled a degree and pain her heart began to ache, but her sense of injury grew stronger day by day and she thought she was becoming a doubt the most ill used of women.

The negotiations for Mary's marriage with old Louis XII, of France were beginning to be an open secret about the court. The Duc de Longueville, who had been held by Henry for some time as a sort of hostage from the French king, had opened negotiations by handing the flickering Francis letters of Louis with descriptions of Mary's beauty. As there was a prospect of a new emperor soon and as the imperial head had of late been making a most vehement buzzing in Henry's bonnet, he encouraged De Longueville and thought it would be a good time to purchase the help of France at the cost of his beautiful sister and a handsome dower. Many of course had not been consulted, and although she had conked her brother out of other marriage projects Henry had gone about this as if he were in earnest, and it was thought throughout the court that Mary's coaxings would be all in vain—a fear which she herself had begun to share, notwithstanding her usual self confidence.

She hated the thought of the marriage and dreaded it as she would death itself, though she said nothing to any one but Jane and was holding her forces in reserve for a grand attack. She was preparing the way by being very sweet and kind to Henry.

Now, all of this, coming upon the heels of her trouble with Brandon, made her most wretched indeed. For the first time in her life she began to feel suffering—that great broadener, in fact maker, of human character.

Above all, there was an alarming sense of uncertainty in everything. She could hardly bring herself to believe that Brandon would really go to New Spain and that she would actually lose him, although she did not want him at all—that is, as a prospective husband. Flashes of all sorts of wild schemes had begun to shoot through her anger and grief when she stared in the face the prospect of her double separation from him, her marriage to another and the countless miles of fathomless sea that would be between them. She could endure anything better than uncertainty. A menacing future is the keenest of all tortures for any of us to bear, but especially for a girl like Mary. Death itself is not so terrible as the fear of it.

Now, about this time there lived over in Billingsgate Ward, the worst part of London, a Jewish sorceress named Grouche. He was also an astrologer and had of late grown into great fame as prophet of the future—a fortune teller.

His fame rested on several remarkable predictions which had been fulfilled to the letter, and I really think the man had some wonderful powers, for he said he was half Jew, half gipsy, and, if there is alchemy in the mingling of blood, that combination should surely produce something peculiar. The city folk were said to have visited him in great numbers, and, notwithstanding the priests and bishops all condemned him as an imp of Satan and a follower of witchcraft, many fine people, including some court ladies, continued to go there by stealth in order to take a dangerous, inquisitive peep into the future.

Mary had long wanted to see this Grouche, at first out of mere curiosity, but Henry, who was very moral—with other people's—considered it against not think of permitting it. Two ladies, Lady Chesterfield and Lady Ormond, both good and virtuous women, had been discreet enough to visit a vault and had been disgraced and expelled from court in the most cruel manner by order of the king himself.

Now, added to Mary's old time desire to see Grouche, was a new desire to learn the outcome of the present momentous complication of affairs that touched her so closely.

She could not wait for Time to unfold himself and drop his budget of events as he traveled, but she must plunge ahead of him and know beforehand the stores of the fates, an intrusion they surely resent. I need not tell you that was Mary's only object in going, nor that her heart was as pure as a babe's, quite as chaste and almost as innocent. It is equally true that the large proportion of persons who visited Grouche made his soothsaying an excuse. The thought of how wretched life would be with Louis had put into Mary's mind the thought of how sweet it would be with Brandon. Then came the wish that Brandon had been a prince or even a great English nobleman, and then leaped up, all rainbow hued, the hope that he might yet, by reason of his own great virtues, rise to all of these and become the king's wife. But at the threshold of this fair castle came knocking the thought that perhaps he did not care for her and had deceived her to gain her favors. Then she flushed with anger and swore to herself she hated him and hoped never to see his face again. And the castle faded and was wafted away to the realms of airy nothingness.

Ah, how people will sometimes lie to themselves, and sensible people at that!

So Mary wanted to see Grouche, first, through curiosity, in itself a stronger motive than we give it credit for; second, to learn if she would be able to dissuade Henry from the French marriage and perhaps catch a hint how to do it, and last, but by no means least, to discover the state of Brandon's heart toward her.

By this time the last named motive was strong enough to draw her any whither, although she would not acknowledge it, even to herself, and in truth hardly knew it, so full are we of things we know not of.

So she determined to go to see Grouche secretly and was confident she could arrange the visit in such a way that it would never be discovered.

One morning I met Jane, who told me with troubled face that she and Mary were going to London to make some purchases, would lodge at Bridewell House and go over to Billingsgate that evening to consult Grouche. Mary had taken the whim into her willful head, and Jane could not dissuade her.

The court was all at Greenwich, and nobody at Bridewell, so Mary thought they could disguise themselves as orange girls and easily make the trip without any one being the wiser.

It was then, as now, no safe matter for even a man to go unattended through the best parts of London after dark, to say nothing of Billingsgate, that nest of water rats and cutthroats. But Mary did not realize the full danger of the trip and would, as usual, allow nobody to tell her.

She had threatened Jane with all sorts of vengeance if she divulged her secret, and Jane was miserable enough between her fears on either hand, for Mary, though the younger, held her in complete subjection. Despite her fear of Mary, Jane asked me to go to London and follow them at a distance, unknown to the princess. I was to be on duty that night at a dance given in honor of the French envoys who had just arrived, bringing with them commission of special ambassador to De Longueville to negotiate the treaty of marriage, and it was impossible for me to go. Mary was going partly to avoid this ball, and her willful persistency made Henry very angry. I regretted that I could not go, but I promised Jane I would send Brandon in my place, and he would answer the purpose of protection far better than I. I suggested that Brandon take with him a man, but Jane, with a new mortal fear of Mary, would not listen to it. So it was agreed that Brandon should meet Jane at a given hour and learn the particulars, and this plan was carried out.

Brandon went up to London and saw Jane, and before the appointed time hid himself behind a hedge near the private gate through which the girls intended to take their departure from Bridewell.

They would leave about dusk and return, so Mary said, before it grew dark.

The citizens of London at that time paid very little attention to the law requiring them to hang out their lights, and when it was dark it was dark.

Scarcely was Brandon safely ensconsed behind a clump of arbor vitæ when whom should he see coming down the path toward the gate but his grace, the Duke of Buckingham. He was met by one of the Bridewell servants who was in attendance upon the princess.

"Yes, your grace, this is the gate," said the girl. "You can hide yourself and watch them as they go. They will pass out on this path. As I said I do not know where they are going. I only overheard them say they would go out at this gate just before dark. I am sure they go on some errand of gallantry, which your grace will soon learn, I make no doubt."

"Yes, your grace, this is the gate."

He replied that he would take care of that.

Brandon did not see where Buckingham hid himself, but soon the two innocent adventurers came down the path attired in the short skirts and bonnets of orange girls and let themselves out at the gate. Buckingham followed them, and Brandon quickly followed him. The girls passed through a little postern in the wall opposite Bridewell House and walked rapidly up Fleet ditch, climbed Ludgate hill, passed Paul's church, turned toward the river down Bennett hill, to the left on Thames street, then on past the bridge, following Lower Thames street to the neighborhood of Billingsgate, where they took an alley leading up toward East Cheap to Grouche's house.

It was a brave thing for the girl to do and showed the determined spirit that dwelt in her soft white breast. Aside from the dangers, there was enough to deter any woman, I should think.

They wept all the way over, but Mary never flinched.

There were great mudholes where one sank ankle deep, for no one ever in the street at that time, strangely enough, preferring to pay the sixpence fine per square yard for leaving it undone. At one place, Brandon told me, a load of hay blocked the streets, compelling them to squeeze between the houses and the hay. He could hardly believe the girls had passed that way, as he had not always been able to keep them in view, but had sometimes to follow them by watching Buckingham.

So Mary wanted to see Grouche, first, through curiosity, in itself a stronger motive than we give it credit for; second, to learn if she would be able to dissuade Henry from the French marriage and perhaps catch a hint how to do it, and last, but by no means least, to discover the state of Brandon's heart toward her.

One of the men on foot fell dead.

A narrow jostling of the wall, a foot or two in width, a sort of living buttress, gave him a little advantage, and up into the slight shelter of the corner thus formed he thrust the girls and with his back to them faced his unequal foe with drawn sword. Fortunately the position allowed only one horseman to attack them. Two men on foot would have been less in each other's way and much more effective. The men, however, stuck to their horses, and one of them pressed the attack, striking at Brandon most viciously. In being dark and the distance deceptive, the horseman's sword at last struck the wall, a flash of sparks flying in its trail, and lucky it was or this story would have ended here. Thereupon Brandon thrust his sword into the horse's throat, causing it to rear backward, plunging and lunging into the street, where it fell, holding its rider by the leg against the cobblestones of a little gutter.

A cry from the fallen horseman brought his companion to his side and gave Brandon an opportunity to escape with the girls. Of this he took advantage, you may be sure, for one of his mottoes was that the greatest fool in the world is he who does an early in life learn how and when to run.

In the light of the sparks from the sword's edge upon the wall, brief as it was, Brandon recognized the face of Buckingham, from which the mask had fallen. Of this he did not speak to any one till long afterward, and his silence was almost his undoing.

Had the fact been spoken or unspoken many have the very deuce in it either way!

The girls were nearly dead from fright, and in order to make any sort of progress Brandon had to carry the smaller of the two. He also thought they were out of danger. Jane soon recovered, but Mary did not seem anxious to walk and lay her head down upon Brandon's shoulder, apparently contented enough.

In a few minutes Jane said: "If you can walk now, my lady, I think you had better. We shall soon be near Grouche's house, and we some one is sure to be standing at the door."

Mary said nothing in reply to Jane, but allowed a step or two behind at a narrow crossing whispered:

"Forgive me, forgive me. I will do any penance you ask. I am unworthy to speak to you now. I owe you my life and more—and more a thousand times."

At this she lifted her arm and placed her hand upon his collar and neck. She then learned for the first time that he was wounded, and the tears came softly as she slipped from his arms to the ground. She walked beside him quietly for a little time, then, taking his hand in both of hers, gently lifted it to her lips and laid it upon her breast. Half an hour afterward Brandon left the girls at Bridewell House, went over to the bridge where he had left his horse at a hostelry, and rode down to Greenwich.

So Mary had made her trip to Grouche's, but it was labor worse than lost. Grouche had told her nothing she wanted to know, though much that he supposed she would like to hear. He had told her that she had many lovers, a fact which her face and form would easily account enough for. He informed her also that she had a lowborn lover, and in order to put a little evil in with the good fortune and give what he said an air of truth he added to Mary's state of unrest more than he thought by telling her that the lowborn lover was false. He thought to flatter her by predicting that she would soon marry a very great prince or nobleman, the indication being in favor of the former, and in place of being glad her happy she wished the wretched soothsayer in the deepest pit—he and all his prophecies; herself, too, for going to him. His guesses were pretty good—that is, admitting he did not know who Mary was, which she at least supposed was the case; so Mary went home slightly comforted and moaned because she had gone to Grouche's. It had added infinitely to the pain of which her heart was already too full and made her thoroughly wretched and unhappy.

CHAPTER IX.

PUT NOT YOUR TRUST IN PRINCESSES.

I THOUGHT the king's dance that night would never end, so fond were the Frenchmen of our fair ladies, and I was more than anxious to see Brandon and learn the issue of the girls' escapade, as I well knew its danger attending it. All things, however, must end, so early in the morning I hastened to our

GET THE BEST.

The Best Flour, Dafoe's Nonesuch, Dafoe's Manitoba Patent

By numerous tests by the best bakers the above brands of flour have been proved to be the best flours in the market.

When buying flour ask your grocer to supply you from some mill, thereby procuring fresh flour. Stocks that are carried over cheaper than the products of the Western mills, which are by reason of the enormous distance of miles at great expense, and usually long in transit, are not as fresh as local flour.

The grower complains if the farmer or the merchant sends to Toronto for supplies. The points for an article he can get at his doors. The Dafoe Mills are only a few miles away, and they draw from within hundreds of miles around. Their flour is therefore the home product for, every time it is made into guaranteed.

Choice Cornmeal and Buckwheat Flour always on hand. Feed, Chop and Oatmeal. Exchange with the best feed mills known to the trade. A fair stock of Salt, Coal and Coke. Prices always in the market for the purchase of all kinds of grain.

Our Splendid $75,000 Stock

TO BE REDUCED TO THE LOWEST EBB NOW.

GOOD GOODS AT RIDICULOUSLY LOW PRICES

THE WHY OF IT?

Well—you have a perfect right to know the why of it; because this is your store—it has grown so large and so necessary to each one of you, that you look upon it as your store.

Most of you know that we purchased this block (formerly known as the Mills Block) the transfer of the property taking effect the 1st day of July.

We will occupy the entire Block—adding to our former space the Fennel Hardware Store and the two flats above. To give you an idea of the extent of floor space that will be in actual use by us—if it was all on the ground floor, taking the average depth of the stores, it would reach from our own corner on Centre street here to Wallace's Drug Store.

IMPROVEMENTS.

Our plans are to make this the most modern—most convenient—most attractive store in the whole of Eastern Ontario.

The whole front will be torn out, and an entirely new Modern Front will be put in. The main entrance will be on the corner, and will be very attractive. The entrance to the Men's Department will be about where the old Fennel Hardware Store entrance is now. The contract for this new front has been given to one of the best contractors in Ontario, a man who is constantly engaged in this work and knows just what is required. They are at work now in the factories preparing the material and will soon be on hand with it. This new front will include a show window running from the main entrance on the corner up Centre Street.

The next contract which will probably be let, is that for heating the entire Block by steam, which will be a great saving from heating such a large place with furnaces and stoves.

Later on the walls between our Dry Goods Store and our Men's Store, and between our Men's Store and the one formerly used as a Hardware store, will be removed.

These improvements are the most extensive of any that have been attempted by any firm outside of the largest cities, and they require the greatest architectual skill. The whole work is under the immediate direction of one of our greatest Canadian Architects, and he will see that it is rightly done.

Now This is Your Opportunity to Secure Good Goods at Ridiculously Low Prices.

We must of necessity sacrifice a great deal of our immense stock in order to get in shape for these workmen. They will crowd us back from the front, and we are cramped even now in every Department. Too much stock means sacrificed profits in order to reduce the amount. We will start the ball rolling with the following

THE NOBILITY OF MAN

FAMOUS TEMPERANCE ADVOCATE AND SECRET OF HIS SUCCESS.

INTENSITY AND ZEAL IN WORK

Believed In His Fellowmen—Image of God Never Wholly Effaced—Possibilities of Reform However Degraded—Faith In Christ's Power to Save a Potent Factor—Successful Rescue Work.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1907, by Frederick Dixon, Toronto, at the Dept. of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 8th.—In this sermon the preacher draws a lesson of universal interest from the life and death of Francis Murphy, the famous temperance reformer. The text is II. Timothy iv, 7, "I have fought a good fight."

Even under the brightest and happiest conditions it is a sad sight to see a great man unbuckle his armor and lay down the battlaxe he has wielded in the front of life's struggle. When John Adams was about to be inaugurated President of the United States the assembled multitude had no cheers and vociferations for the new chieftain. Their thoughts were with the retiring leader. There were sobs and aching hearts for him who was to lay down the tasks of public life after forty-five years consecrated to his country's service. All eyes were turned upon the tall, commanding figure of him who would henceforth be known as "First in war, first in peace and first in the hearts of his countrymen." When John Adams lifted his hand over the sacred book and took the oath of office George Washington slowly turned to go into his seat and efface himself from public notice. The people followed him with moistened eyes and tear stained cheeks. A great moan went over the assembled hosts, like the murmuring of many waters. He turned in the doorway and looked back a moment and then waved a silent farewell. And all up and down the lines went the valedictory: "God bless him! God bless him! God bless him!"

When Andrew Jackson handed over the reins of Government to Martin Van Buren and started home, his journey to his beloved Hermitage was like a long funeral procession. The people came out from the towns and villages and cities to greet him. Every one wanted a last look at the face of their late ruler. With his white hair, tall, lithe form and stern features, he towered above the people who crowded around him. Wherever he looked he saw only men and women who have regretted the day that this sagacious American was no longer to lead them in the councils of peace and of war.

When William E. Gladstone, after half a century in the service of his country, resigned the premiership and passed out of the House of Commons for the last time, cold as the marble arose and uncovered. Those men, no matter to what political party they belonged, knew that a political genius and one of the most sagacious statesmen the British Empire had ever produced was about to leave the public arena and pass the Indian summer of his earthly days in retirement. His party knew that there was no one to fill his place, and they lamented his going.

After a great leader of men has been working for the cause of God and low countrymen for twenty or thirty or forty years the world may regret to lose his services, but it has to lose to the inevitable and recognize the right of the tired soldier to say, "No! No!" says the world, "though we may grieve much to see our beloved leader fall out from the battle, they have earned their rest and they have a right to peace." So we look upon the Mount Vernons and the Hermitages and the Hawardens as the havens and harbors of life, where tired men can rest and be at peace with those who love them and whom they love.

Now, the true Christian looks upon death as a going home to receive his eternal reward. When Paul said: "I have fought a good fight. I have finished my course. I have kept the faith. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness," he meant simply this: "Friends, for years I have been engaged in an exhausting struggle. I am physically worn out. I am looking for the reward Christ promised.-. Let me go and be at peace with Christ, which is far better." So we have a right to look upon death to-day as ascending to a throne. It is going home. It is going to one of the mansions of heaven which Christ has prepared for those that love him.

I was never more impressed with this fact than when I sat by the bedside of the modern apostle of temperance, Francis Murphy. He was one of the great temperance leaders of this country. We mourned his failing strength. His work seemed to be so important. It did seem as though we could not give him up; but, as the time came for his departure, I visited him and prayed with him. Then after I had finished, with his weak voice he continued my prayer as follows: "O God, I thank thee that I have not an enemy in the whole world. I thank thee that the world is filled with good people. If it be thy will, let me go back to my work, but if not, I have so many dear ones on the other side, take me to them and to thy glory.- Yes, Francis Murphy, we know what was in your heart. Lying upon your sickbed, you could see the dear departed friends coming out to greet you. You could hear the heavenly chorus chanting a welcome for your celestial advent. Your death was not to be an obliteration. It was to be an ascension. Hail, thou ascended spirit! We to-day rejoice with thee in thy heavenly rapture. Hail, O thou enthroned warrior! Hail!

When Stonewall Jackson, the chivalrous Prince Rupert of the Confederate army, was dying, shot by the bullets of his own men at Chancellorsville, he had a beautiful vision of heaven. He saw a smooth flowing river whose waters could moisten his parched and fevered lips. He saw his loved ones on the opposite bank waving to him in salutation. And in rapture he raised himself and cried out, "Let us pass over to the other side and rest under the shadows of the trees," and then fell back dead. So Francis Murphy, during his last days of earth, caught a glimpse of the trees of life growing by that river which is clear as crystal, coming out of the throne of God and of the Lamb. He saw the healing leaves. He said: "There are so many dear ones beyond. O God, if it is thy will, take me to them and to thy glory." Yes, to-day thy prayer is answered. Thou art with the departed kindred and friends. Thou wilt stay with them until the time comes for us to depart, and then thou shalt come down to greet us, as they came to greet thee.

But I am not going to preach a funeral sermon. I am not going to sound a dirge or ring a death knell. But I am going to strike up a hallelujah chorus. If the cold lips of the loved friend could speak, I know he would have me do as I am doing. There was not a minor key in all his music. And so to-day, instead of talking about how bad we feel at his going, I am going to try to analyze the power of this one of the greatest temperance workers of our time, so that we may be encouraged in our work for the same Master and be stimulated to more vigorous effort by the example of this strenuous leader.

In the first place, I would place my finger upon the greatest source of Francis Murphy's power and tell you that the chief reason why this successful temperance worker was so many trophies for the abstinence cause was because he believed in the nobility of man. He believed that, no matter how flagrant the sins of the fallen outcast, no matter how low or vile a human being had become, deep down in that human heart were some traces of the image of God. Murphy never despaired of any human being, however drunken or degraded he might be. Here was a man—one of the race Christ came to save—and he believed Christ could save him. The degrading obstacle of his filthy or ignominious record was the thing that Murphy tried to remove, so that the power and influence of Christ could reach the poor, helpless creature.

It does not require very much genius to find flaws in a man's nature. It does not require wonderful erudition to magnify the faults of mankind. Any herd of swine can root out a few grains, if it is possible for them to squeeze through a gap in the fence. It does not take much of a frost to kill all the fair apple blossoms in the springtime; neither does it take much labor to develop a field of Canada thistles in the place where wheat and corn and barley ought to grow. But it does take the genius of a horticulturist to find latent buds and develop them. It does take agricultural science to put the right kind of fertilizer on the ground after the spring plowing. And it does takes the marvelous grace of God to find the latent buds of purity and truth and love and manhood in the corrupt heart of man and to develop them aright for God. And this is always the work of a successful evangelist of Christ. This was the secret of Murphy's success. He believed in Christ and he believed in men.

And parallel to this same line of thought is another fact which inspired Francis Murphy to seek the most depraved of men. He knew that the victim of the intemperance cup was in many cases a man worth saving. The very characteristics of the man that had led to his degradation—generosity, his good fellowship, his friendliness—were the characteristics that would make him a successful worker if he was delivered from his thraldom. The intensity and zeal that made Saul a persecutor were traits which made Saul a successful apostle when he was converted. And Francis Murphy had arrived at this belief by looking at the history of his own life. Have you ever heard him describe the scenes in his wrecked home? When the civil war broke out, he, like other Irishmen, was eager to take part in it. At the public call to arms he shouldered the musket and went to the front. He was not struck by the enemy's bullets, but, like Alexander the Great, he was overthrown by the temptations of the enemy.

Then after the war was ended in order to make a living for his little family he went to Portland in Maine. In other words, the devil had left the business and led him into the occupation which would develop it. He put a whisky bottle into his hand and said to him: "Stick until your manhood is gone. Drink until you come home to your wife and babes with the fierce passion of a brute. Drink until the vilest sot in the gutter is no viler than you." And with that strong personality of his, he never did anything halfway. He drank until he went down, down into the lowest depths of degradation. When the change came and Murphy "came to himself" as the prodigal, he could not forget the pit from which he had been lifted. As he looked on the sodden, depraved wretches who were brought to his meetings he saw in them the victims of the gutter and said to himself, "The power that delivered me from the liver even this poor creature," and he went to work with confidence for the man's reformation. Would to God that some of the men whom he was instrumental in saving might take up his work and that men might have reason to say, "The power of Elijah doth rest on Elisha."

But there was another fact about his wonderful life that made Francis Murphy one of the greatest temperance advocates of his time. He not only believed in men, but he was ready to thank God for all the divine things which God had put in surrounded. His whole life after his conversion and consecration to the divine Master was a continual exercise of praise. He always commenced his public services with the coronation hymn, and he always closed with the doxology of "Praise God, from whom all blessings flow." Wherever he met him, on the street, or in the house, or in the church, or anywhere, the two words which were most often upon his lips were: "Thank God! Thank God! Thank God!" Sometimes, like a bashful boy, he would slip into my meetings hoping that I should not see him. He seemed to long sometimes to be an ascension. Hail, thou ascended spirit! We to-day rejoice with thee in thy heavenly rapture. Hail, O thou enthroned warrior! Hail!

When Stonewall Jackson, the chivalrous Prince Rupert of the Confederate army, was dying, shot by the bullets of his own men at Chancellorsville, he had a beautiful vision of heaven. He saw a smooth flowing river whose waters could moisten his parched and fevered lips. He saw his loved ones on the opposite bank waving to him in salutation. And in rapture he raised himself and cried out, "Let us pass over to the other side and rest under the shadows of the trees," and then fell back dead. So Francis Murphy, during his last days of earth, caught a glimpse of the trees of life growing by that river which is clear as crystal, coming out of the throne of God and of the Lamb. He saw the healing leaves. He said: "There are so many dear ones beyond. O God, if it is thy will, take me to them and to thy glory." Yes, to-day thy prayer is answered. Thou art with the departed kindred and friends. Thou wilt stay with them until the time comes for us to depart, and then thou shalt come down to greet us, as they came to greet thee.

But I am not going to preach a funeral sermon. I am not going to sound a dirge or ring a death knell. But I am going to strike up a hallelujah chorus. If the cold lips of the loved friend could speak, I know he would have me do as I am doing. There was not a minor key in all his music. And so to-day, instead of talking about how bad we feel at his going, I am going to try to analyze the power of this one of the greatest temperance workers of our time, so that we may be encouraged in our work for the same Master and be stimulated to more vigorous effort by the example of this strenuous leader.

In the first place, I would place my finger upon the greatest source of Francis Murphy's power and tell you that the chief reason why this successful temperance worker was so many trophies for the abstinence cause was because he believed in the nobility of man. He believed that, no matter how flagrant the sins of the fallen outcast, no matter how low or vile a human being had become, deep down in that human heart were some traces of the image of God. Murphy never despaired of any human being, however drunken or degraded he might be. Here was a man—one of the race Christ came to save—and he believed Christ could save him. The degrading obstacle of his filthy or ignominious record was the thing that Murphy tried to remove, so that the power and influence of Christ could reach the poor, helpless creature.

It does not require very much genius to find flaws in a man's nature. It does not require wonderful erudition to magnify the faults of mankind. Any herd of swine can root out a few grains, if it is possible for them to squeeze through a gap in the fence. It does not take much of a frost to kill all the fair apple blossoms in the springtime; neither does it take much labor to develop a field of Canada thistles in the place where wheat and corn and barley ought to grow. not only believed in men, but he was ready to thank God for all the divine things which God had put in surrounded. His whole life after his conversion and consecration to the divine Master was a continual exercise of praise. He always commenced his public services with the coronation hymn, and he always closed with the doxology of "Praise God, from whom all blessings flow." Wherever he met him, on the street, or in the house, or in the church, or anywhere, the two words which were most often upon his lips were: "Thank God! Thank God! Thank God!" Sometimes, like a bashful boy, he would slip into my meetings hoping that I should not see him. He seemed to long sometimes to be called to the pulpit. He would come in quietly and stay listening until some word of Scripture or of prayer touched him. Then before he knew it, "Thank God!" would be ringing from his church pew. Then every one would smile and say, "That's Francis Murphy," because no one could ever say "Thank God" as Francis Murphy did. During all his last sickness, in his delirium, he would keep rubbing his hands and with a sweet smile keep murmuring, "Thank God!" Why, do you know, I have heard him say "Thank God" so much that I believe he has got me into the same glorious habit of thanking God for everything. And whereas I used to count my troubles and name them one by one, now, under the influence of this saintly spirit, I have begun to count my blessings. And so my blessings are crowding me in multitudinous numbers, I am saying, "Thank God."

But, laughing at these personal incidents, we would take a step forward and analyze the secret of Murphy's work as a temperance reformer. How did Francis Murphy win thousands and tens of thousands to the better life? Through continually emphasizing the one all-overwhelmingly driving home to the sinful heart man's utter impossibility to God. He was saying: "Christ came to save you. Christ will save you now. By his help with you come forward and sign the pledge and make a covenant with Christ!" He did not bother much about prohibitive laws. He did not work much through legislative halls. But he tried to bring the sinful heart of man in close touch with a loving and a forgiving Saviour.

Now, we have been hearing a great deal about the temperance problem of this day. We have heard about the prohibition movement and the anti-saloon movement and the women's temperance organizations, and they are all good. No one wished all these different movements godspeed more than did Francis Murphy. But, though Francis Murphy was in sympathy with any movement that would help stop the liquor evil, he put the chief emphasis of his labors upon bringing the individual man in touch with Christ and saving man as an individual and not in the bulk. And Francis Murphy was right. This world will never be saved from the curse of intoxicating drink through the legislative halls of our states and national capitals. It it is to be saved at all, it must be saved by the power of Christ and the influence of the pledge. Do you suppose you could make this a Christian nation merely by passing strict Sabbatic laws or by building new churches on every street corner? No. Temperance laws are right in themselves. But, after all, the mighty, best work of the temperance reformer is the work of getting men to sign the pledge and make a covenant with Christ. Samuel Hadley and Jerry McAuley did and Samuel Hadley and Jerry McAuley did, and that is to bring sinful men by the old fashioned pledge in touch with the saving grace of our Lord Jesus Christ.

But there is one more thought that forces itself upon us. Francis Murphy became the successful temperance reformer he was because he first made a convert and get a man to sign the pledge that at once put that man on his feet and brought him to the platform and made him go to work and save other drunkards. No sooner did Francis Murphy get a Gospel grip upon a man than at once he pulled him upon his feet and made him go to work for temperance. My brother, can you say to-day from the divine lesson? Can we not learn that we are developing spiritually not more by what Christ does for us than by what we are willing to do for Christ?

How many of those whom Francis Murphy brought to Christ must have been on the other side to greet him! Perhaps that welcome he had pictured in a dream which his daughter had the night when he was about to pass away. She dreamt she was looking up into the heavens. It was a beautiful, clear night and the twinkling of the stars seemed to be everywhere. Every star seemed to her to represent the shining face of some redeemed soul. Her father had won to Christ. Oh, there were thousands and tens of thousands of these smiling faces! And right in the centre of all she saw her father's face. It was the brightest and the sweetest of smiles. And there he was, surrounded by a constellation of shining faces, each one a star in his crown.

It was useless to resist or to evade, so I awakened Brandon and took the serpentine. Hege he read his warrant to arrest Charles Brandon, Esq., for the murder of two citizens of London, perpetrated, done and committed upon the body of such and such a day of this year of our Lord 1514. Brandon's hat had been found by the side of the dead men, and the authorities had received information from a high source that Brandon was the guilty person. That high source was evidently Buckingham.

When the sergeant found Brandon covered with wounds, there was no longer any doubt, and although hardly able to lift his hand, he was forced to dress and go with them. A horse litter was procured, and we all started to London.

While Brandon was dressing I said I would at once and awaken the king, who, I knew, would pardon the offense when he heard my story, but Brandon at the sergeant to leave us to ourselves for a short time, and closed the door.

"Dickon, say nothing of the sort, Cadoken," said he. "If you tell the king I will declare there is not one word of truth in your story. There is only one person in the world who knows of that night's happenings, and if she does not they shall remain untold. She will make it all right and sure; you know I would not do her the foul wrong to think for one instant that she will fail. You do not know her. She sometimes seems selfish, but it is thoughtlessness fostered by flattery, and her heart is right. I would trust her with my life. If you breathe a word of what I have told you, you may do more harm than you can ever remedy, and I ask you to say nothing to any one. If the princess would not liberate me—but that is not to be thought of. Never doubt that she can and will do it better than you think. She is all gold."

This, of course, silenced me, as I did not know what new danger I might create or how I might mar the matter if so much wished to mend. I did not tell Brandon that the girls had left Greenwich or of my undefined and perhaps unfounded fear that Mary might not act as he thought she would in a great emergency, but silently helped him to dress and went to London with him and the sergeant.

Brandon was taken to Newgate, the most loathsome prison in London at that time. It being used for felons, while Lollgate was for debtors. Here he was thrown into an underground dungeon foul with vapors that seeped through the old masonry from the moat and river. There were no bed, no stool, no floor, not even a wisp of straw; simply the reeking stone walls, covered with fungus, and the windowless arch overhead. One could hardly conceive a more horrible place in which to spend even a moment. I had glimpses of it by the light of the keeper's lantern as they put him in, and it seemed to me a sin and a shame that any place would have killed me or driven me mad. I protested and begged and tried to bribe, but it was all of no avail. The keeper had been bribed before I arrived. Although it could do no possible good, I was glad to stand outside the prison walls in the drenching rain all the rest of that wretched night that I might be as near as possible to my friend and suffer a little with him.

As soon as the prison gates were opened next morning I again importuned the keeper to give Brandon a more comfortable cell, but his reply was that such crimes had of late become so frequent in London that no favor could be shown those who committed them, and that men like Brandon, who should have known better, deserved the maximum punishment.

I told him he was wrong in this case; that I knew the facts, and everything would be clearly explained that very day and Brandon released.

Robb, Aubrey, Que., says: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets for stomach and bowel troubles with the best results. I feel quite safe when I have the Tablets in the house." A LATE FALL.

Look out for extreme hot weather soon, which will extend clear into November, is the warning given by Amos Fuller, a West Schuylkill farmer. Fuller, who bases his weather predictions on a study of the habits of squirrels, birds and insects, deprecates the action of many farmers, who, in despair of their early vegetable crops reaching maturity are plowing such crops under and sowing others. He declares that there will be plenty of time for the early crops to ripen, and that the farmers who are sacrificing them will regret it later on. Fuller says that large flocks of wild geese, which usually fly northward over the mountains early in April, just made their appearance this week. He declares these flocks are unfailing weather indicators, and that the season being two months late in starting we will not have any fall frost until two months later than usual.

CENTREVILLE LAKE ROAD.

The long looked for rain came last Saturday night, with a severe hail and thunder storm. The lightning struck Mr. Sidney Reid's barn and burned it to the ground, with Alfred Milligan's stone lifter in it.

What might have been a severe accident happened to Mrs. Thomas Cousins, while visiting at her son's, Alfred Cousins, last Friday. Thinking she was going to open the hall door, instead it was the cellar door, and she fell head-first down into the cellar on a cement floor, cutting a bad gash in her lip, spraining her left wrist, and giving herself a bad shaking up.

Miss Florence Wilson, Newburgh, spent last week in this neighborhood visiting friends.

Mr. Will. Shannon and family, of Napanee, are spending their holidays with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Shannon.

Mr. and Mrs. James Milligan and Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Wagar and little son, Theodore, spent Sunday at Reuben Milligan's.

Miss Florence Wilson and Mrs. Reuben Milligan spent Tuesday at Mrs. M. Milligan's, and Wednesday at Mrs. Alf. Cousins'.

Miss Lillie Kelley spent Sunday at Mr. Alf. Milligan's.

Mr. Roy Milligan at Ross Milligan's.

Harold and Jean Wagar are spending a few days with their aunt, Mrs. Levi Vannest.

Mr. James Cousins spent Friday of last week with his daughter, Mrs. Reuben Milligan.

BOIL THE WATER.

On account of the considerable prevalence in Napanee of typhoid fever, and the natural wish of the citizens generally to know as much as possible about the epidemic, its extent, its probable causation and the best means of limiting its spread, a few lines from your M. H. O. at this time may not be out of place.

The number of cases so far reported has been 30. The cases have for the most part been of mild type and without serious complications, and up to the time of writing there have been no deaths. There have been about one-third of the cases of a serious character.

Pollution of the drinking water by sewage containing typhoid germs is the generally accepted cause of the fever. The detection of the germs of typhoid in water is very difficult, and often impossible, so the presence in water of the colon bacillus and other intestinal germs is taken as showing the presence of sewage and the possible contamination by typhoid germs, and in the face of such an epidemic as we have now, makes it desirable to consider all such water as containing the germs of typhoid.

The water from a considerable number of wells in Napanee has been submitted to Dr. W. T. Connell, of Kingston, Government Bacteriologist, for examination, and his report on these wells may be of general interest at the present time.

The report from three of these wells appeared in the Beaver of the 12th. The report from No. 4, Paisley House, is as follows: Shows presence of intestinal bacteria, including B. Coli and streptocci. Sample very seriously contaminated.

No. 5, Market Square, similar report.

No. 6, Lynn well at foot of John st., similar report.

No. 7, Graham well, duplicate of preceding wells.

No. 8, Dafoe well, shows a heavy growth on culture plates, but no distinctive bacteria characteristic of sewage contamination. Sample suspicious but would not give positive report without second examination.

No. 9, Gibbard well, similar to preceding.

No. 10, Meng well, East Ward, fairly good. Best sample sent from Napanee.

In view of the generally unfavorable character of these reports your M. H. O. advises the boiling of all water used for drinking or domestic purposes at the present time, and especially the water from wells where the report is decidedly unfavorable.

It is expected that we will have a visit from the Secretary and one or two other members of the Provincial Board of Health in the near future, and it is hoped that their visit may assist in evolving a system of general sanitation and drainage that will be within the financial reach of the town and reduce to a minimum the danger of recurrence of such an epidemic as we have now.

Ryan's Stores

There is so much we want to tell you about this week that we are taking a full column instead of the usual space, and if this talk properly represents our stores this column will be full of news of genuine interest to many readers. Tax season has been cold and backward and in many lines there are large stocks that must be cleared out quickly to make room for new imports which have already been ordered and will so soon be shipped in

At last the warm weather has come and with it the demand for summer goods, more especially dress goods. Let us tell you something about what we have and then come and see for yourself what splendid offerings we are making.

Ladies' Summer Dress Goods

We have never been in such good position to meet every want in this line. The cold spring gave us ample time to make trade slow but now these goods must go with a rush. Among them are right mention.

Persian Lawns, India Linens, Costume Linens

in white and cream and Batiste, that new goods which is almost as cool and fine as silk and makes such beautiful waists. If you are not already familiar with the qualities of Batiste let us show you how far it surpasses anything in the line of summer waistings.

Dress Trimmings

You may be surprised at the complete line of trimmings we carry, such as Valenciennes Laces, Embroideries and Insertions.

Summer Waists

If you prefer to buy your waists ready to wear you will find here a splendid opportunity to select exactly what you want, at prices ranging from 50cts to $5.00.

Summer Suits

A complete line, Beautifully made up in the latest designs and in variety to meet your taste. Prices are $5 up to $18.00.

Skirts Ready-to-Wear

They come in black, grey and blue. For real warm weather there are some light greys which are particularly stylish looking and are attracting special attention. $2.00 to $5.00.

Long Gloves

Sleeves are made short this season and a wonderfully cheap effect is obtained by the wearing of long gloves. We have beautiful silk gloves in greys, black and white. Elbow lengths are popular.

Men's Clothing

While we are giving special attention this week to women's goods, we must not forget the men, for this store has long stood for what is best in men's clothing. There are good fitting, up-to-date suits here that would cost nearly twice as much at a custom tailor's and besides you have the advantage of seeing just how the suit will look before you buy.

Because of the reputation of our men's clothing department, we have men come twenty to thirty miles to be fitted and some have been coming back for the last thirty years. Prices run from $5 to $12.00.

Men's Shirts

In both soft and starched fronts. All the best brands and most up-to-date goods at from 50cts to $1.00.

But we cannot begin to tell you of all our lines of goods in one advertisement. Our stocks in House Furnishings, Boots and Shoes Hardware, Groceries, etc, were never so complete.

These stores are literally packed with goods that were bought before the advance of prices and the benefits are for you to obtain. We fear no competition in neighboring towns, either in regard to stock or prices and only ask an opportunity to convince you of this by showing the goods.

We pay cash for any produce the farmer has to sell and give the Highest prices.

THE LAST CALL HAS BROUGHT WIDESPREAD REGRETS.

RESSIE E. PRICE.

That death is no respecter of age is plainly seen in the way he entered the home of Samuel S. Brown, of Leinster, on Sunday, July 28th, and first claimed for its victim his infant son, E. G. Price, and on Monday, July 29th, Ressie E., his beloved wife, the sunshine of his home. By the death of Mrs. Brown, not only her husband is greatly bereaved, but also her other relatives and innumerable friends. She was not only a loving and devoted wife, but a Christian woman, abounding in good works, and a friend of all. Her wife should be in her care for the sick and needy. After last nine days' illness, in spite of all medical aid and loving hands could do, Deep Sleep crept peacefully upon her and she passed to the loving arms of her Saviour. It seems so hard to see a sweet young life like Bessie's cut off in the prime, but let us say in our sorrow, as Rev. Dowdall in his sympathetic sermon, "Thy Will be done." She has been called to a higher service, called to be forever with the Lord. We sorrow not for her, for those who have been left behind—for her broken-hearted husband, her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Price, Elmer, her brother, Wm. H. Price, South Dakota, and five sisters, Maggie, Gladys, Kathleen, Inez and Hazel, at home. We must think as Dickens when he says, "It is not on earth that Heaven's justice ends. Think what earth is, compared to the world to which her young spirit has winged its early flight; and say, if one deliberate wish expressed in solemn tones above her bed could call her back to life, which of us would utter it!"

Britain and Russia have amicably adjusted all outstanding differences regarding the Indian and Persian frontiers.

Extensive alterations are being made at the High School. In accordance with instructions from Inspector Spotton, a portion of the Principal's room in the public school will be partitioned off and will be fitted up as a laboratory for the High School. We had every indication of being an excellent game of ball was spoiled by rain at Diamond park on Wednesday afternoon. The teams were from Newburgh and Napanee. Dunn was in the box for locals and Tripp for Napanee. In the first innings Derry hit to Dunn and was thrown out at first. Dunn struck out, likewise VanAlstyne. In the local's half Dunn was out at first. Moore drove a liner to left which Allison gathered in. Shorts singled but was left at second when McDonald was out to Derry. Napanee went out in order in the second. Trimble was out to Lourks. Murphy drove a liner at Wilson which the latter picked up and got over to Shorts in time to make the put out, and Real fanned the air in vain efforts to locate Dunn's shoots. Wilkwise did his locals go out in order in their half Wilson drove a high fly to left which Allison got. McNeil was out at first and Aylsworth fanned. In their half of the third Napanee scored. Tripp smashed out a pretty one to the middle field. McNeil was out at first, Pringle going to second. Real started to steal third, and Moore threw high to catch the runner and he scored, the ball going to the outfield. Trimble smashed a liner to Wilson which the latter got, but not in time to catch the runner who went to second on the throw. Then Derry came to the bat. He started to bat left handed, but after the first ball was pitched, changed his mind and started to bat the other way. Moore took objection to the manner in which Referee Belle, who was umpiring, couldn't see it that way, and Moore refused to play. While both sides were arguing, Inspector Phrvius took a hand in the game and sent the rain in torrents. The game was accordingly called off. It had every indication of being a good game. Most of Selby, was getting ready to take in the game when the rain interfered. Both teams disputed the play which caused the delay, and of course we will if they get some authority upon it.

The teams were — Newburgh — Dunn P., Moore c, Shorts 1st b, McDonald 2d b, Wilson 3d b, McNeil s.s, Aylsworth l.f., Donegal c.f., and Lourks s.s.

JOLLY CAMP LE NID.

The twenty-second anniversary of Camp Le Nid promises to be a record breaker. So far twenty-one members have arrived and more have so. The arrivals are as follows: C. I. T. Gould, F. P. Gates, Jas. Ingram, Chas. Ingram, J. H. Purnell, A. B. Purnell, Mr. McCurdy, C. E. Muller, Clark Mattice, of Baltimore, J. C. Fessenden and Vivian, of Peterboro', F. T. Byers and Stewart Merrett, of Montreal; Prof. Jas. Rusk, of Grimsby, Iowa; Melrose Gould, of North Bay; W. S. Herrington, of Napanee, Mrs. Nolin, H. B. Kent, E. A. Scott, A. P. Taylor, Toronto, and G. W. R. Fallon, of New York. The above are comfortably housed in four cottages and five tents. By degrees the tents are giving way to cottages, although there are a number who still prefer to sleep under canvas. With the pre vailing heavy winds and thunderstorms the buildings have been found very serviceable. We have eight in all, and these with the tents give the point a rather animated appearance. Two new skiffs have been added to our fleet and a new engine installed in our yacht. Chief Engineer Fessenden is kept pretty busy meeting the incoming campers and ferrying supplies over to camp.

Several friends of the camp are at the island, among them being the families of Alex. Macpherson, of Toronto, and T. E. Merrett, of Montreal and Mrs. Merrett's camp will be held on Saturday evening, the 3d of August. This is one of the events of camp, when the orators of the party work off all their surplus energies.

The fishing so far has been very poor. The weeds have been so strong that trolling has been out of the question except on a few rare days, and but fish do not seem to be very anxious to secure bait of any kind, no matter how tempting.

FAIR VIEW.

Haying has commenced; it is a light crop.

Stanley Pile and family, and Mr. and Mrs. George Rooks and John Lowes picnicked with Dr. File on Friday.

Miss Maggie Lowry is under the doctor's care.

Henry Clark, of Oshawa, was at John Bennett's, on Thursday.

Mrs. Tony Vanalstine is able to be around again.

Mrs. Switzer has returned, after spending a few weeks with her daughter.

GOOD AND BAD MACHINE OIL.

With the use of many products sold for lubricating purposes, one might appropriately associate the phrase, "off again, on again, gone again." It's off the mower, oil the mower, on the mower, and then out in the field once. Then repeat. We believe that we can give you a superior article for this purpose. A trial solicited. The Doukhobors marching to look for the Messiah, and incidentally for a country where they will not have to work so hard, have reached Winnipeg and are so pleased with the charity they are getting there from everybody but the immigration officials, that they have decided to stay a week to enjoy it.

The Largest Jack Manufacturer in the World Writes about

Zutoo

Regarding your Zutoo Tablets I beg to say: I have been a sufferer from headache since childhood and have used all, or nearly all, of the so-called "cures" on the market, till warned by my physician to discontinue their use on account of their bad effects on the heart. Some months since my attention was called to your Zutoo Tablets and I have been using them ever since with the most gratifying results. I find they cure a "sick" or "nervous" headache in a few minutes and leave no bad effect. My family use them whenever needed with equally good results. I have frequently given them to friends who were suffering from headache and they never fail to give quick relief. I find them a good remedy for "sour" stomach as well as headache. I always carry them in my grip on the road and would not be without them at any cost.

THE COMING FALL AND WINTER FASHIONS.

"The feature—the fad, in fact—of the early fall fashions will be the severe tailor-made costume," says Grace Margaret Gould, the Fashion Editor, in the August Woman's Home Companion.

"The fall tailor-made suits are not all planned for the fashion-plate figure. They consider the thin and the stout woman, the short and the tall. They are, in fact, suited to the individual figure.

"The short skirt is the fashion. A walking skirt nowadays which just touches the ground stamps a woman as out of style. All the tailor-made suits show the trotteur, or side-walk skirt, as it is called. It is made, according to the individual figure and the individual preference, so that it escapes the ground anywhere from three to six inches. The trotteur skirts will show the plaited form, kilted or box plaited, but the plaits will not begin until below the knee point of the hip. Similarly with the fashion, hence molded-to-the figure effects are the present thing. Some of the new skirts will be band-trimmed; others will be plain-plaited. Three bands, if they may be termed really the hem, have been the vogue for some time. This three-band effect will still be used, but many of the smartest trotteur skirts will show but one band, and that placed just above the knee. These skirts are worn with a drop-skirt made of either taffeta or muslin, finished with a silk ruffle. It is imperative that the dropskirt is fitted carefully to the figure, so that there is no extra fulness at the waistline or the sign of a wrinkle over the hips.

"The jacket will show a man-tailored finish, and will be made to suit the individual figure. One of the stylish jackets to wear with the trotteur skirt for the woman of medium figure will be a short cutaway with a lengthening tail in the back extending eighteen inches below the waistline. This jacket will have low-cut revers showing the under bodice in the front. The revers is flat and are finished with a velvet collar or one of self cloth."

Horrible! Horrible! Horrible!

The suffering of dyspeptics cannot be understood by those who enjoy perfect digestion. It is the greatest misery. It makes horrible diseases of those who have constitutional suffering. It is really impossible to look upon a tempting dinner, and realize that to indulge in it will bring distress, misery, and perhaps death, unless you can enjoy eating, so that the nourishment will give strength and vitality instead of discomfort and uncomfortable feeling of fullness. The digestive agents in the tablets called "Paris Government," by Prof. Goldwin Smith, in large number contains light, warm-weather reading matter.

WOMAN KILLED.

A fatal runaway accident occurred last Tuesday forenoon causing the death of Mrs. Gilbert Maracle, and injury to her husband, Gilbert, son of Mr. and Mrs. Maracle, Mrs. Gage Nelson and Mrs. Warner returning from berry picking in the Township of Richmond. When near Mr. Cornelius Aleombrack's, on the Belleville road, the horse took fright for some unknown reason and jumped into the ditch, throwing Mr. Maracle out. Mrs. Maracle at once caught up the lines, and succeeding up to hold the horse, fell backwards out of the wagon, and was picked up unconscious. She was carried into Mr. Aleombrack's, but expired in a few minutes. Her head was but slightly bruised, and it is the opinion of the doctor that she died from heart failure, to which she was subject.

When the lines were dropped for the second time, Mrs. Nelson took hold of one of them and turned the horse into the lane fence, when the bridle looked in the wire, and held the animal fast. Mrs. Nelson and Mrs. Warner were fortunate, being only badly frightened and slightly bruised.

Mrs. Maracle was sixty-eight years of age, a kind wife and mother, and besides her husband leaves five children, Martin, Charles, Frank, Annie and Millissa. A son, Edward, was drowned a couple of years ago when the schooner Mary went down on Lake Ontario. She also leaves five brothers and sisters, Mrs. Gage Nelson and Miss Mowers, Napanee; James, of Watertown, and Mrs. Fraser, of Kingston.

THE CANADIAN MAGAZINE.

The holiday equipment would be well supplemented with a copy of the August number of The Canadian Magazine, which contains a generous supply of short stories and excellently illustrated travel articles. The art features are exceedingly good this month, the wash and pen drawings being the work of Canadian artists. With one or two exceptions, for instance, an article entitled "Paris Government," by Prof. Goldwin Smith, the number contains light, warm-weather reading matter.

FEMALE UMBRELLA MENDER MADE FREE WITH VALUABLES.

Belleville Intelligencer.

On Friday afternoon last a middle-aged woman, who was apparently going about the city repairing umbrellas, called at the residence of Mr. Arthur Downey, Church street, and asked if Mrs. Downey had any old umbrellas or parasols which needed repairing.

Mrs. Downey went upstairs for a few minutes, and during her absence the visitor, it is alleged, gathered up some articles which were in the dining room, which she took with her.

It was not until Saturday morning that Mrs. Downey missed an article she wanted, and this led her to investigate. Then she discovered that 12 solid silver spoons were gone; also a lady's long gold chain, a gold brooch, a gold Maltese cross and a blue cloth Eton jacket.

The affair was reported to the police and every effort was made to locate the woman here, but without avail. It was learned that she was seen on Saturday evening walking in an easterly direction, towards Shannonville.

An officer was on Sunday sent in that direction, but no trace of the alleged thief could be found.

The Chief sent letters to the police at Napanee, Kingston, and other places, asking them to be on the lookout for the woman, and yesterday she was arrested at Napanee, and the missing articles were found in her possession. She gave her name as Emma McDonald, aged 45 years. The accused was brought to the city last evening by Sergeant Hayes, who went after her.

This morning she was brought before Magistrate Masson and pleaded not guilty to the charge of theft, alleging that the articles were given to her by Mrs. Downey.

In her evidence Mrs. Downey narrated how the accused called at her house, but emphatically denied that she had given the woman the articles in question.

After the evidence of Mrs. Downey had been given, the accused was placed in the box and swore positively that Mrs. Downey had given her the articles in question and asked her to dispose of them somewhere. Not being able to sell them in this city, she said, she went to Napanee, where she hoped to get money for them.

This concluded the case for to-day, and a remand was granted until Friday, in the meantime Emma McDonald will have to remain in jail. The prisoner is apparently a Scot by birth.

EDISON'S PREDICTIONS.

Thomas A. Edison is quoted in an interview as predicting that before long science will enable the farmer to enrich his lands by means of nitrogen from the air.

"Until recently the utilization of atmospheric nitrogen was regarded as merely a laboratory demonstration. Business men said it could never be obtained cheaply enough to sell to the farmer as fertilizer. Norway a plant has been established which has been conducted with such good results that I expect to see atmospheric fertilizer on the market in two years.

"That such a product will soon be imperatively necessary there is no doubt. Every shipload of wheat and corn which goes abroad leaves the United States so much poorer, not in gold, but in fertility.

"Another scientific discovery which I expect to see before I die," continued Mr. Edison, "is the direct generation of electricity from coal. This has already been achieved in an experimental way. I have heard of several men who have done it. Imagine what will be the consequences! At the present time nine-tenths of the power obtained from coal is lost by the use of boilers, wheels and dynamos. With the direct generation of the electrical current, therefore, the world will have ten times more energy than now."

DON'T PUT IT OFF LONGER

GET RID OF THAT INDIGESTION AT ONCE BY USING MI-O-NA.

Many people in Napanee are slowly poisoning themselves by chronic indigestion. Their appetite is gone, sickness of the important organs of digestion fills the system with fermenting and decaying food that results in sick headache, heartburn, bad taste in the mouth, and many other symptoms.

Mi-o-na stomach tablets are for the special relief of such sufferers. They quickly cure the worst cases of indigestion and when used a few days the pain and distress often felt after meals will disappear.

Mi-o-na stomach tablets cost but 50 cents a box and do more good than a dozen boxes of the ordinary digestive tablets. Mr. B. Wallace gives an absolute, unqualified guarantee to refund the money if Mi-o-na fails to cure.

Must Have Luxuriant and Glossy Hair, No Matter What Color.
The finest contour of a female face, the sweetest smile of a female mouth, loses something if the head is crowned with scanty hair. Scant and falling hair, it is now known, is caused by a parasite that grows into the scalp to the root of the hair where it saps the vitality. The little white scales also germ throws up in dandruff. To cure dandruff permanently, then, and to stop falling hair, that germ must be killed. When Knighthood Was In Flower

"That's all very well," responded the stubborn creature. "Nobody is guilty who comes here. They can every one prove an alibi—clergy and all. Anyway, I'll not be silenced cheaply and at once. Notwithstanding, they nearly all hang, and frequently, for variety's sake, are drawn and quartered."

I waited about Newgate until 9 o'clock and as I passed out met Buckingham and his man Johnson, a sort of lawyer-knight, going in. I went down to the palace at Greenwich and, finding that the girls were still at Scotland palace, rode over at once to see them.

Upon getting Mary and Jane to myself I told them of Brandon's arrest on the charge of murder and of his condition, lying half dead from wounds and loss of blood in that frightful dungeon. The latter bettered them greatly, and they both gave way to tears. I think Mary had heard of the arrest before, as she did not seem surprised.

"Do you think he will tell the cause of the killing?" she asked.

"I know he will not," I answered, "but I also know that he knows you will." And I looked straight into her face.

"Certainly we will," said Jane. "We will go to the king at once." And she was on the qui vive to start immediately.

Mary did not at once consent to Jane's proposition, but sat in a reverie, looking with tearful eyes into vacancy, apparently absorbed in thought. After a little pressing from me she said: "I suppose it will have to be done. I can see no other way—but blessed Mother Mary, help me!"

The girls made hasty preparations, and we all started back to Greenwich palace. Mary might tell the king. On the road over I stopped at Newgate to tell Brandon that the princess would soon have him out, knowing how welcome liberty would be at her hands, but I was not permitted to see him.

I swallowed my disappointment and thou it would be only a matter of a f... hours' delay, the time spent in riding down to Greenwich and sending back a messenger. So, light hearted enough at the prospect, I soon joined the girls, and we cantered briskly home.

After waiting a reasonable time for Mary to see the king I sought her again to learn where and from whom I should receive the order for Brandon's release and when I should go to London to bring him.

Whit was my surprise and disgust when Mary told me she had not yet seen the king; that she had waited to "eat and bathe and dress" and that "a few moments more or less could make no difference."

"My God, your highness! Did I not tell you that the man who saved your life and London who is covered with wounds received in your defense and almost dead from loss of blood, spilled that you might be saved from worse than death, is now lying in a rayless dungeon, a place of frightful filth, such as you would not walk across for all the wealth of London bridge; is surrounded by loathsome, creeping things that would sicken you but to think of; is resting under a charge whose penalty is that he be hanged, drawn and quartered? And yet you stop to eat and bathe and dress! In God's name, Mary Tudor, of what stuff are you made? If he had waited but one little minute, had stopped for the drawing of a breath, had held back for but one fleeting thought from the terrible odds of four swords to one, what would you now be? Think, princess; think!"

Here he read his warrant to arrest Charles Brandon, Esq.

I was a little frightened at the length to which my feeling had driven me, but Mary took it all very well and said slowly and absentmindedly:

"You are right. I will go at once. I despise my selfish neglect. There is no other way—I have racked my brain —there is no other way. It must be done, and I will go at once and do it."

"And I will go with you," said I.

"I do not blame you," she said, "for doubting me since I have failed once. But you need not doubt me now. It shall be done, and without delay, regardless of the cost to me. I have thought and thought to find some other way to liberate him, but there is none. I will go this instant."

"And I will go with you, Lady Mary," said I doggedly.

She smiled at my persistency and took me by the hand, saying, "Come!"

We at once went off to find the king, but the smile had faded from Mary's face, and she looked as if she were going to execution. Every shade of color had fled, and her lips were the hue of ashes.

We found the king in the midst of his council, with the French ambassador, discussing the all absorbing topic of the marriage treaty, and Henry, fearing an outbreak, refused to see the princess. As usual, opposition but spurred her determination, so she sat down in the anteroom and said she would not stir until she had seen the king.

After we had waited a few minutes one of the king's pages came up and said he had been looking all over the palace for me and that the king desired my presence immediately. I went in with the page to the king, leaving Mary alone and very melancholy in the antechamber.

Upon entering the king's presence he asked: "Where have you been, Sir Edwin? I have almost killed a good half dozen pages hunting you. I want you to prepare immediately to go to Paris with an embassy to his nephew King Louis. You will be the interpreter. The ambassador you need not know. Make ready at once. The embassy will leave London from the Tabard inn one hour hence."

Could a command to duty have come at a more inopportune time? I was distracted, and upon leaving the king went at once to seek the Lady Mary where I had left her in the anteroom. She had gone, so I went to her apartments, but could not find her. I went to the queen's salon, but she was not there, and I traversed that old rambling palace from one end to the other without finding her or Lady Jane.

The king had told me the embassy would be a secret one and that I was to speak of it to nobody, least of all to the Lady Mary. No one was to know that I was leaving England, and I was to communicate with no one at home while in France.

The king's command was not to be disobeyed. To do so would be as much as my life was worth; but, besides that, the command of the king I served was my highest duty, and no Cankden ever failed in that. I may not be as tall as some men, but my fidelity and honor—but you will say I boast.

I was to make ready my bundle and ride six miles to London in one hour, and almost half that time was spent already. I was sure to be late, so I could not waste another minute.

I went to my room and got together a few things necessary for my journey, but did not take much in the way of clothing, preferring to buy that new in Paris, where I could find the latest styles in pattern and fabric.

I tried to assure myself that Mary would see the king at once and tell him all and not allow my dear friend Brandon to lie in that terrible place another night, yet a persistent fear gnawed at my heart, and a sort of intuition that seemed to have the very breath of certainty in its forebodings made me doubt.

As I could find neither Mary nor Jane, I did the next best thing—I wrote a letter to each of them, urging immediate action and left them to be delivered by my man Thomas, who is one of those trusty souls that never fail. I did not tell the girls I was about to start for France, but intimated that I was compelled to leave London for a time and said, "I leave the fate of this man, to whom we all owe so much, in your hands, feeling full well how tender you will be of him."

I was away from home nearly a month, and as I stated not write, and even Jane did not know where I was. I did not receive nor expect any letters. The king had ordered secrecy, and if I have mingled with all my faults a single virtue it is that of faithfulness to my trust. So I had no news from England and sent none home.

During all that time the same old fear lived in my heart that Mary might fail to liberate Brandon. She knew of the negotiations concerning the French marriage, as we all did, although only by an indefinite sort of hearsay, and I was sure the half founded rumors that had reached her ears had long since become certainties and that her heart was full of trouble and fear of her violent brother. She would certainly be at her coaxing and wheedling again and on her best behavior, and I feared she might refrain from telling Henry of her trip to Gronche's, knowing how severe he was in such matters and how furious he was apt to become at the discovery. I was certain it was this fear which had prevented Mary from going directly to the king on our return to Greenwich from Scotland palace, and I knew that her setting, bathing and dressing were but an excuse for a breathing spell before the dreaded interview.

This fear associated with me all the time I was away, but when I reasoned with myself I would smother it as well as I could with arguments strong enough at self assurance. I would say over and over to myself that Mary could not fail and that even if she did there was Jane—dear, sweet, thoughtful, unselfish Jane!—who would not allow her to do so. But, as far as they go, our intuitions—our "feelings," as we call them—are worth all the logic in the world, and you may say what you will, but my presentiments—I speak for no one else—are well to be minded. There is another sense hidden about us that will develop as the race grows older. I speak to posterity.

In proof of this statement I now tell you that when I returned to London I found Brandon still in the terrible dungeon, and, worse still, he had been tried for murder and had been condemned to be hanged, drawn and quartered on the second Friday following. Hanged! Drawn! Quartered! It is time we were doing away with such barbarity.

We will now go back a month for the purpose of looking up the doings of a friend of ours, his grace the Duke of Buckingham.

On the morning after the fatal battle of Billingsgate the barber who had treated Brandon's wounds had been called to London to dress a bruised knee for his grace the duke. In the course of the operation an immense deal of information oozed out of the barber, one item of which was that he had the night before dressed nine wounds, great and small, for Master Brandon, the king's favorite. This established the identity of the man who had rescued the girls, a fact of which Buckingham had had his suspicions all along. So Brandon's arrest followed, as I have already related to you.

I afterward learned from various sources how this nobleman began to avenge his mishap with Brandon at Mary's ball when the latter broke his sword point. First he went to Newgate and gave orders to the keeper, that was his tool, to allow no communication with the prisoner, and it was by his instructions that Brandon had been confined in the worst dungeon in London. Then he went down to Greenwich to take care of matters there, having learned that the king would learn of Brandon's arrest and probably take steps for his liberation at once.

The king had just heard of the arrest when Buckingham arrived, and the latter found he was right in his surmise that his majesty would at once demand Brandon's release.

When the duke entered the king's room, Henry called to him: "My lord, you are opportunely arrived. So good a friend of the people of London can help us greatly this morning. Our friend Brandon has been arrested for the killing of two men night before last in Billingsgate ward. I am sure there is some mistake and that the good sheriff has the wrong man, but right or wrong, we want him out and ask your good offices."

"I shall be most happy to serve your majesty and will go to London at once to see the lord mayor."

In the afternoon the duke returned and had a private audience with the king.

"I did as your majesty requested in regard to Brandon's release," he said, "but on investigation I thought it best to consult you again before proceeding further. I fear there is no doubt that Brandon is the right man. It seems he was out with a couple of wenches carousing whom he got into trouble and stabbed two men in the back. It is a very aggravated case, and the evidence are much incensed about it, owing partly to the fact that such occurrences have been so frequent of late. I thought under the circumstances and in view of the fact that your majesty will soon call upon the city for a loan to make up the Lady Mary's dower it would be wise not to antagonize them in this matter, but to allow Master Brandon to remain quietly in confinement until the loan is completed, and then we can snap our fingers at them."

"We will snap our fingers at the scurvy burghers now and have the loan, too," returned Henry angrily. "I want Brandon liberated at once, and I shall expect another report from you immediately, my lord."

Buckingham felt that his revenge had slipped through his fingers this time, but he was patient when evil was to be accomplished and could wait. Then it was that the council was called concerning the progress which Mary and I had tried to obtain an audience of the king.

Buckingham had gone to pay his respects to the queen and on his return back had copied Mary waiting for the king in the anteroom and went to her.

At first she was irritated at the sight of this man, whom she so despised, but a thought came to her that she might make use of him. She knew his power with the citizens and city authorities of London and also knew, or thought she knew, that a gentle word her could accomplish everything with him. She had ample evidence of his infatuation, and she hoped that she could procure Brandon's liberty through Buckingham without revealing her

THE ROBINSON CO. LIMITED — IS — Napanee's Greatest Store — THE ROBINSON CO. LIMITED

OUR EXPANSION SALE

Think it over. In ten years we have built up a Business that only has three others in its class in Eastern Ontario. What could have made that success? Nothing but best service. This store had to be on the average a little better than existing stores, else it couldn't have won the business it has.

Our planned alterations and increased space which we told you about last week will put this store so far in the lead it can't see the dust of its followers.

To reduce our immense stock so as to make it more easily adjusted during the tearing down and building up o the front and inside of the store, we are sacrificing a great lot of goods. Besides that reason, we are induced to make extra concessions in price because we will not carry over any summer goods, if price inducement will take them. We wish we had a whole newspaper to tell all we want to about this Sale but we can only give you a few hints.

—The gasoline launch causes about as much trouble and annoyance as the average automobile, but it is not always the fault of the engine. One day last week a boy little from Picton, said to be capable of making fourteen miles an hour, came to a standstill at the Pines, about two miles down the river. After working at it for several hours a steam launch from Napanee towed it to town. Everybody that knew or is supposed to know about gasoline engines was consulted. It was found they could make the engine go ahead or reverse, but the boat would not move. Finally a spectator who was looking on asked them how they could expect the boat to move without a wheel. The wheel had dropped off coming up the river.

CHOICE MUST BE MADE BETWEEN GOD AND THE WORLD.

ONE MASTER MIND RULING ALL.

The Prophet's Searching Question—Momentous Gathering On Mount Horeb—False and Worthless Beliefs—Evidence of Design In Nature—Purpose In All Creation—Response to Divine Call.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1907, by T. DeWitt Talmage, Toronto, at the Dept. of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 28.—In this sermon the preacher brings us to the crossroads, where we are open to choose the world, its pleasures and its unbelief on the one hand or the road which leads to the higher life of faith and to eternal companionships in the presence of God and Kings xviii, 21, "How long halt ye between two opinions?"

Elijah, the author of the words of my text, is speaking to King Ahab and to the children of Israel. He describes the nation as halting or hesitating. The word was an appropriate one. A man who is not sure about his position or his course, who travels a little way in one direction and then a little way in another direction, makes the progress, the walk, he stumbles. It is a most unsatisfactory state, whether it relates to people of that olden time or to people of our time, so many of whom are similarly halting. Elijah contends that Jehovah is God and that Baal is a mere block of wood or stone that cannot hear prayer or reward his worshipers in

A well-known bishop relates that when on a recent visit to the south he was in a small country town, where, owing to the scarcity of good servants, most of the ladies preferred to do their own work.

He was awakened quite early by the tones of a soprano voice singing "Nearer, My God to Thee." As the bishop lay and listened meditated upon the piety which his hostess must possess, which enabled her to go about her task early in the morning singing such a noble hymn.

At breakfast he spoke to her about it, and told her how pleased he was.

The vessels is of a bluish green glass of some kind, cunningly inlaid with silver leaf.

It Is a Liver Pill.—Many of the ailments that man has to contend with have their origin in a disordered liver, which is a delicate organ, peculiarly susceptible to the disturbances that come from irregular habits or lack of care in eating and drinking. This accounts for the great many liver regulators now pressed on the attention of sufferers. Of these there is none superior to Parmelee's Vegetable Pills. Their operation though gentle is effective, and the most delicate can use them.

Hay harvest in this vicinity is not very heavy, and is progressing nicely. The grain is beginning to look better since the recent rains.

Quite a bit of excitement was caused here on Monday night, when it was discovered that, after the severe electric storm which gave us a good fall of rain, a large tree in Mr. John Magee's woods had been struck and was on fire. HUMAN BODY A STEAM ENGINE, SAYS OSLER.

Professor Osler, the "too-old-at-forty" scientist, delivered a lecture at the Working Men's College in Camden Town recently, in which he compared the human body to a steam engine.

"The engine wants fuel," he said, "so does the human body. But give them the wrong sort and both cease to work.

"While the engine has only one furnace, and a large one, the human body consists of myriads of little furnaces—that is, cells.

"Milk was the original food of man, not meat. Many people get on without meat if they eat porridge which is just as good, but the trouble is that most people eat too much of both, and so injure the works.

"Vegetarianism is all right in its way, but vegetarians are not always as robust mentally as physically. The human engine is frequently put out of repair by people who persist in eating improperly cooked food, added to which they make the mistake of chewing and digesting improperly.

"Like locomotives, people are made to last a certain time, and, like them, they require repairs. Small repairs can be done inside, but for large repairs they have to go to the doctor. Sometimes this is unavoidable, sometimes not."

On the subject of alcohol and tobacco, Professor Osler proved himself of the revolutionary in the extreme.

"Throw all the beer and spirits into the Irish Channel, the English Channel, and the North Sea for a year," he exclaimed, "and people in England would be infinitely better. It would certainly solve all the problems with which the politicians and the physicians and the politicians have to deal.

"Do you suppose you need tobacco? On the day after you had dumped all the tobacco into the sea you would find that it was very good for you and hard on the fishes. Tea and coffee, like alcohol and tobacco, are really not necessary; in fact, they merely disturb the furnace of the body."

In conclusion, the professor pleaded for the simple life, with plenty of fresh air and lots of good, hard work as the only means of attaining comfort and peace.

ALL WEAK WOMEN.

WILL FIND NEW HEALTH AND STRENGTH IN DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS.

The weak woman can depend upon it that her blood is out of order, for if her blood is rich and pure she will be strong, healthy and happy. Bad blood is the cause of headaches, backaches and pains from which women suffer. Keep the blood rich and red by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and suffering will not exist. Mrs. James R. Kratz, of Jordan, Station, Ont., has tested the value of these pills and strongly advises other women to use them. She says: "For more than a year I was a great sufferer from weakness. I was completely worn out. I took flesh; could not rest at night, and in the morning I arose more tired than on going to bed. I had taken doctors' treatment with no benefit. I grew worse day by day and was beginning to look upon my case as hopeless when I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. In my great joy before I had taken the pills a month began to help and by the time I had taken eight boxes every symptom of my trouble had left me and I was once more in the perfect health and strength. I look upon Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as a veritable life saver and have had a chance to recommend them to my friends."

The success of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is due to their power to make new, rich red blood. This new blood strengthens the nerves and gives nourishment to all the organs of the body, thus curing anaemia, indigestion, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous debility, headache and backache, and all the secret ailments of girlhood and womanhood. The pills are sold by all medicine dealers or may be had direct at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The August number of the Woman's Home Companion is printed as an all-story number—except, of course, for the twelve indispensable departments that appear in each issue. The second instalment of Anthony Hope's new love story "Helena's Path" appears in this number, and all the other fiction comes up to the excellent standard of Mr. Hope's novel. Among the contributors are Mr. Martin Green, author of "Rebecca Mary," "May Isabel Fish," in one of her inimitable monologues, Charles Battell Loomis, Josephine Mary Wilhelmina Hastings and Jessie Peck Cooper. Considerable space is devoted to the recent Conference, and Dr. Edward Everett Hale, Margaret E. Sangster, Anna Rose Richardson and the Editor all give some admirable vacation suggestions which should alleviate materially with a double page of photographs of children royalty and of other prominent people with their pet dogs—and illustrations by such well-known illustrators as Alice Barber Stevens, Blanche Greer and Herman Pfeifer.

FLIES AS DISEASE BEARERS.

The Common House Variety Are a Menace to Health.

The United States Department of Agriculture has started a crusade against the common house fly and is carrying on extensive experiments as to the best way of banishing it from the midst of man. The fly has been found to be not only a nuisance, but a menace to man's health. Its hairy body carries both disease and death. Many epidemics which sweep over communities in the hot season are traced to the agency of the flies. In the Journal of the Royal Sanitary Institute, giving his experience as an English health officer, says that the fly is responsible for the death of many children because of polluting the milk which they drink.

"As the mischief done and evil effects overlooked," said Dr. C. O. Probst, recently, "but we now know that the common house fly is an agent of importance in carrying the germs of typhoid fever. It was formerly believed that the fly was only carried in water, milk or other liquid food. Flies both breed and feed in places where the germs are to be found, and then, flying into our houses, no doubt often carry the germs and deposit them on our food.

The Best Flour, Dafoe's Nonesuch, Dafoe's Manitoba Patent

By numerous tests by the best bakers the above mentioned grades have been proven to be the best flours in the market.

When buying flour, ask for Dafoe's, and patronize your home mill, thereby producing Bran and Shorts that you can purchase cheaper than the product of the Western mills, which has to be transported thousands of miles at great expense, and usually when it reaches you is of inferior quality. The greater complaint of the farmer or the consumer sends in Toronto or to outside points for an article he can get at the home mill at as good, be will does not hesitate to buy flour from mills hundreds of miles away, and sells you as inferior flour for the same money that you can purchase the home product for, every bag of which is guaranteed.

Chicken Cornmeal and Buckwheat Flour always on hand. Feed grinding a specialty with the best feed mills known to the trade. A full stock of the best Coal Oil always on also in the market for the purchase of all kinds of grain.

REGATTA AT GLEN ISLAND

The annual regatta under the auspices of the Picton Yacht Club was held at Glen Island, on Thursday of last week, the Crescent Club of Watertown, as usual attending in considerable numbers of sail and motor boats. The regatta is getting to be the event of the year in these waters, as witness the largest crowd ever collected on Glen Island, while over fifty sailing and motor boats were moored in the waters near by. These included yachts from Brighton, Trenton, Belleville, Deseronto, Consecon, Roach, Picton, Amherst Island, Kingston, Gananoque, Wolfe Island, Cape Vincent, Rochester and the Sodus. The feature of the meet was a matched race between the Crescent, of Watertown, and the Kathleen, of Kingston. The former won after a couple of closely contested races. The Kingston boat labored under different handicaps, having to use bronn new sails, spars and rigging, while the Crescent had been well tried out all put in first class shape for the contest. Another trial may be had during the season, and another story told when it is over. The motor boat races were very entertaining as only the start and finish could be seen by the bulk of the people. If the course was made around the Island it would be a most interesting feature, as the boats would then be in sight all the time. The day was an ideal one, and the large crowds were enthusiastic over the grand time they had.

CANADIAN ORDER OF FORESTERS

Right Worthy Bro. John A. Stewart, of Perth, Ont., High Chief Ranger, accompanied by Bro. W. G. Strong, of Brantford, Ont., Superintendent of Organization, paid an official visit to Court Lennox No. 76, Napanee, on Monday night last, 29th ult. The distinguished visitors were met by the brothers at the station, who, preceded by the band, escorted them to the court room where they were introduced and greeted with high honors. Twenty candidates were then initiated and the team gave the floor work faultlessly, the charges being rendered impressively by the different officers. The visiting officers expressed themselves as being delighted with the beautiful court room, the excellent appearance of the candidates and the excellent work of the degree team.

At a late hour the Brothers adjourned to the Hotel Belano, where they partook of a supper, at which Bro. J. G. Fenwell presided. The toast list was short owing to the lateness of the hour, and after the toast to the King was duly drunk, Bro. E. M. Wilson proposed the toast to the High Chief Ranger. The High Chief Ranger on rising was the recipient of an address of welcome and expressive of the high esteem in which he is held by the Order and referring in enthusiastic terms to the great progress of the Order during his term of office. The High Chief Ranger's address was eloquent and was listened to with rapt attention by the members. Nearly one hundred and fifty members of the Order were present during the evening proceedings and all will always remember it as being one of the most successful meetings in the history of the Court. Bro. Strong, of the Organizer, the second Bro. Candidates initiated during the month of July, the number of forty-five, was the recipient of hearty congratulations on the result of his work on behalf of Court Lennox.

The distinguished officers were driven about town in the morning, accompanied by Bro. C. A. Walters, Court Deputy, and left on the noon train for the east. Bro. Halpany left on the afternoon train for his home in Peterboro'.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

While riding horses across a long bar to Big Island from Amherst Island on Saturday, a horse ridden by an emigrant lad was carried off its feet by the heavy swell; the lad had his shoulder crushed in the fall and went under water. Roy Wemp, a companion, on another horse, tried to reach him but only got to his side in time to see his hands as he went down. The lad was aged 16 years. The body was recovered 24 hours later.

GREATEST DRY GOODS STORE

An old story this, but with a new application! We stand the test! Always fill every promise made! But the story:—Six tailors had shops on a certain London street. Tailor No. 1 one day placed over his door the sign, "Best tailor in London." No. 2 saw it, and not to be outdone, soon had swinging a sign reading, "The best Tailor in England." Then Shears-Weilder No. 3 came out with his sign, "Best Tailor in Great Britain." Tailor No. 4 was at his wits end for awhile but proudly came to the front with "Best Tailor in the British Empire." Tailor No. 5, who had been waiting for his innings, then startled his competitors with a glaring sign that made the claim of, "Best Tailor in the world!!!" Tailor No. 6, who had been busy pleasing his customers with goods, styles, workmanship and prices, at last simply made the modest announcement, "Best Tailor on this street." The point of all this? Well, goods compared with goods, prices with prices, service with service, we are confident that ours is as good a store as there is in this District.

A STORY OF TOWN LOTS.

(From The Canadian Courier.)

The West is busy selling town lots. Some months ago there was a boom in the game; some have lost. Some will make money in the future, some have settled. It all depends on the lots. A story is told of a Western gentleman entitled to have "Honorable" printed in front of his name. He has made a considerable fortune selling lots to Eastern purchasers. An Eastern friend bent on a visit at Ottawa and upbraided him for not having left him the Easterner in certain good things. The Honorable calmed his angry friend with an apology and a statement that he had actually forgotten to tell his friend about it. "Look here," he said, "I can make up for it. I have twenty good lots in ——ville that can give you at 840 each. The Easterner took them and handed over the cash without a question. He has since learned that they are about two miles from the railway station in a little town of 800 inhabitants and are worth about $5 a piece.

Deafness Cannot be Cured.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

I don't dose the stomach to cure catarrh in the head; sounds sensible. And the great success of Hy-o-mei in curing the worst cases of catarrh proves it's sensible. Money back if Hy-o-mei fails. T. B. Wallace.

You have Not One Reason for Not Using Zutoo

Some people think that all health cures are alike—that they all undermine the health, even if not perceived at the time of taking them.

Well, we'll admit that some cures do this, those, for example, which contain opium, morphine, antipyrene or chloral.

But that's no reason why you should not use Zutoo.

Zutoo Tablets do not contain one bit of any of the drugs above mentioned. They do not contain a single ingredient that does not come from Old Mother Earth herself.

One ingredient is soda—just old-fashioned soda that our grandmothers used to take to settle the stomach when they had sick headache.

There is not one ingredient in Zutoo tablets that is not approved by both the British and American Pharmacopoeia. And the world has no higher authority in medicine than these.

Your family physician, even if a personal friend, would approve of and prescribe every ingredient.

There is absolutely no reason why you should not use Zutoo.

If you suffer from headache there is every reason why you should.

Taken at times, two tablets will ward off a headache. Taken later, they will stop it in twenty minutes, and leave you feeling bright and well in both mind and body.

CHAS. STEVENS.

Forty passengers and a locomotive engineer were drowned in a railroad accident in France.

When Knighthood Was in Flower

I hardly recognized him, he was so frightfully emaciated with pain and dirt and creeping things. His hair and beard were unkempt and matted, and his eyes and cheeks were deep-set and sunken; but I will describe him no further. Suffering had well nigh done its work, and nothing but the hardihood gathered in his years of camp life and war could have saved him from death. I bathed and reclothed him as well as I could at Newgate and then took him home to Greenwich in a horse litter, where my man and I thoroughly washed, dressed and silvered the poor fellow and put him to bed.

"Ah, Casimodo, is that you?"

"Ah, this bed is a foretaste of paradise!" he said as he lay upon the mattress. It was a pitiful sight, and I could hardly refrain from tears.

I will ask you to go back with me for a moment.

During the week between Brandon's interview with Mary in the anteroom of the king's bedchamber and the tragedy at Hillingpate he and I had many conversations about the extraordinary situation in which he found himself.

At one time, I remember, he said: "I was safe enough before that afternoon. I believe I could have done away and forgotten her eventually, but our mutual avowal seems to have dazed me and paralyzed every power for effort. I sometimes feel helpless, and, although I have succeeded in keeping away from her since then, I often find myself wavering in my determination to leave England. That was what I feared if I allowed the matter to go to the point of being sure of her love. I only wanted it before, and very easily made myself believe it was impossible, and not for me. But now that I know she loves me it is like holding my breath to live without her. I feel every instant that I can hold it no longer. I know too well the gift of God. Curses upon those who keep us apart." Then musingly and half interrogatively: "Pho-netically love me. She could not have treated me as she did unless her love was so strong that she could not resist it."

"Let no doubt of that trouble you," I answered. "A woman like Mary cannot treat two men in a like fashion. Many a woman may love or think she loves many times, but there is only one man who receives the first passion of her best. Other women again have nothing to give but their best, and when they have once given that they have given all. Unless I have known her in vain, Mary, with all her faults, is such a woman. Again, I say, let no doubt of that trouble you."

Brandon answered with a sad little smile from the midst of his reverie, "It is really not so much the doubt as the certainty of it that troubles me." Then, starting to his feet, "If I thought she had lied to me, if I thought she could wantonly lead me on to suffer so for her, I would kill her, so help me God."

"Do not think that. Whatever her faults—and she has enough—there is no man on earth for her to pity. Her love has come to her through a struggle against it because it was her master. That is the strongest and best, in fact the only love, worth all the self made passions in the world."

"Yes, I believe it. I know she has faults; even my partiality cannot blind me to them, but she is as pure and chaste as a child and as gentle, strong and true as—as—a woman. I can put it no stronger. She has these, her redeeming virtues, along with her beauty, from her plebeian grandmother, Elizabeth Woodville, who with them won a royal husband and elevated herself to the throne beside the chivalrous Edward. This sweet plebeian heritage bubbles up in the heart of Mary and will not down, but neutralises the royal poison in her veins and makes a goddess of her." Then with a sigh: "But if her faults were a thousand times as many, and if each fault were a thousand times as great, her beauty would atone for all. Such beauty as hers can afford to have faults. Look at Helen and Cleopatra and Agnes Sorel. Did their faults make them less attractive? Beauty covereth more sins than charity and maketh more grief than penitence."

CHAPTER XI.

LOUIS XII. A SUITOR.

As soon as I could leave Brandon I had intended to go down to Windsor and present to my indignation toward the girls, but the more I thought about it the surer I felt I had somehow been a mistake. I could not bring myself to believe that Mary had deliberately permitted matters to go to such an extreme when it was in her power to prevent it. She might have neglected her duty for a day or two, but sooner or later her good impulses always came to her rescue, and with Jane by her side to urge her on I was almost sure she would have liberated Brandon long ago, barring a blunder of some sort.

So I did not go to Windsor until a week after Brandon's release, when the king asked me to go down with him, Wolsey and De Longueville, the French ambassador special, for the purpose of officially offering to Mary the hand of Louis XII. and the honor and becoming crown of France.

The princess had known of the projected arrangement for many weeks, but had no thought of the present forward condition of affairs or she would have brought her coergies to bear upon Henry long before. She could not bring herself to believe that her brother would really force her into such wretchedness, and possibly he would never have done so, much as he desired it from the standpoint of personal ambition, had it not been for the petty excuse of that fatal trip to Grouche's.

All the circumstances of the case were such as to make Mary's marriage a veritable virgin sacrifice. Louis was an old man, and an old Frenchman at that, full of French notions of morality and immorality. But, besides, there were objections that cannot be written, but of which Henry and Mary had been fully informed. She might as well marry a leper. Do you wonder she was full of dread and fear and resisted with the desperation of death?

So Mary, the person most interested, was about the last to learn that the treaty had been signed.

Windsor was nearly eight leagues from London and at that time was occupied only by the girls and a few old ladies and servants, so that news did not travel fast in that direction from the city. It is also probable that even if the report of the treaty and Brandon's release had reached Windsor, the persons hearing it would have hesitated to repeat it to Mary. However that may be, she had no knowledge of either until she was informed of the fact that the king and the French ambassador would be at Windsor on a certain day to make the formal request for her hand and to offer the gifts of King Louis.

I had no doubt Mary was in trouble and felt sure she had been making affairs lively about her. I knew her suffering was keen, but was glad of it in view of her treatment of Brandon.

A day or two after Brandon's liberation I had begun to expect him of the girls, but he interrupted me with a frightful oath: "Caskoden, you are my friend, but if you ever mention their names again in my hearing you are my friend no longer. I will curse you!"

I was frightened, so much stronger did his nature show than mine, that I took good care to remain silent on that subject until such time as I might see fast again. I will tell you of that hereafter.

Upon the morning, appointed the king, Wolsey, De Longueville and myself, with a small retinue, rode over to Windsor, where we found the court, anticipating us, had barricaded herself in her bedroom and refused to receive the announcement. The king went upstairs to coax the fair young beseiged through two inches of oak door and to induce her if possible to come down. We below could plainly hear the king pleading in the voice of a Bashan bull, and it afforded us some amusement behind our hands. Then his majesty grew angry and threatened to break down the door, but the fair besieged maintained a most persistent and provoking silence throughout it all and allowed him to carry out his threat without so much as a whimper. He was thoroughly angry and called to us to come up to see him "compel obedience from the self willed hussy," a task the magnitude of which he underrated.

The door was soon broken down, and the king walked in first, with De Longueville and Wolsey next, and the rest of us following in close procession. But we marched over broken walls to the most laughable defeat ever suffered by beseiging army. Our foe, though small, was altogether too fertile in expedients for us. There seemed no way to conquer this girl. Her resources were so

"SOMETHING NEW IN NAPANEE."

Mr. A. E. Wilson, who recently came from the United States, and is interested in the Glen Haven Park Amusement Concessions, of Rochester, N.Y., has rented the premises on the second floor, Napanee, next door north of Smith's Jewelry store, and expects to be open to entertain the public with a high class programme, to-morrow (Saturday) at 10 a.m. "Wonderland" is the name of the place of show, and Mr. Wilson is noted for getting an amusement place that ladies and children can visit as safely as any. Napanee has long needed a place of this kind, and we bespeak a large patronage for "Wonderland" which is the biggest 5c worth procurable. The pictures are interesting and instructive of a decidedly moral character and well worth a visit from old and young.

CONDENSED MILK FACTORY.

An American firm have made a proposition to the Town Council to erect a factory in Napanee, providing a sufficient quantity of milk can be obtained from our farmers. They ask a free site and exemption from taxation (school tax excepted) for ten years. Should Napanee be selected as the site, a plant to cost $75,000 to $100,000 will be erected and 20,000 lbs. of milk per day can be obtained. The factory would employ 25 to 30 hands. Should there be a sufficient quantity of milk obtainable to run the plant to their full capacity will obtain 120 hands. We understand the Council will grant a site near the canning factory. The farmers within a radius of Napanee will be canvassed at once, and the following rates are offered for milk per hundred pounds: Jany. $1.45, Feby. $1.35, March $1.30, April $1.25, May $1.05, June &c. July $1.05, August $1.10, Sept., $1.20, Oct., $1.25, Nov., $1.30, Dec. $1.40. The average for the twelve months is $1.20-5-12c.

FROM AN OCEAN GRAVE

THOUGHTS SUGGESTED BY THE WRECK OF THE COLUMBIA.

DEEDS OF QUIET HEROISM

Story of An Appalling Disaster—Pathetic Scenes of Self-Sacrifice—Revelations of Self-Sacrifice—Nobility of Human Nature—Courage of Weak Women—Quietude of Suffering.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1907, by Wm. Briggs, Methodist Book Room, at the Dept. of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 11.—In this sermon the preacher, who was an eye-witness of the rescue of the survivors of the appalling Columbia wreck, draws an eloquent and timely lesson from the disaster. The text is Psalm xlvi, 3, "Though the waters thereof roar and be troubled."

Upon a curtain of one of the public places of amusement in the city of Chicago is a beautiful picture of the "White City" of the national exposition of 1893. Underneath this wonderful vision are written these words: "And should I live a thousand years I never can forget it."

This was the sentence which sprang to my lips when I sat down to write the horrible experience of the most momentous day of my life. But now, instead of seeing beautiful white buildings, with their columns and domes and minarets, and hearing the sweet notes of the most famous musicians in the world played in the gardens and hearing the songs and the merry-makings of the happy parties which filled the gondolas of that new Venice of the west, I saw a sinking ship crowded with men and women, saw lifeboats filled to the gunwales with helpless human beings. I saw the wreckage drifting everywhither. And above all, in imagination, I could see the white faces of men, women and children coming to the surface of the merciless ocean, saterly looking to see whether their loved ones had been saved and then disappearing as to those depths from which only the archangel's resurrection trumpet can now bring them forth. Should I live a thousand years I can never forget it. Those days even in dreams I shall yet talk over the horrors of that day with some who won the crown of martyrdom when the Columbia, one of the finest ships on the Pacific Ocean, collided with the lumber boat San Pedro and then blew up and added one more tragedy to the long list of marine catastrophes.

It was on a beautiful summer afternoon, July 30, 1907, that we set sail from that gem of harbors and passed through the Golden Gate of the Pacific, and for seven days serenely for months I had been preparing and looking forward to the time when, with my boy and a couple of dear friends, I could drop work and camp for a few weeks in the famous forests of northern California. The sea never looked more peaceful, the sky never more bright. Hard, grinding work for a little while was to be cast aside —no telephone, no telegraph, no office, no mail, no engagements to speak. I was just to listen to the music of the woods and his way to the secret haunts of the deer. For hours we loved the deck. Then the sun sank to the west, and the moon began to pave the crystal pavements of the deep with nuggets of gold. Slowly, yet relentlessly, the dense fog banks began to shut out the lofty hills to the eastward and the monotonous, heartsing and irritating fog horn began to blow: "Woo-o-o-o, I said to one of my friends, "no sleep to-night. I have traveled all around the world. I have been months and months on the sea, and yet I could never understand why the sailors would persist in blowing that fog horn. The sea is so wide and the ships so few I do not believe there is any more danger of a collision than there is of shooting a deer in the woods if you lift your gun at random and shut your eyes and pull the trigger and know not where the ball will fly." My traveling companion said nothing. He always has that rebuking silence when I have made any statement which is to self evident defiance of all the laws of common sense.

I went to bed in disgust. Hardly would I get to sleep when I would be awakened with the "fog horn's call: "Look out!" There is danger! Look out!" At 5 o'clock in the morning I arose and went on deck and ate some fruit. Then I returned to my stateroom and crawled into bed with my little boy. I had not been there more than ten minutes when I heard a rapid pattering of feet and the sharp command of the officers. I again rose. As I looked out of the stateroom I said, "What is the matter?" Then the officer pointed ahead, said, "Look!" I looked, and, O God, I saw the saddest sight of my life. There was a small lumber boat which seemed to be "turning turtle." Its decks were simply swarming with people. Yonder were lifeboats. Here were rafts. Here were loose, floating life preservers. A collision had clearly taken place. But where was the other ship? With that the men and the women and the children, seeing the relief coming out of the fog bank, raised a cheer of thanksgiving. But for us on the George W. Elder we could raise no cheer. The scene was too tragic.

Then the work of rescue. As our great ship was rolling this way and that the boats came up. Some of the poor victims were covered with blood. Some were too exhausted even to speak. Some rescued were only with their night garments, and some had only a blanket around them. From the time the Columbia was struck to the time she sank it took only ten minutes to lay her broken bones in the bottom of the sea.

"Stand back there! Stand back or you will sink their boats!" cried the chief officer. "Here, put that rope around this woman. Now lift this old man up. Now here is a child. Now for the other boat." Then the supply boat would go back again for their loads of suffering. Poor, poor things! Some of them—delicate women—came up with only a dressing gown to shield their bodies. Some fainted dead away as they were being hauled up. Some even then were weeping: "O God, my baby!" "O God, my husband and my children!" "O God, my wife and my two children!" It was a scene of pathos beggaling all human description. I saw strong men standing there with the water running down their checks, brave women crying like babies.

As a pastor and Christian teacher I learned many gospel lessons from this heartrending tragedy. Heroic deeds of self-sacrifice were enacted on every hand. With but one or two exceptions it did not seem as if even though there was a coward or a mean and contemptible soul among all the brave crews and passengers of the San Pedro, the Columbia and the George W. Elder, and there was a close and holy association on that fatal day I have heard some people declare that this is a mean and contemptible world, but if such cynics had only been standing with me on the deck of that rescuing steamer on July 30 they would have had their faith in God and in mankind renewed or inspired with a flaming enthusiasm.

That noble heroism was the first call of danger was revealed in the conduct of the commander of the ill-fated steamer Columbia, Capt. P. E. Doran, now of blessed memory. I would have been a very easy matter for him to have escaped with us. But he went to the captain's bridge and stood there. He ordered all the lifeboats to be lowered. Then, while he back others save themselves, he himself with his hand raised to the proper signals. While he was ringing those signals he seemed to be calling:

"My passengers and crew, save yourselves! Some one must due to warn you. I am willing to go. Somebody save yourselves." What a glorious death he died! What a blessed heritage he has given to his dear ones! For all time his name will be emblazoned upon the "honor list" of those who have given their lives in order that their fellow men might live.

The captain's heroism was but a counterpart in the life of many a humble passenger and sailor—for how many only the great honor book of heaven shall ever record. I heard of one young woman who did not know how to swim. She had a life preserver on and could therefore keep afloat. While the boat was coming to get her she grasped two women's skirts and clutched them in her death grip. Then with her right hand she reached out and caught a floating man. When the sailors pulled her into the boat she, with her woman's courage, had saved three human lives. Such heroism was sometimes found in the most unexpected places. After all the survivors had been brought to land the George W. Elder a young girl came and sat by my side. Her face was so innocent to have been that of a frivolous social butterfly. She laughed and joked. I said to myself, "How can such one make light of this horror?" Yet a short time afterward a gentleman told me that this young girl, who seemed to be out of place except as a creature of fun, was so brave that at the risk of her life she had reached out of the boat and with her own frail hands drawn a drowning man over the gunwale and save him. Oh, do not tell me that this is a mean and selfish world! It is a world filled with heroes and heroines when a human life is standing face to face with death. If you had been on that tossing, tumbling sea to the south of Cape Mendocino when the Columbia sank you would have known it.

But another thing which impressed me on that fatal day was the realization that those who truly suffer the most suffer in absolute quietude. It is only the shallow brook that gurgles and splashes and makes a noise. The deep waters of trouble, like a mighty river, sail quietly and smoothly. Oh, the profound, the glorious silence and yet the overpowering sorrow of that sad line of haunting faces of the shipwrecked passengers as they were lying in the berths of the George W. Elder after they reached the rescuing ship!

I went to many of these berths and heard nearly everywhere the same kind of gratitude. Some crews failed take clothes, for many of the survivors had nothing; to others I would carry food; with others I would offer a prayer. "Have you lost any one?" I asked a gentle lady whose young eyes haunted me. "Yes; my baby," she answered. "Is your husband safer" "No," she answered. "I have no husband; I am a widow. Yes, I also had lost her all. Only he who raised up that only son of his mother, and she a widow, could comfort her. Yet there she lay, not uttering one word of complaint. Like a wounded animal, she was suffering in silence.

I saw a man who had set sail from San Francisco with his wife and ten children. Just before the Columbia sank each parent took a child. When the awful plunge came the biggest child was snatched out of the father's arms. The mother and the baby soon came up. Yet that man said hardly a word. While he suffered, he suffered in silence. But to hear some people complain about their little troubles you would suppose that all the petite worries were the greatest troubles in all the world. Ah, my brothers, when you go around and suffer let your grief I am sure about one thing —the terrible storm which you have not amount to much. If you had been on the sinking Columbia and heard the awful shrieks as the ice cold waters touched the hot boilers and it saw had had your wife and child at your swept away then you would have had a grief too great to parade before your fellow men. Then when you suffered you would suffer in silence, in

MOTHERS' ANXIETY.

The summer months are a time of anxiety for mothers because they are then so frequently called upon to care for babies and young children. Stomach and bowel troubles come suddenly, and if not promptly and almost before the mother realizes that there is danger the little one may be beyond aid. Baby's Own Tablets will prevent summer complaints if given occasionally because they keep the stomach and bowels free from offending matter, and the Tablets will cure these troubles if they come suddenly. The wise mother should keep these Tablets always at hand and give them occasionally to her children. The Tablets can be given with equal success to the new born babe or the well grown child. They always do good — they cannot possibly do harm, and the mother has the guarantee of a Government analyst that this medicine does not contain one particle of opiate or harmful drug. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The Kingston Whig of August 5th, 1907, says that all the remaining right and title of the Earl of Mountcashell in the fee simple of Ambrest Lodge was sold at public sale at Kingston on Saturday last. The purchasers are Mr. A. J. Macdonnell, Esq., probably for a client, and the price the island was knocked down for was $5,002. It is said that mortgages exist to the amount of £66,000, which added to the purchase money and costs will make the total cost £75,000. There were upwards of 2,000 acres in fee simple belonging to the Earl, all of it of excellent cultivation, and worth £8 per acre exclusive of buildings.

BRONCHIAL TROUBLES.

READILY YIELD TO SOOTHING, HEALING TREATMENT OF HYOMEI.

Bronchial troubles are purely local. They cannot be helped by stomach dosing. They are caused by irritation in the air passages and can be relieved and cured by medicated air alone. In this lies the secret of the success of Catarrhozone and Hyomei in the treatment of bronchial troubles.

The first breath of Hyomei's medicated air soothes the inflammation, stops the cough, and relief soon becomes per anent and a cure results.

Hy-mei has made many remarkable cures in the worst and most chronic forms of bronchial troubles and is sold by T. H. Wallace with the same positive belief as when Hy-o-mei is purchased for catarrh, that its use offered the money in case the remedy failed to cure as well as benefit. The complete outfit costs but $1.00.

During an electric storm which passed over Prince Edward on Monday afternoon, Mr. Gilbert Huff, whose farm is situated near Massassaga, was struck by lightning, one of his hands being severely blistered. While Mr. Huff was not seriously injured, his escape from a sudden and violent death was a narrow one.

The Railway Commission has issued an order to the effect that, in accordance with the provisions of its charter, the Grand Trunk Railway must provide third-class passenger tickets between Montreal and Toronto at a rate of two cents per mile. The Grand Trunk is given permission to appeal from the decision of the Board to the Supreme Court of Canada. The order will take effect on October 1st, 1908.

The Ontario Government has secured an additional $106,000 as succession duties from the estate of the late Senator Fulford, of Brockville, bringing the total to $356,000. This is the largest settlement yet made of the Senator, who died on October 13th, 1905, was valued at $5,745,000. This has been an exceptionally complicated estate to deal with owing to the fact that the majority of bequests were in the form of annuities, the present value of which had to be computed.

WOMEN PAY MORE.

WHY INSURANCE COMPANIES DISCRIMINATE AGAINST THE GENTLE SEX.

If one is to believe the medical examiners the reason a woman pays more for the privilege of life insurance is that she is much more commonly a victim of indigestion and stomach troubles and the fatal ailments that spring from these causes.

It is not the acute attacks of disease that influence the insurance examiners alone, but the constant feeling of weight, headache, indigestion and stomach trouble. These things, physicians say, kill more people than many of the serious diseases.

For curative power in all stomach troubles nothing else is as safe yet effective, nothing else can be so thoroughly relied upon to relieve all troubles of indigestion, as Mi-o-na. It is unlike any remedy heretofore known; it is not a mere digestive tablet; it strengthens and restores to natural action the stomach and bowels, and makes a complete cure in even the worse form of stomach troubles.

T. B. Wallace sells Mi-o-na in 50-cent boxes under a guarantee to refund the money unless it does all that is claimed for it.

GO TO YOUR DRUGGIST FOR MEDICINES.

When you want groceries, go to your grocer, for he is an authority on that line of goods. When it is a case of medicines being required, it is wise to consult your druggist, who has spent years in the study of his profession and knows from practical experience just what may be expected from the use of any medicine.

Ask your druggist about Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, for instance, and he will tell you that there is no treatment which he can more strongly recommend as a means of overcoming liver complaint biliousness, kidney derangements and constipation.

Druggists are ever ready to endorse Dr. Chase's medicines, because there at once comes to mind so many cases in which these preparations have brought about cures—often remarkable ones.

THE MODERN PUBLIC LIBRARY.

The Modern Public Library," is an article of educational interest in the September number of the New Idea Woman's Magazine. There is probably no other public institution which has undergone a greater awakening within the last twenty-five years, and the writer gives an outline of the principal movements which have taken place for the development of the modern library system. The article also deals with the introduction of the best reading matter into the foremost homes, as well as the many inducements which are made to young and old to become interested in good literature. Altogether told about. The children's story hour and the "reading rooms" for boys are not be found in every locality, but their value as an incentive to reading makes a universal appeal. Every one ought to be interested in this account of one of the greatest influences of our modern times.

WISE PARENTS.

GUARD THEIR CHILDREN'S HEALTH BY GIVING THEM DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS.

The health of the growing boy or girl should be carefully guarded. During the growing time there is a danger of the blood becoming poisoned and the health seriously impaired. The blood should be kept pure and the child will grow strong, healthy and active. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are an ideal tonic for the young. They never fail to bring color to the pale cheeks and strength to the growing body. To a reporter of L'Avenir du Nord, Mr. Jos. Provost, of St. Canute, Que., tells how these pills saved his daughter Marie from a life of misery. He says: "A year ago my daughter, a girl of thirteen, was very weak. She was so ill that I feared she was going into consumption. Though I tried nearly a dozen remedies she remained in this weak state for several months and I began to think she never would get better. I read of the good Dr. Williams' Pink Pills had been in a case of anemia, so got some for her. Soon she began to improve; her appetite returned; she grew strong; color came into her cheeks and to-day she is as healthy as any young girl could be. I firmly believe Dr. Williams' Pink Pills saved her life."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are equally as successful in bringing those of mature age back to health as they are in building up the young. They make pure, red blood—that is why they banish anaemia, rheumatism, St. Vitus dance, heart palpitation, indigestion, and the secret ills of girlhood and womanhood. But you must get the genuine bearing the full name, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People," on the wrapper around each box. All other so-called Pink Pills are imitations. If your medicine dealer does not keep the genuine pills they will be sent at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Horrible! Horrible! Horrible!

The suffering of dyspeptics cannot be understood by those who enjoy perfect digestion. It is the person who suffers from horrible diseases who knows what continual suffering is. He will rarely partake of a appetizing dinner, and realize that to eat lovely food is to suffer afterwards. Let us tell you how you may enjoy eating, so that the heartiest meals will cause you no discomfort, distress or unreasonable feeling of fullness. The directions are simple and the cost trifling.

Deafness Cannot be Cured.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

RE-MODELING THE STORE FRONT OF THE ROBINSON CO., LIMITED.

The contractors have commenced the re-modeling of the Robinson Company Block. Tons of steel will be used in the re-construction of the block. The steel girders piled along Centre st. side are what will be used in support of new front. The Secretary of the Company very kindly showed us the architect's plans, showing the proposed changes. The front when completed will rank with the best in Canada. The extra height from pavement to ceiling has given the architect great scope for producing an imposing front. Heavy plate glass will be used to top of display windows, above that prism glass will be used to top. One entrance will be about where the Pen nell store door stood, the other will be at the corner of Centre and Dundas sts. Temporary entrances are built about 15 feet back from front. That means extra crowding of stocks. To adjust stocks to conditions, Company are sacrificing profits on many lines.

The alterations to the interior of the store, including the tearing out of the walls between the Pennell store and the Clothing store, and the Clothing store and Grey Goods store will not be undertaken until after the Fall and Christmas rush of business is over.

The new show window on the side will make Centre street a more prominent thoroughfare than it has ever been, and we trust the authorities will see to it that this street is kept more attractive than it has been in the past. We would respectfully suggest almost a necessity that the pavement be continued on the east side of this street from Principal's black smith shop to Bridge street.

ANOTHER WONDER OF SCIENCE.

Biology has Proved that Dandruff is Caused by a Germ.

Science is doing wonders these days in medicine as well as in mechanics. Since it has lived, the human race has been afflicted with dandruff, for which no hair tonic has heretofore proved a success—until Newbro's Herpicide was on the market. It is a scientific preparation that kills the germ that makes dandruff or scurf by digging into the scalp at the root of the hair, where it robs it of its vitality causing itching, scaly, dry, and finally baldness. With dandruff hair must grow luxuriantly as the only destroyer of dandruff. Destroying druggists. Send 10c. postage for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

Size 50 cents and $1.00.

CHAS. STEVENS.

When Knighthood Was in Flower

"You are surely right, Sir Edwin. I have no excuse. I can only say that I will tell you how it was. You remember the day you left me in the waiting room of the King's palace when they were discussing my marriage without one thought of me, as if I were but a slave or a thing that could not feel?" She began to weep a little, but soon recovered herself. "While we were in London to return the Duke of Buckingham came in. I knew Henry was trying to sell me to the French king, and my heart was full of trouble—from more causes than you can know. All the council, especially that butcher's son,—were urging him on, and Henry himself was anxious that the marriage should be brought about. He thought that it would strengthen him for the imperial crown. He wanted everything and is ambitious to be emperor. Emperor! He would cut a pretty figure! I hoped, though, I should be able to induce him not to sacrifice me to his selfish interests, as I have done before, but I knew only too well that I would tax my powers to the utmost this time. I knew that [illegible] did anything to anger or to antagonize him it would be all at end with me. You know he is so exacting with other people's conduct for one who is so careless of his own—so virtuous by proxy. You remember how cruelly he disgraced and crushed poor Lady Chesterfield, who was in trouble about a shoe-buckle and who went to Groucho's only to learn if he were true to her. Henry seems to be particularly sensitive in that direction. One would think it was in the commandments, 'Thou shalt not go to Groucho's.'

"Well, I knew I could do nothing with Henry if he once learned of that visit, especially as it resulted so fatally. Oh, why did I go? Why did I go? That was why I hesitated to tell Henry at once. I was hoping some other way would open whereby I might save Charles—Master Brandon. While I was waiting along came the Duke of Buckingham, and as I knew he was popular in London and had almost as much influence there as the king a thought came to me that he might help me.

"I knew that he and Master Brandon had passed a few angry words at one time in my bullroom—you remember, but I also knew that the duke was indebted to me, you know, or pretended to be always said he was—and I felt sure I could by a little flattery induce him to do anything. He was always protesting that he would give half his blood to serve me. As if anybody wanted a drop of his wretched blood. Poor Master Brandon! His blood"— and tears came, choking her words for the moment. "So I told the duke I had promised you and Jane to procure Master Brandon's liberty, and asked him to do it for me. He gladly consented and gave me his knightly word that it should be attended to without an hour's delay. He said it might have to be done covertly in the way of an escape—not officially—as the Londoners were very jealous of their rights and much aroused on account of the killing. Especially, he said, that at that time great caution must be used, should reach the king's ears there would be more and worse trouble than ever, and as usual Brandon would pay the penalty for all. Then again, if it were discovered it might seriously compromise both Mary and Jane, as the world is full of people who would rather say and believe an evil thing of another than to say their prayers or to believe the holy creed.

I had said as much to the Lady Mary when she expressed her determination to go to Brandon. She had been in the wrong so much of late that she was humbled, and I was brave enough to say whatever I felt, but she said she had thought it all over and as every one was away from Greenwich it would be just as well not to tell them secretly.

She told Jane she need not go; that she, Mary, did not want to take any risk of compromising her.

Jane would have gone, though, had she known that all her fair name would go with her. She was right, you see, when she told me while riding over to Windsor that should Mary's love blossom into a full blown passion she would wreck everything and everybody, including herself perhaps, to attain the object of so great a desire.

It looked now as if she were on the highroad to that end. Nothing short of chains and fetters could have kept her from going to Brandon that evening. There was an inherent force about her that was irresistible and swept everything before it.

In our garret she was to meet another will, stronger and infinitely better controlled than her own, and I did not know how it would all turn out.

CHAPTER XII.

ATONEMENT.

I HAD not been long in the room when a knock at the door announced the girls. I admitted them, and Mary walked to the middle of the floor. It was just growing dark, and the room was quite dim, save at the window where Brandon sat reading. Gods, those were exciting moments! My heart beat like a woman's. Brandon saw the girls when they entered, but never once looked or looked up from his book. You must remember he had a great grievance. Jane and I had remained near the door, and poor Mary was a pitiable princess, standing there so full of doubt in the middle of the room. After a moment she stepped toward the window and, with quick coming breath, stopped at the threshold of the little passage.

"Master Brandon, I have come, not to make excuses, for nothing can excuse me, but to tell you how it all happened —by trusting to another."

Brandon arose and, marking the place in his book with his finger, followed Mary, who had stepped backward into the room.

"Your highness is very gracious and kind thus to honor me, but as our ways will hereafter lie as far apart as the world is broad, I think it would have been far better had you refrained from so imprudent a visit, especially as several things have occurred since I saw you as you do, after—after—you know; after what has passed between us."

"Yes, that only makes it all the harder. If you could give your kisses"—and she blushed red as blood—"to one for whom you care so little that you could leave him to die like a dog, when a word from you would have saved him, what reason have I to suppose they are not for every man?"

This gave Mary an opening of which she was quick enough to take advantage, for Brandon was in the wrong.

"You know that is not true. You are not honest with me nor with yourself, and that is not like you. You know that no other man ever had, or could have, any favor from me, even the slightest. Wantonness is not among my undoubted faults. It is not that which angers you. You are sure enough of me in that respect. In truth, I had almost come to believe you were too sure, that I had grown cheap in your eyes, and you did not care so much as I thought and hoped for what I had to give, for after that day you came not near me at all. I know it was the part of wisdom and prudence that you should remain away, but had you cared as much as I your prudence would not have held you."

She hung her head a moment in silence, then, looking at him, almost ready for tears, continued: "A man has no right to speak in that way of a woman whose little favors he has taken, and make her regret that she has given a gift only that it may recoil upon her. 'Little,' did I say? Sir, do you know what that—first—kiss was to me? Had I possessed all the crowns of all the earth I should have given them to you as willingly. Now you know the value I placed on it, however worthless it was to you. Yet I was a cheerful giver of that gift, was I not? And can you find it in your heart to make of it a shame to me—that of which I was so proud?"

She stood there, with head inclined a little to one side, looking at him inquiringly as if awaiting an answer. He was free to speak in that way of a woman whose little favors he has taken, and make her regret that she has given a gift only that it may recoil upon her. 'Little,' did I say? Sir, do you know what that—first—kiss was to me? Had I possessed all the crowns of all the earth I should have given them to you as willingly. A Hair Dressing

Nearly every one likes a fine hair dressing. Something to make the hair more manageable; to keep it from being too rough, or from splitting at the ends. Something, too, that will feed the hair at the same time, a regular hair-food. Well-fed hair will be strong, and will remain where it belongs—on the head, not on the comb!

America from Hamburg, Germany, to New York all carried in their last trip very large shipments for Napanee's Greatest Store. From New York to Napanee it required several cars of Lehigh Valley Railway Co. to transport the goods. Thru our ads. we will try and keep you posted on new arrivals.

THE MEDICAL HALL.

—Cape Vincent, N.Y., annual fair will be held Sept. 3d to 6th.

—An error was made in last week's Beaver. Mr. Geo. Campbell, Odessa, bought a farm near Marysville, not Odessa, from Mr. J. S. McGurn.

—Mrs. Allen and family wish to publicly express their thanks to their friends and neighbors for their great kindness and help during the sickness and death of the late Albert A. Allen.

—The pastor, Rev. J. R. Conn, will take the services in the Presbyterian church next Sunday, having returned from his vacation.

—A regular meeting of Union Lodge No. 9, A.F. & A.M., will be held in Masonic hall, this Friday evening, 23d Aug., at 7.30 o'clock.

—It is proposed to organize a Hog Board in Prince Edward County, on much the same plan as the cheese board, where buyer and seller can get together to exchange views and make sales.

—The conservatives of East Northumberland, East Peterboro', East Hastings, West Hastings, Lennox and Addington, and Prince Edward have organized. The following officers were elected: President, G. O. Alcorn, M.P., Picton; vice-president, A. A. Richardson, Deseronto; secretary, W. C. Mikel, Belleville.

—People often wonder that their letters and postcards sometimes go astray, and are never received. It is not always the fault of those in charge of the mails. Our postal clerks often show us cards and letters which are not directed to anyone and the address on card is simply signed "Mother," "Gus," or some other pet name.

—The newsteritainment house on John st., "Wonderland," has proved a great source of attraction, and has done a great business the past week. It is conducted with rare skill, and the moving pictures are the best ever shown in town. It's the best five cents worth ever offered here. Illustrated songs have also been added to the programme. Open all day Saturday.

—Hay is not a poor crop with all our farmers, and some report excellent results. Last Saturday Mr. Alex. Walker left with The Beaver a sample of blue joint grass, the tallest stalks of which were 7 ft. 2 in. It was taken from the farm of Wm. Gilmore, Sheffield, who has about eighty tons of this hay and timothy, the latter being a good crop.

—Conservative public meetings will be held in the rear townships next month, as follows: Sept. 2d, Flinton, Orange Hall; Sept. 3d, Vennachar, School House; Sept. 5th, at Cloyne, Town Hall; Sept. 6th, at Northbrook, Shier Hall. Meetings open at 7.30 p.m. sharp, and will be addressed by W. J. Paul, M.P.P., and Irish Wilson, M.P. Everybody welcome.

—A subscriber once received a dun through the postoffice, and it made him mad. He went to see the editor about it and the editor showed him a few duns of his own—one for paper, one for type, one for rent and several others. "Now," said the editor, "I didn't get mad when these came because I knew that all I had to do was to ask several reliable gentlemen like you to come and help me out, and then I could settle all of them."

—The September Woman's Home Companion is remarkable principally for two things—the exquisite cover, by Earl Stetson Crawford, which won the $1,500 prize recently offered by the Companion, and for an excellent article on "The Influence of Business Life on Women," by Anna Steese Richardson. This September cover represents the highest achievement in magazine-cover work yet produced, and the article mentioned above will make a profound impression on all people interested in the subject of women in business life, as it is the candid expression of a woman who has made a pronounced business herself. The fiction in this number is far above the average. Anthony Hope continues his charming novel, "Helena's Path," and Jennette Lee, the late Julia Magruder, Grace Gowan Cooke and several others contribute short stories.

REMEMBERED MR. REID.

A most enjoyable time was spent by the members of the Napanee Reading Circle, at Regar's-on-the-Bay, on Wednesday last. The day was perfect; the sail delightful; the dinner good and lots of it, and all could be heard to tell how much of sadness ran through it all. It was a time of reunion for many of our old friends. Mrs. Reid presided over Alma, whom every member had learned to love as a personal friend. Mrs. Reid has been President of the Reading Circle for the past fifteen and by her able leadership, by his faithful and untiring efforts in our behalf, and by his genial manner, he endeared himself to all. As a slight token of the esteem in which they were held by the members, the Circle presented Mr. and Mrs. Reid with the Teacher's Bible, hoping that peace in forty volumes.

Mr. Reid made a most touching reply. He said that the Napanee Shakespeare was assembling for the last time, but hoped to meet at no far distant day. He said that he had gathered his own inspiration and strength from the classics of the English language, and attributed the success of the Circle to the loyalty and cooperation of its members. He said that he would ever look upon the Reading Circle in Napanee as one of the green spots in his memory, and that he hoped he would still be able to visit the Circle in some of its meetings. In closing Mr. Reid asked that the autographs of the members to be written in the book.

After singing Auld Lang Syne and He's a Jolly Good Fellow, the party returned to our friends at the camp, and returned home by the steamer Richelieu.

BRONCHIAL TROUBLES.

READILY YIELD TO SOOTHING, HEALING TREATMENT OF HYOMEI.

Bronchial troubles are purely local, and can easily be helped by stomach dosing. They are caused by irritation in the air passages and can be relieved and cured by medicated air alone. In this lies the secret of the great success of Hyomei in the treatment of bronchial troubles.

The first breath of Hyomei's medicated air soothes the inflammation, stops the cough, and relief soon becomes per anent and a cure results. Hyomei has made many remarkable cures in the worst and most chronic forms of bronchial trouble, and is sold by T. B. Wallace with the same guarantee as he gives when Hy-o-mei is purchased for catarrh, that is, to refund the money in case the remedy does not give satisfaction. The complete outfit costs but $1.00.

A GOOD CATCH.

THREE BURGLARS ROUNDED UP ON MONDAY EVENING BY CHIEF GRAHAM AND COLLEAGUES.

On Monday evening about 8 o'clock Chief of Police Graham received a telephone message from Police Headquarters at Belleville to be on the outlook for three young men who had committed a burglary there, and also had fire arms. They had then left Belleville on a freight train.

The Chief, accompanied by Geo. Greer and Police Magistrate Rankin immediately went up to the station, the two latter going up as far as the Belleville road crossing, and the Chief, along with Mr. Jos. Deshane stopping near the diamond. Three suspects were spotted on an eastbound freight and action soon started. Mr. Graham grabbed one as he jumped from the freight, and an exertaining that he had a revolver, was soon in possession of the weapon, after a hard tussle.

Geo. Greer secured the second man and the third escaped and ran around the canning factory.

The constables delayed for a few minutes, anticipating that the third man would be anxious to learn if his companions were in the toils. Their bit of strategy worked like a new sewing machine, for inside of five minutes a man came walking up the track toward them. He was gathered in, revolver removed from his person, and a prostrate and sorry prisoners and delighted officers wended their way to the lock-up.

Sergeant Hayes, of the Belleville Police force, arrived in town and on Tuesday afternoon took the prisoners to Belleville for trial.

On Monday they broke into Mr. Thos. Gardner's residence, 221 Albert st., Belleville, and secured several valuable pieces of jewelry.

They were all young men of French nationality. The prisoners were Joseph Plouffe, of St. Bruno, Que.; Arthur Lachapelle, Montreal, and Archie Lodoucour, Montreal.

Plouffe had in his possession a gold watch and fob, the watch having "M.B.G." engraved on the back; brooch, gold chain bracelet, gold cuff link, 14-carat ring, 32-calibre revolver, $22 in bills, a gold sovereign, note book and several other small articles.

Lachapelle had a pack of playing cards, gold bracelet, pen knife, keys, etc.

Lodoucer's possessions consisted of gold ball handle, watch charm, gold bracelet, gold watch and jet fob, sword pin, 32-calibre revolver, a medal of the Northwest Rebellion of 1885, with the words "Private T. Gardner, 91OR," and other articles of minor importance.

Chief Graham and his worthy colleagues are to be congratulated on their clever capture, as within forty minutes of the time of the receipt of the telegram the burglars were under the toils, despite the fact that two of them had firearms, and had already used them in Belleville.

"By Medicine Like May Be Prolonged." — wrote Shakespeare, nearly three hundred years ago. It is so to-day. Medicine will prolong life, but be sure of the qualities of the medicine. Life is prolonged by keeping the blood pure. Burdock Blood Bitters will renew and cleanse, eradicate asthma, overcome errors and give strength to the respiratory organs. Give it a trial.

Sleeplessness.—When the nerves are unstrung and the whole body given up to wretchedness, when the mind is filled with gloom and dismal forebodings, the result of derangement of the digestive organs, sleeplessness comes to add to the distress. If only the subject could sleep, there would be oblivion for a while and temporary relief. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will not only induce sleep, but will act so beneficially that the subject will wake refreshed, and restored to happiness.

The Flagging Energies Revived.—Constant application to business is a tax upon the energies, and if there be but relaxation, lassitude and depression are sure to intervene. These come from stomachic troubles. The want of exercise brings on nervous irregularities, and the stomach ceases to assimilate food properly. In such cases Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will be found a recuperative of rare power, restoring the organs to healthful action, dispelling depression, and reviving the flagging energies.

Repairs were taking place at an English cathedral, and the Dean, a very pompous clergyman, came in to see how the workmen were getting on. One of the men, a carpenter, took no notice of him, and the Dean, who thought that the man should have lifted his cap respectfully, said: "Do you know, sir, that I am Dean of this cathedral?"

"Are you, really," said the workman. "Pretty good job, too, you should think. Take care you don't lose it."

EIGHT HOURS A DAY FOR HOUSEWIVES.

"Exceptions aside, the average woman can do about as she wishes with the average man," says the editor in the September Woman's Home Companion in a strong editorial on President Roosevelt's recent speech to an assembly of farmers in Indiana.

"If the wives strike for eight hours they will win; a union composed of such powerful individual members, and with a walking delegate so distinguished, would overcome all obstacles. And what are the obstacles? Why is it that the woman of the house, especially the woman on the farm rises when the sun is ashamed to rise, and works long after the sun has sunk to rest? Is it the men? Are they such beasts that they require more of the woman they promise to love and cherish than they do of themselves? In some cases yes; but in most cases the question never rises in the man's mind. He never asks his mother do anything but work, until she died or you're crazy; poor thing; and his wife—why, of course there is always little things to do around the house. Of course he has more help in his own business when it gets too big for him to handle, but he wouldn't think of giving his wife more help. Wouldn't be 'fair,' and why? Perhaps, after all, women themselves are the chief obstacles in their own way to a square deal.

"And there are few wives who, if they went to their husbands and told them that their long hours were depriving them of their health and their right to enjoy life in its best sense—there are very few who would be refused, the help that the circumstances required."

WOMEN PAY MORE

WHY INSURANCE COMPANIES DISCRIMINATE AGAINST THE GENTLE SEX.

If one is to believe medical examiners the reason a woman pays more for the privilege of life insurance is that she is much more commonly a victim of indigestion and stomach troubles and the fatal ailments that spring from these causes.

It is not the acute attacks of distress that influence the insurance examiners alone, but the constant feelings of weakness, headache, indigestion and stomach trouble. These things, physicians say, kill more people than many of the serious diseases.

For curative power in all stomach troubles nothing else is as safe yet effective, nothing else can be so thoroughly relied upon to relieve all troubles of indigestion, as Mi-o-na. It is unlike any remedy heretofore known; it is not a mere digestive or a tablet; it strengthens and restores to natural action the stomach and bowels and makes a complete cure even in the worse form of stomach troubles. T. B. Wallace sells Mi-o-na in 50-cent boxes under a guarantee to refund the money unless it does all that is claimed for it.

BABY'S HOLDON LIFE.

Baby's Own Tablets cost 25 cents a box. A box bought now may save your baby's life. Summer complaints come often without warning, and thousands of little ones die from them every summer. If children's stomach and bowels are kept in order there is little danger of these troubles, and that is just what Baby's Own Tablets do. They are good for the new born baby or the well grown child—and they are absolutely safe. Give your child an occasional dose of Tablets and you will keep it well. If you have not got a box of Tablets in the house now send for them at once, and you may rest that your little ones are safe. Mrs. Wm. Parrott, Myrtle, Ont., says: "My little boy suffered greatly from colic, and cried almost continuously. A few doses of the Tablets cured him, and now I give the Tablets occasionally to prevent the trouble returning. Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

WOMAN WOUNDED BY BABY.

Swinging a stick at his play, the little son of Mrs. L. Webster, 519 Seigniory Street, Montreal, struck his mother a blow over the eye, inflicting a nasty gash. Inflammation followed and the wound looked very ugly, when a box of Zam-Buk was obtained. The pain was soothed almost instantly Zam-Buk was put on," says Mrs. Webster, "and healing commenced. In a few days the wound was closed, the inflammation gone, and there was only a faint red line showing where the gash had been. Even this mark is now gone. Zam-Buk is such a wonderful healer it should be in every home where there are children."

Zam-Buk is made from concentrated herbal essences, and suits the tenderest skin. Cures eruptions, heal spots, ulcers, ringworm, eczema, piles, chafed places, sore feet. It takes the pain from a sting or burn, cools sunburn patches, and makes red, rough skin smooth and velvety. Excellent for children's tender skin.

Undigested Food
When any portion of food remains in the stomach and refuses to digest, it causes the torments of indigestion. This undigested food rapidly ferments, irritating the sensitive coating of the stomach, while other parts of the body, particularly the head, suffer in consequence.
So long as this undigested food remains in the stomach, the discomfort continues. A few doses of stop all fermentation, sweeten the contents of the stomach and give natural assistance that relieves the stomach of its burden. The use of Beecham's Pills gradually strengthens the stomach nerves and soon restores them to a normal, healthy condition.
Beecham's Pills positively cure all stomach troubles, while their beneficial effects on the liver and kidneys greatly improve the general health.
Beecham's Pills have been used and recommended by the general public for over fifty years.
Prepared only by the Proprietor, Thomas Beecham, St. Helens, Lancashire, Eng.
Sold everywhere in Canada and U.S. America. In boxes 25 cents.

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

Arrangements have been completed for the final appearance at the Bisco Opera House, on Tuesday, 27th Aug., of that much beloved and ever popular presentation of Porter J. White's "Faust," with all the old time realistic and startling electrical effects and numerous new and novel devices in stage craft. William Richards, better known among his college alumni as "Nick himself" has been particularly selected and he ably sustains Mephisto. Miss Olga Verne portrays the role of "Marguerite" and is strikingly beautiful and winning in the part and contributes to the performance one of its chief charms. The gowns worn by Miss Verne were specially imported from Paris for this last great renewal of the one true stage version. Faust by Frederick I. Wilson is strong and impressive and his emotion genuine, his powers appeals to one as being Shakespeare's one ideal of a true and devoted lover. These three characters alone in the hands of such well known "Metropolitan stars" is a guarantee in itself of the merit of the entertainment.

CONDENSED MILK FACTORY.

The gentlemen who are advocating the starting of a condensed milk factory in Napanee were in town again on Wednesday, to receive the report of the Council as to the number of cows owned by farmers within six miles of the town who would send milk to the factory. Mayor Meng presented the report to them. The number of cows is 1,811, which is the largest that is obtainable in this section. The gentlemen represented the Borden Condensed Milk Co., of New York. They have 128 factories in the United States, some of which receive 700 gallons of milk as 400 hands. Reports have been received from the neighboring towns and district, and will be placed before the Board of Directors of the Company, who will decide where to locate. It is understood that Napanee's chances are extremely favorable, and the Council will be informed as soon as a decision is arrived at.

SUNDAY SCHOOL PICNIC.

On Wednesday of this week the Sunday School picnic of Bay Circuit was held in Mr. J. F. Parks' grove on No. 1, and it was a most enjoyable day. The weather was perfect, the crowd good natured, and they were queer people who did not have a pleasant time. Gretna and Bethany baseball teams played an interesting game in the morning. The score was 13 to 10 in favor of Gretna. Dinner was served in picnic style, and while we may not consider the menu pretty dry, if the dinner was any indication, there is no danger of famine in this section. As soon as possible after dinner the sports were called and they furnished interest and amusement. Later in the afternoon Hawley and Bethany foot ball teams tried conclusions and when the story was finished the result was a tie. A booth supplied refreshments during the day with returns of over $45.00. One who did not attend could secure a fair idea of the delightful day by remembering the best picnic at which they were ever present and then try to imagine one somewhat better. Rev Demill is to be congratulated on the able way in which he organized and managed the picnic.

LOG OF MAIDE II.

Mr. M. B. Mills and family with their friends, Miss Belle Bleecker and Mr. Elmer Wright, returned on Tuesday at noon from most delightful cruise in Bay of Quinte and lower Lake Ontario, in Yacht Maidge II. All report having had the time of their lives, and certainly if a good tan shade counts for anything, their report may be deemed correct. During the whole trip the weather was most delightful, and although the fishing was not quite up to the mark, the party had considerable sport along this line. The first few days were spent around familiar scenes around Picton, Glen Island and Bluff Island, and at Prince's Bay many fine fish were caught. Then Madge visited Waposus Island, a pretty spot on the south side of Prince Edward. The Indian Lake was next visited, at which place orchids and black bass found their way into Madge's larder. Sunday and Monday were spent in the Limestone city, and on returning to the Brothers, all had a taste of lake sailing in crossing the lower gap in a "blow." On Wednesday a fine run was made to the Main Duck, where several days were spent. All enjoyed the bathing in the breakers. One of the main attractions was a visit from the fishermen haul their nets, and the best part of the second week was made during the Madge's stay, when over eight hundred pounds of white fish were taken in one afternoon's haul. The latter were taken home by the boys. It was a memorable sight to see so many large fish, most of them weighing from twenty to forty pounds each. On Sunday the first favorable wind came for home, and Madge anchored once again in familiar waters, arriving in Napanee Tuesday.

THE DAY-LIGHT STORE.

GREATER NAPANEE'S

MOST PROGRESSIVE STORE

THEY HAVE ARRIVED

New Fall Dress Goods | New Furs | New Fall Ready-to-wears

A showing of Dress Goods, Furs and Ready-to-wear Garments of which Napanee should be proud of. We are always first for we believe that Napanee customers should have the same chance as people living in the larger cities, and we feel sure they have never had a better opportunity to purchase up-to-date dress goods, furs and ready-to-wear garments, that is at the present represented in these great departments. It is too often the case that folks living in one town believe that the merchandise shown in some nearby city better than that in their own, or that better assortments can be seen elsewhere than in the home stores.

Now just stop and think for a moment. Is there a town in this district that deserves better stocks than Napanee, because of its own population as well as having several miles surrounding to draw from? Is there a town in the whole Eastern Ontario that has progressed as swiftly and surely as Napanee and surrounding country in the past few years? Is there a town in Eastern Ontario that includes in its population as great a number of people who are particular about their personal attire? Certainly not.

Realizing these facts Madill Bros. has brought to Napanee among other merchandize from Europe, dress goods, furs and ready-to-wear stocks well equipped to supply the needs of every person in this vicinity. It is not necessary to go east or west to buy handsome materials to wear, we carry the choicest and largest selection, etc., to choose from. The products of the best and leading mills of the world in sufficient variety to suit the most particular. Come in and let us show them to you. As previously stated our buyer, Mr. J. S. Madill, is still looking after the people's interests in the old world. As a result consignments are received daily.

FURS.

It is surely out of the ordinary for a store in this section to show Furs as early for fall and winter. But nevertheless this is just what is taking place in this establishment. We are in a position to do as the large fur stores do in the way of importing every fur we sell from the greatest manufacturers in the world, Russia and Germany. The name "Madills" stands as the ball mark of quality and style in furs. The reputation our house has justly earned for selling exclusively high grade and reliable furs is continental. We are showing complete lines in our new models. Our fur show rooms are always open to visitors and strangers in the town. We want you to come and inspect our furs. You will be welcome whether you buy or not, and in any case your time will be well spent.

Among some of the particular lines in Caps are coney wedges, French otter, electric seal, astrachan and opossum, from $1.50 to $5.00 each.

Every piece of fur bought now gives you the best selection, and will be stored free of charge, with a small deposit, until you require them. (It pays to pay for quality.)

Ready-to-Wears.

The pretty new Coats and Skirts for fall and winter, the production of Germany, France and New York, are far ahead of anything ever attempted in Napanee. Every garment in our stock is exclusive and confined to us. No chance of meeting yourself on every corner when you buy a garment from us. The pretty 3/4 and full length box coats of chiffon broadcloth, beaver, milton and pretty tweed mixtures elaborately ornamented with velvet and silk braids. Not midsummer styles, not samples, not slow-selling goods, but the fashion of the hour, just brought out from the patterns of Europe and New York artists and designers. Fresh and new, perfect in every respect, bristling with all the latest fashion kinks. Visit our spacious show rooms and inspect these beautiful garments.

We are nearing the end of the busiest August the store has ever known. Pretty nearly everybody in Napanee has commented upon and commended the splendid growth of this store, and merchants in other cities are keeping in touch with our progress. The cause of this growth is not secret; there is no mysterious key which opened, to us the way of success. The vital principle of our growth is plain straightforward, old fashioned HONESTY in every detail of this great business.

The Store WILL NOT Be Closed Next Wednesday.

GREAT CLEARING SALE

1-4 OFF SUMMER GOODS DURING AUGUST

During August you are going to find things lively around these stores. Attractive goods at greatly reduced prices will make things that way. We never had such large stocks of SUMMER DRESS GOODS, and there is not a week but we will have to clear them out. It is necessary that we should have the room for Fall stocks which begin to arrive about the end of September, and we have determined to sell off all Summer lines before that date. Nothing will be carried over. In this you are with us when you see the prices we are asking.

¼ WHITE WAISTS, ¼ off regular prices.

¼ WHITE SKIRTS, ¼ off regular prices.

¼ WHITE COTTON DRESS FABRICS, ¼ off regular prices.

¼ MUSLINS, ¼ off regular prices.

¼ LIGHT TWEED DRESS GOODS, ¼ off regular prices.

¼ RAIN COATS, ¼ off regular prices.

25 per cent. is a large discount, but we are willing to make it, and just have to, for we bought heavily and the late spring was not favorable to large sales.

LADIES' HOSIERY, ¼ off regular prices.

LADIES' UNDERWEAR, ¼ off regular prices.

Carpets and Linoleums.

It may be a little early to talk about floor coverings, but we are rather proud of the stock we have in this line and want you to see these goods. Prices have advanced 10 to 15 per cent. since we bought, and we are giving you the advantage of the old prices. It may surprise you to see what a variety of Carpets and Linoleums we carry. Mr. Harvey is very much pleased with possession of the 'phone, and Mr. Beaver will give every attention to our wants. So, Napanee, come on, and give a helping hand by subscribing to this good scheme. MOTHER'S RESTING.

The long rough road is ended.
Her weary feet have ceased.
The cross is changed for the crown.
Perhaps we never guessed
How much the weary Saviour
She'll be no more distressed.

The face we loved and softly kiss
Bears no imprint but that of bliss.
We know that many pages
Within the book of years
Shall be filled with anguish.
Amid her lifelong tears.
But for her the rest of now
Nor grief again her rest will know.

We gaze at her dear features
Within the casket bed.
And think that she is dwelling
Where sweeter peace is found.
That there no painful partings
Her loving heart shall wound.
And weeping for her loved and gone
We gather strength to walk alone.

Along the way before us
Whither we do not know,
Or thickly set with dangers
May lying in wait and woe,
Let ever life's pathway she has come
At last unto her heavenly home.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

When Knighthood Was In Flower

"No, no. Just forgive me. That is all I ask." And her head was on his breast.

"Let us step out into the passageway, Edwin," said Jane, and we did. There were times when Jane seemed to be inspired.

When we went back into the room, Mary and Brandon were sitting in the window-way on his great cloak. They rose and came to us, holding each other's hands, and Mary asked, looking up to him:

"Shall we tell them?"

"As you like, my lady."

Mary was willing, and looked for Brandon to speak, so he said, "This lady whom I hold by the hand and myself have promised each other before the good God to be husband and wife if fortune ever so favor us that it be possible."

"No; that is not it," interrupted Mary. "There is no 'if' in it. It shall be whether it is possible or not. Nothing shall prevent." At this she kissed Jane and told her how she loved her, and gave me her hand, for her love was so great within her that it overflowed upon every one. She, however, always had a plenitude of love for Jane, and, though she might scold her and apparently misuse her, Jane was as dear as a sister and was always sure of her steadfast, tried and lasting affection.

After Mary had said there should be no "if" Brandon replied:

"Very well, Mme. Destiny." Then, turning to us, "What ought I to do for one who is willing to stoop from so high an estate to honor me and be my wife?"

"Love her and her alone with your whole heart as long as you live. That is all she wants. I am sure," volunteered Jane sentimentally.

"Jane, you are a Mme. Solomon," said Mary, with a tone of her old time laugh. "Is the course you advise as you would wish to be done by?" and she glanced mischievously from Jane to me as the lunch bubbled up from her heart, merry and soft, as if it had not come from what was but now the home of grief and pain.

"Now you know"—

"I know nothing about how I should like to be done by," said Jane, with a pout, "but if you have such respect for my wisdom I will offer a little more. I think it is time we should be going."

"Now, Jane, you are growing foolish again; I will not go yet," and Mary made manifest her intention by sitting down. She could not bring herself to forego the pleasure of staying, dangerous as she knew it to be, and could not bear the pain of parting, even for a short time, now that she had Brandon once more. The time was soon coming —but I am too fast again.

After a time Brandon said: "I think Jane's wisdom remains with her, Mary. It is better that you do not stay, much as I wish to have you."

She was ready to obey him at once.

When she arose to go she took both his hands in hers and whispered; "Mary, I like the name on your lips," and then, glancing hurriedly over her shoulder to see if Jane and I were looking, lifted her face to him and ran after us.

We were a little in advance of the princess, and as we walked along Jane said under her breath: "Now look out for trouble; it will come quickly, and I fear for Master Brandon more than any one. He has made a noble fight against her and against himself, and it is no wonder she loves him."

This made me feel a little jealous.

"Jane, you could not love him, could you?" I asked.

"No matter for that I could do, Edwin; I do not, and that should satisfy you." Her voice and manner said more than her words. That was almost dark, and—I have always considered that occasion one of my lost opportunities, but they are not many.

The next evening Brandon and I, upon Lady Mary's invitation, went up to her apartments, but did not stay long, fearing some one might find us there and cause trouble. We would not have gone at all had not the whole court been absent in London, for discovery would have been a serious matter to one of us at least.

As I told you once before, Henry did not care how much Brandon might love his sister, but Buckingham had while served suspicions of the state of Mary's heart, and his own observations, together with the intercepted note, had given them to his jealous and revengeful soul, so that a very small matter might turn them into certainties.

The king had pardoned Brandon for the killing of the two men in Billingsgate, as he was forced to do under the circumstances, but there his kindness stopped. After a short time he deprived him of his place at court, and all that was left for him of royal favor was permission to remain with me and live at the palace until such time as he should sail for New Spain.

THE treaty had been agreed upon, and as to the international arrangement, at least, the marriage of Louis de Valois and Mary Tudor was a settled fact. All it needed was the consent of an eighteen-year-old girl—a small matter, of course, as marriageable women are but commodities in statecraft, and theoretically, at least, acquiesce in everything their liege lords ordain.

Wolsey, whose manner was smooth as an otter's coat, had been sent to fetch the needed "yes," but he failed.

Jane told me about it.

Wolsey had gone privately to see the princess and had thrown out a sort of skirmish line by flattering her beauty, but had found her not in the best humor.

"Yes, yes, my lord of Lincoln, I know how beautiful I am. No one knows better. I know all about my hair, eyes, teeth, eyebrows and skin. I tell you I am sick of them. Don't talk to me about them. It won't help you to get my consent to marry that vile old creature. That is what you have come for, of course. I have been expecting you. Why did not my brother come?"

"I think he was afraid, and, to tell you the truth, I was afraid myself," answered Wolsey, with a smile. This made Mary smile, too, in spite of herself-and went a long way toward putting her in a good humor. Wolsey continued: "His majesty could not have given me a more disagreeable task. You doubtless think I am in favor of this marriage, but I am not."

This was as great a lie as ever fell whole out of a bishop's mouth. "I have been obliged to fall in with the king's views on the matter, for he has had his mind set on it from the first mention by De Longueville."

"Was it that hard-eyed little mummy who suggested it?"

"Yes, and if you marry the king of France you can repay him with usury."

"'Tis an inducement, by my troth."

"I do not mind saying to you in confidence that I think it an outrage to force a girl like you to marry a man like Louis of France, but how are we to avoid it?"

By the "we" Wolsey put himself in alliance with Mary, and the move was certainly adroit.

"How are we to avoid it? Have no fear of that, my lord; I will show you."

"Oh, but my dear princess; permit me. You do not seem to know your brother. You cannot in any way avoid this marriage. I believe he will imprison you and put you on bread and water to force your consent. I am sure you had better do willingly that which you will eventually be compelled to do anyway; and, besides, there is another thought that has come to me. Shall I speak plainly before Lady Jane Bolingbroke?"

"I have no secrets from her."

"Very well. It is this: Louis is old and very feeble. He cannot live long, and it may be that you can by a ready consent now exact a promise from your brother to allow you your own choice in the event of a second marriage. You might in that way purchase what you could not bring about in any other way."

"How do you know that I want to purchase aught in any way, Master Wolsey? I most certainly do not intend to do so by marrying France."

"I do not know that you wish to purchase anything, but a woman's heart is not always under her full control, and it sometimes goes out to one very far beneath her in station, but the equal of any man on earth in gentleness of soul and nobleness of nature. It might be that there is such a man whom my woman would be amply justified in purchasing at my sacrifice—doubly so if it were buying happiness for two."

His meaning was too plain even to pretend to misunderstand, and Mary's eyes flashed at him as her face broke into a dimpling smile in spite of her.

Wolsey thought he had won, and to clinch the victory said, in his forceful manner: "Louis XII. will not live a fear; let me carry to the king your consent, and I guarantee you his promise as to a second marriage."

In an instant Mary's eyes shot fire, and her face was like the blackest stormcloud.

"Carry this to the king: That I will see him and the whole kingdom sunk in hell before I will marry Louis of France. That is my answer once and for all. Good even, Master Wolsey." And she swept out of the room with head up and dilating nostrils, the very picture of defiance.

After Wolsey had gone Jane said to Mary: "Don't you think it would have been better had you sent a softer answer to your brother? I believe you could reach his heart even now if you were to make the effort. You have not tried in this matter as you did in the others."

"Perhaps you are right, Jane. I will go to Henry."

Mary waited until she knew the king was alone, and then went to him.

On entering the room she said: "Brother, I sent a hasty message to you by the bishop of Lincoln this morning, and have come to ask your forgiveness."

"Ah, little sister, I thought you would change your mind. Now you are a good girl."

"Oh, do not misunderstand me. I asked your forgiveness for the message. As to the marriage, I came to tell you that it would kill me and that I could not bear it. Oh, brother, you are not a woman. You cannot know." Henry flew into a passion and, with oaths and curses, ordered her to leave him unless she was ready to give her consent. She had but two courses to take, so she left with her heart full of hatred for the most brutal wretch who ever sat upon a throne, and that is making an extreme case. As she was going she turned upon him like a fury and exclaimed:

"Never, never! Do you hear? Never!"

Preparations went on for the marriage just as if Mary had given her solemn consent. The important work of providing the trousseau began at once. When the queen went to her with silks and taffetas and fine cloths to consult about the trousseau, although the theme was one which would interest almost any woman, she would have none of it, and when Catherine insisted upon her trying on a certain gown she called her a blackamoor, tore the garment to pieces and ordered her to leave the room.

Henry sent Wolsey to tell her that the 13th day of August had been fixed upon as the day of the marriage. De Longueville to act as the French king's proxy, and Wolsey was glad to come off with his life.

Matters were getting into a pretty tangle at the palace. Mary would not speak to the king, and now Catherine was afraid to come within arm's length of her. Wolsey was glad to keep out of her way, and the few at the court walked with talons and beak upon first sight. As to the battle with Buckingham, it had been short, but decisive, and this was the way it came about: There had been a passage between the duke and Brandon, in which the latter had tried to coax the former into a duel, the only way of course to settle the weighty matters between them. Buckingham, however, had had a taste of Brandon's nimble sword play and, bearing in mind Edison's fate, did not wish a repeat more. They had met by accident, and Brandon, full of smiles and as polite as a Frenchman, greeted him:

"Doubtless my lord, having crossed swords twice with me, will do me the great honor to grant that privilege the third time and will kindly tell me where my friend can wait upon a friend of his grace."

"There is no need for us to meet over that little affair. You had the best of it, and if I am satisfied you should be. I was really in the wrong, but I did not know the princess had invited you to her ball."

"Your lordship is pleased to evade," returned Brandon. "It is not the ball-room matter that I have to complain of. As you have rightly said, if you are satisfied I certainly should be, but it is that your lordship, in the name of the king, instructed the keeper of Newgate prison to confine me in an underground cell and prohibited communication with any of my friends. You so arranged it that my trial should be secret both as to the day thereof and the event, in order that it should not be known to those who might be interested in my release. You promised the Lady Mary that you would procure me a fair and speedy trial, and then afterward told her that it had been done, as promised, and that I had escaped to New Spain. It is because of this, my Lord Buckingham, that I now denounce you as a liar, a coward and a perjured knight, and demand of you such satisfaction as one man can give to another for mortal injury. If you refuse, I will kill you as I would a cutthroat the next time I meet you."

"I care nothing for your rant, fellow, but out of consideration for the feelings which your fancied injuries have put into your heart, I tell you that I did what I could to liberate you and received from the keeper a promise that you should be allowed to escape. After that a certain letter addressed to you was discovered and fell into the hands of the king, a matter in which I had no part. As to your confinement and noncommendation with your friends, that was at his majesty's command after he had seen the letter, as he will most certainly confirm to you, I say this for my own sake, not that I care what you may say or think."

This offer of explanation the king made it all sound like the truth, so much evil even a little truth leaven a great lie, and part of Brandon's ardor came down against the mast. The whole statement surprised him, and most of all the intercepted letter. What letter could it have been? It was puzzling, and yet he dared not ask.

As the duke was about to start away Brandon stopped him: "One moment, your grace; I am willing to admit what you have said, for I am not now prepared to contradict it, but there is yet another matter we have to settle. You attacked me on horseback and tried to ride me down—ere yet, I am sure you had my lord will meet me like a man, or would he prefer that I should go to the king and tell him and the world the whole shameful story? I have concealed it heretofore thinking it my personal right and privilege to settle with you."

Buckingham turned a shade paler as he replied, "I do not meet such as you on the field of honor, and have no fear of your slander injuring me."

He felt secure in the thought that the girls did not know who had attacked them, and could not corroborate Brandon in his accusations, or Mary, surely, never would have appealed to him for help.

I was with Brandon—at a little distance, that is—when this occurred, and after Buckingham had left we went to the spot where the fight had been. We knew they would be looking for us, although they would pretend surprise when they saw us. We soon met them, and the very leaves of the trees gave a soft, contented rustle in response to Mary's low, mellow laugh of joy.

After perhaps half an hour we encountered Buckingham with his lawyer-knight, Johnson. They had evidently walked out on this quiet path to consult about the situation. As they approached, Mary spoke to the duke with a vicious sparkle in her eyes.

"My Lord Buckingham, this shall cost you your head. Remember my words when you are on the scaffold, just when your neck fits into the hollow of the block."

He stopped, with an evident desire to explain, but Mary pointed down the path and said: "Go, or I will have Master Brandon spit you on his sword. You to one would be easy odds compared with the four to one you put against him in Billingsgate. Go!" And the battle was over, the foe never having struck a blow. It hurt me that Mary should speak of the odds being two to one against Brandon when I was at hand. It is true I was not very large, but I could have taken care of a lawyer.

Now it was that the lawyer-knight earned his bread by his wits, for it was by it more. They had met by accident, and Brandon, full of smiles and as polite as a Frenchman, greeted him:

"Doubtless my lord, having crossed swords twice with me, will do me the great honor to grant that privilege the third time and will kindly tell me where my friend can wait upon a friend of his grace."

I should be willing, says Eustace Miles, in Chambers' Journal, to stake my very existence on the fulfilment of the following prophecy. The exercise of the future will include adequate training of the left side, and especially the left hand. The right hand. But, if only for the sake of self-respect, symmetry, and the relief of the right hand, especially in case of accident. It will be skilful, capable of independent action. The exercise of the future will not, like so many systems of to-day (based on custom and ignorance), do most of its movements with the two hands working alike. As I said before, the exercise of the future will include different work at each hand—both at once. Then we shall have the ambidexter, the ideal man, the man who can write with his left hand as well as with his right, who can use his left hand for the fine work and his right for the strong work, who can play the violin with his left hand and the bass with his right, who can use his left hand for the delicate and his right for the muscular. These men will insist that each hand be able to work while the other either rests (scarcely ever do persons in a hundred properly rests his unused and unwanted hand) or else, if required, performs a different task—here, again, most people are lamentably incompetent and clumsy.

TREMENDOUS SACRIFICE SALE

—OF—

DRESS GOODS REMNANTS!

Tuesday, Sept. 3d. All 25c. yard

The noise of the hammer and saw, and song of the bricklayer's trowel are heard on every hand during these days of extensive alterations. The cry comes for more room, and we must have it. To meet this demand for extra space we have decided to clear out all our Dress Goods Remnants at a farewell price. That means that at this low price not a single remnant will be left. In this lot you will find Broadcloths, Venetians, Lustres, Mohairs, Tweeds, Crepe-de-Chene, Eolienes, etc., in lengths suitable for Skirts, Waists, Shirt Waist Suits and Children's Dresses, anc ranges in price from 50c to $1.90 per yard. On Saturday morning these will be on display near front, and on Tuesday, Sept. 3d. at 10 o'clock sharp, every yard goes at . . . . . 25c.

Fall Dress Goods, 1907

Mostly every woman in Napanee and surrounding country has been anxiously waiting to see Robinson's Fall Dress Goods. It is not necessary for us to occupy a whole column of a newspaper to convince you that our new goods comprise the very newest and most select fabrics that can be gathered together. You know this firm's past experience. Just to give you an idea of what a glimpse into our dress goods department would mean to you, we make mention of a few numbers only.

OMBRE PLAIDS, FANCY PANAMAS, PLAIDED AND STRIPED BROADCLOTHS — These goods range in price from $1.00 to $2.50 per yard. The colorings are perfect. Beautiful dark shaded effects. To really appreciate them you must see them.

BROADCLOTHS—Last season our Broadcloths were the talk of the town on account of their elegant finish and lasting appearance. This season in spite of advanced prices we are prepared to supply you with the same material at the same prices.

SKINNER'S SATIN. — We are fortunate in announcing that we have secured the sole agency for this Satin. It has proved itself to be the very best material for lining tailored suits that is manufactured. It is 27 in. wide, guaranteed goods, and bears the maker's name on the selvage of every yard. There is none genuine unless stamped as above mentioned.

BLACK DRESS GOODS — Always popular, and perhaps this season a little more so than usual. Our lines of black goods are very extensive. Space will just allow mere mention of some new arrivals, such as Amazons, Broads, Panamas, Armures, Henriettas, Satin Cloths, Cashmeres, Venetians, Cheviots, etc., etc.

Sheer materials in plain and fancy weaves — Voiles, Eolienes, crepe-de-chenes, marquisettes, etc. .

In fancy weaves these materials are shown in checks, spots, plaided, and figured effects. It is worth a visit to our dress department to see these new materials.

EXCLUSIVE DRESS PATTERNS.—When you want something exceptionally fine, something in a dress pattern that you will not see on everybody else, just ask to see our exclusive lines. All we ask is an opportunity to show you them. We are quite ready to abide by your decision.

Eight Moravian, Brussels and Wilton Rugs

Building operations are crowding our Carpet section. We have thousands of dollars worth of Carpets on the way from Europe, and we simply have to make room. This is one we will sacrifice profits on: eight Moravian Brussels and Wilton Rugs. These Moravian Rugs are of the Oriental type, being copies in color and design of the ancient Indian and Persian Rugs. Jute enters largely into their make up, and while not being suitable for a fine drawing room one, they make excellent wearing rugs for dens, libraries, dining rooms, hall bedrooms, bungalows, etc. Note the sizes and the littleness of price.

One red and blue Brussels, 5 ft. 8 in. x 8 ft. 5 in., for $6.00.

—Mr. W. Clark, Odessa, met with a peculiar experience one day last week. He was on his usual daily trip through the country with a load of general merchandise. About two miles from Bath he pulled up to a farm house to deliver some goods. Across the road was a tent in the front yard of another farmer, fluttering in the breeze. He jumped into the wagon and the horses started at a lively pace, but came to a sudden halt, coming in contact with a four-foot ditch, and breaking the wagon tongue in four pieces. Mr. Clark went into the air about five feet, but escaped injury. After some time the wagon was righted and another tongue attached, which he borrowed from a near-by farmer, and went on his usual route none the worse for his experience.

—A large excursion party from Belleville, per steamer Varuna, visited our town on Tuesday, headed by the Salvation Army Band of that city. They played about the streets generously, and made excellent music.

—A handsome polished brass railing has been placed in front of the wicket at the postoffice, to prevent crowding. Only one person will now be able to stand at the wicket at a time. Brass guard rails are also being placed at each entrance to the building.

—A large crowd attended the picnic at Adolphustown on Wednesday of last week, in honor to Mr. G. C. Publow, and celebrate the advances made by U. E. L. cheese factory. A sumptuous repast was served in Platt's grove, and afterwards the time was spent listening to addresses, songs, etc. Mr. G. S. Harrison acted as chairman.

—Wonderland is enjoying great success. Large crowds are visiting this amusement house every day. The management expect to put on religious pictures in the near future, the subject being "The Life of Christ —from the birth to the resurrection." This is one of the best series ever shown, and is of a highly religious character. Look for date. Announcement later.

—The Campbell House is undergoing extensive repairs at present. The front has been repainted a rich color, the woodwork is being painted and grained downstairs, the walls papered, and a contract has been let for a new steam heating plant which will be started next week. Mr. H. Taylor, the genial proprietor, is indefatigable in his efforts to make the Campbell House one of the most comfortable and home-like hostelries in Eastern Ontario. If the whole front of the Campbell House block was painted alike it would add greatly to the appearance of the same.

—The Deseronto Court of the Independent Order of Foresters are giving first, second and third prizes for yacht races to be competed for by boats owned in Napanee and Deseronto, on Monday next (Labor Day). There are two classes—over 15 foot, and under 15 foot. The races will be under the management of the Napanee Yacht Club as to time allowances, etc. The boats will be handicapped according to their rating. A good time may be looked forward to.

PERILS OF UNBELIEF

TESTIMONY OF MOSES TO THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST.

SIMPLE FAITH IS ESSENTIAL

Supernatural Aids to Belief Must Not Be Sought After—Symbol of the Graveyard—Supreme Self-Sacrifice Test of Sincerity — Wisdom of Ancient Egypt — The Miracle of the Wilderness.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1907, by Frederick Dwyer, Toronto, at the Dept. of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 18.—In picturesque imagery the preacher in this sermon shows the significance of the testimony of Israel's greatest leader to Jesus as the Messiah. The text is Luke xvi, 31, "If they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded, though one rose from the dead."

The symbol of the graveyard is used by Jesus for his gospel teachings, just as many artists use skeletons for their models in great artistic masterpieces. The parable of Dives and Lazarus is nothing more or less than a great panorama, a collection of verbal pictures, showing the eternal tragedy of a misspent life.

Scene the First.—At eastern prince is in his palace. All that wealth and power could suggest surrounded him as is his. His clothes are of royal purple. His dining-room is a banquet hall. His seats are of white polished. His floors are mosaics. His hallways and bedrooms and parlors are filled with statuary and richest tapestries and beautiful artistic masterpieces. Upon his doorstep crouched a poor beggar, starving to death, malodorous and offensive from innumerable ulcers and abscesses which have broken out over his body on account of improper nourishment.

Scene the Second.—Two graves and the celestial advent of the beggar and the eternal incarceration of him who had once been king among men. The earthly pauper has been crowned. The earthly prince has been stripped of his all. Then Dives, down in the region of the lost, looks up and sees Lazarus who had once sat at his doorstep a despised beggar, but now cherished and cared for by Abraham, the father of the faithful, and he cries out: "I pray thee, father, that thou wouldst send Lazarus to my father's house, for I have five brethren, that he may testify unto them, lest they also come into this place of torment."

Then what happens? God seems to reach down and lift a skeleton out of its grave and clothe it again with flesh. He stands this resurrected dead man before us and points to him as he says: "If they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded though one rose from the dead." The statement practically is that if a man is open to conviction he will be convinced by the testimony of Moses and the prophets; if he is not convinced by them, nothing will convince him—not even the testimony of a specter. This is a startling assertion. Have we ever fully realized that those words are so convincing? What was there in the life and writings of that ancient lawgiver that makes them so influential?

Moses by the law of adoption took the rank of one who was well born. He was adopted son of Pharaoh's daughter. He was the best development of the greatest throne on earth. He had all the best that civilization and culture could give him. He was born great. He was rocked in a golden cradle and out of a palace of royalty and had servants innumerable to run his bidding. When he emerged forth in one of the royal chariots the people used to kneel and say, "There goes the child who will one day rule over us as king." In the sight of the world he was simply a slave or a Hebrew. He had been raised to royal rank. All that he had to do was to keep his lips closed, and he might live in affluence and inherit a throne. Into this Egyptian prince, this adopted child of Pharaoh's daughter, was ready to surrender all of kingly power in order to be a follower of the true God. Now, every effect must have a logical cause. A man does not surrender a great prize of life just for a whim. There must have been some great impelling force in Moses' life to have led him to serve God and espouse the cause of the Hebrew slave.

We have read of men and women surrendering their faith for an earthly throne, but did you ever know of a man surrendering an earthly throne for his religion unless he died for it and conscientiously believed in that religion? When Edward the prince of a few years ago married Emperor Nicholas and became Empress Alix of all the Russias, she renounced the Greek church and joined the Catholic church, which is the established church of her adopted country. These two princesses chose God. Their religious creed in order to win a throne. Now, what would you say if the present Prince of Wales should join the Roman Catholic church? What would you say if he should turn from the Episcopalian church and give his religious fealty to the Pope of Rome, as did Cardinal John Henry Newman? If he can unite, he would by that act surrender all his claims to the British throne. No British people will not have a Roman Catholic for their king. When they got rid of James II., the last king of that religion, they made a perpetual stipulation that none but Protestants should sit on the British throne. The prince knows that the price he would have to pay for joining the Roman Catholic church would be the loss of his throne. If he concluded to join that church in spite of that penalty, you would say that man must be sincere. No man lightly renounces a throne. And yet this is just what Moses did. He was the son of Pharaoh's daughter. He had, in the sight of the law, the right of succession, as he had really royal blood in his veins. The Egyptian throne was his if he simply kept still and said nothing. And yet here was a prince, born as a young man born great—one to whom every selfish purpose of the heart said, "Be still; do not ruin your chances of an earthly throne," declaring, "Nay, I will worship the true God and will be faithful to my enslaved people." A man who could come to such a decision, who actually renounced a throne that he might be faithful to principle, is a phenomenon; was a man whose words are entitled to weight. If a man would not listen to him, would not be convinced by him, he would not be convinced by any one else who spoke to them.

But Moses was not only a man of high station; he was a prince in intellect as well as a royal prince. He had one of the greatest intellects the world has ever produced. But more than that, he had one of the greatest opportunities, for developing that intellect. The best Egyptian teachers were his. The greatest knowledge of the then known world was concentrated in Egypt. And Moses was educated in the most famous schools of that land. Who can fully estimate the knowledge of those ancient Egyptians?

Was not the Egypt of ancient Amenophis the home of erudition and knowledge?

If the ancient Egyptians were not erudite, how can you account for this great pyramid of Cheops which was without any doubt built as an astronomical observatory? Is not even the massive stones of this pyramid the last day scientists are unable to understand how they were lifted into place. How can you account for the wonderful irrigation system of Egypt, thousands of years old, yet a system from which modern irrigators can well learn their lessons at the present time?

The Egyptians were not an ignorant people. It is a very grave question whether they did not know as much in their line as we know in ours. They had their written forms for the transmission of things just as we have now. A. H. Sayce, one of the most famous modern Egyptian archæologists, says: "So universal was knowledge among the ancient Egyptians of Moses' time that they did not believe there was immortality for any Egyptian unless he, as a resurrected spirit, could read the sentences which were carved upon his own tomb." Thus it is not only Moses as a prince who is testifying to us to-day that the ways of God; it is Moses the sage as well; it Moses who had studied all the philosophies of his day; it is Moses the erudite scholar, with the vast libraries of his time by his side, who comes to testify to us of Christ. Do not the words of such men have a deeper significance when you realize the transcendent intellectuality of this Egyptian prince than when you simply look upon him as the adopted son of Pharaoh's daughter? Is not the apparent of the Egyptian throne? By character and by attainments he is entitled to our attention. And he said unto him, If they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded, though one rose from the dead."

But Moses' brain was not simply receptive. He had a creative as well as an absorbing intellect. He could give out as well as take in. You know that there are certain intellectual men who seem to lack the creative faculty. They learn as a parrot learns. When they take a book they can read it through and repeat the pages almost verbatim. They can index their minds so that you can hardly ask them a question that they cannot answer. They are like some of the honor students of our college days who always stood at the head of their classes, yet when they entered life's struggle they were always failures in the present time, or could create any new ideas of their own. And, alas, they may be led, but, unlike the shepherds, they cannot hoist up new pastures, and when last they will be found starving to death, to pioneer their way into a safe fold.

Now, Moses had a creative as well as an absorbing intellect, as we study this gigantic genius we know not which to admire the most—the power by which he absorbs knowledge or the power by which he creates new knowledge. Study him the way you will and you cannot but be amazed. Study him with reference to his hygienic laws. We have given in our investigations in dietary developments. We have our systems of dietary, and our "two meals a day" theories and our hot water theories and all that. Yet to-day it is admitted by hygienic authorities that no dietary system has yet been devised which can give more assurance of longer or healthier life than that system which Moses promulgated in his hygienic laws for the Hebrew people nearly 4,000 years ago. Study his land laws, under which the people every seven years were given back the titles to their old homesteads. Do you not believe that Moses' way was better than our way, where a man can gobble up all our coal lands and farm lands and then say to the rest of the people, "Now starve, for we are to be the land-owning forever." Take the protection which he threw the people in the right of trial by establishing the ten cities of refuge. Take all those marvelous precautions for protecting human life which he made, including even the building of battlements or balustrades about the roof of the house so that a guest might not fall off and kill himself. And then, most wonderful of all in those times of theft and dishonesty and licentiousness, study those marvelous Ten Commandments which he gave to the people from Mount Sinai.

My friend, it was upon that Almighty did not write those Ten Commandments for Jewish people only. Moses was the greatest of the world's legislators.

But Moses was more than a creator of laws. He was a direct miracle worker—as well. He was such a worker of miracles that if we do not accept those miracles as authentic and from him then we should be compelled to regard him as a fabulous character. But he was a miracle worker as Christ was a miracle worker. "Oh," I hear some man say, "I believe in Moses but not in his miracles." Why, my friends, you cannot believe in Jesus unless you believe in his miracles, for Christ continually appealed to his miracles as the credentials of his teaching. And so Moses, through the power of God which was given to him, founded his life work upon miracles.

Now, study Moses for a little while down in Egypt. Here are the Egyptians, the greatest, the most warlike people upon the face of the earth at that period. Now, he entered their great warriors and intellectual giants, there was a collection of Hebrews. These Hebrews were slaves, deprived of all books. They could not learn the science of arms. They were brutally abused. They were killed off every year by the hardest kind of manual labor. As a people they were more cowed and downtrodden than the black slave ever was. Now, who liberated these men? These Hebrew slaves were liberated—that is true—but how? By one man walking into the king's palace and defying the king with one little wand. But behind that wand was the omnipotent God. That one man, by the power of that one rod, made the mightiest nation on earth bow its knee and beg for mercy. Oh, you say, I deny that we ever see those. Then, my friend, as a student of history you have to deny the facts which we find recorded upon the tombs and the monuments of the dead Pharaoh. How else can you account for those Egyptian memories of the miracle worker Moses in reference to God?

But I am not done with this miracle worker Moses. I used to think that the most marvelous facts recorded in the Bible were those plagues of Egypt. When as an imaginative boy I read them I could feel in those lurid lines the locusts buzzing about me, and I could taste the blood of the river Nile, and I could feel the awful darkness pressing down upon me. But now I see that those were the mere miracles sink into insignificance before one tremendous fact of Moses' life. That fact is greater than those concerning the Red Sea. It is greater than the Ten Commandments. It is the fact that Moses could have led 3,000,000 Israelites out into the wilderness and supported them there for nearly forty years, where there was not one spear of grass growing and practically not one drop of water. How did he do it? That fact is the greatest miracle of all the Bible. I believe that and you can believe the miraculous conception of Jesus Christ and the resurrection of Jesus and also the ascension from Mount Olivet. Aye, you can believe anything written in the Bible, I care not where you may find it.

The wilderness of the Old Testament is a wilderness of rock and sand. That region lies to the northeast of Mount Sinai. That region is the driest region in all the east outside of the Sahara desert. There is no living creature there except the venomous serpent. You may have seen the horrible picture called "Death Valley and Its Harvest." There in the valley there so many miners have met their death in the burning, blinding sand. A living prospector. In his delirium he sees mountains and lakes and beautiful bubbling springs. But sand, endless sand, only is around him. So is the desert where Moses led the children of Israel and kept them there for nearly forty years. It is a wilderness of rock and desolation. How did he feed these 3,000,000 men and women and children? How did he give them drink by the power of God? Why, the miracle of a dead man bursting out of his grave and testifying to you of the divinity of Jesus Christ is not to be compared to this miracle worker in the desert of the forty years' wandering. If we will not believe Moses and the prophets, neither will we believe though one rose from the dead. Hear it, man! By Moses' testimony hear it!

Then we have Moses the prophet as well as Moses the miracle worker. I wish I had more time to speak upon this theme, but my time is already gone, and I must be brief. But I will say this—Moses was not only a prophet "whom the Lord saw face to face, but he was also a prophet who could lift his finger and raise the curtain which separated the present from the future and look away down into the coming centuries until he saw Him to the manger of Bethlehem and saw the cross, and saw Jesus' celestial triumph." You have often read how Gabriel spoke of Moses. And you ever stop to think that Moses in a measure was a prophet of the Lord Jesus Christ? Moses not a Messianic prophet? How account for that wonderful statement of Deuteronomy xviii, 15: "The Lord will raise up unto thee a prophet from the midst of thee, of thy brethren, like unto me; unto him ye shall hearken?" To whom was Moses alluding? To Joshua? Was Joshua such a prophet?" I asked a great Bible student. "A prophet?" he exclaimed. "Why, Moses was nothing if he was not a prophet. He saw the coming of the Messiah. If any one ever did." Yes, this miracle worker is a prophet as well. What will you do to-day in reference to his testimony? Will you reject it, or will you let Moses' God be your God?

But I must pause a moment before I close to call attention to you to the most overwhelming fact of all this sermon. Some of us have not only rejected the testimony of a Moses, but we have rejected the testimony of one who has risen from the grave as well. Did you ever stop to think this text may be a two-edged sword which cuts both ways? The thing I was about for has been done. A greater than Moses has risen from the dead; but, as I said, men are not convinced. We have not only rejected the testimony of a Moses in reference to God's love, but we have also rejected all the testimony we have of the resurrection of Jesus Christ. Can it be that any one here to-day is committing that fearful decision? Can it be close by reading the text with a little change, "And he said unto him, If they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded, even though Jesus who died for our sins and was buried, shall rise again from the dead." Brother, is that doubter of God's love here? Is he in this building to-day? Is Jesus of the parable speaking to thee?

DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS BRING BACK THE GLOW OF HEALTH BY MAKING NEW BLOOD

To bad into perfect womanhood the growing girl must carefully guard her health. Unless the blood is kept rich and pure, headaches, backaches and frequent dizzy spells will trouble her. She will always be ailing and may slip into a deadly decline. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a never failing remedy in building up the blood. Just a few days ago the reporter of L'Avenir du Nord met Miss Josie Lavoie and carefully noted her condition. She was then in the town of St. Jerome, Que., there is an orphan asylum under the care of Sisters of the Grey Nuns. In this home Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are constantly used. For some months two of the young girls in the home had suffered from anaemia. The symptoms in both cases were very much alike. They were both pale, and the sufferers complained of headaches and dizziness. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were taken and in both cases an improvement in their condition. The color returned to their cheeks, their appetites improved; headaches ceased and soon good health took the place of dejection and misery. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done for these two orphans, Miss Lavoie and Melvina Brooks—they will do for others.

The secret of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is entirely in the fact that they have power to make new, rich, red blood. That is why they strike straight at the root of such troubles as anaemia, headaches, sideaches and backaches, rheumatism, neuralgia, indigestion, anaemia, St. Vitus dance, partial paralysis and the special ailments that make the lives of so many girls a growing grief. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or may be had by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

SIMPLE WAY TO KILL CATARRHAL GERMS IN NOSE, THROAT AND LUNGS.

The only natural and common sense method known for the cure of catarrhal troubles is Hy-o-mei. It is breathed through an ingenious pocket inhaler, so that its medicated air reaches the most remote air-cells of the nose, throats and lungs, killing all catarrhal germs, soothing the irritated mucous membrane, and restoring a healthy condition.

Hy-o-mei goes right to the spot where the catarrhal germs are present—in the throat, lungs and head, and destroys the germs so that perfect health is soon restored.

A complete Hy-o-mei outfit with inhaler costs but $1.00 and is sold by R. Wallace under guarantee to refund the money unless the remedy gives satisfaction. 35b

DON'T DIE AT 45.

CURE THE INDIGESTION WHICH IS SO LIABLE TO LEAD TO APOPLENY.

People who suffer with headache, constipation, bad taste in the mouth, drowsiness, distress after eating, and any of the other distressing results of indigestion, are in serious danger. Their digestive organs cannot cate for the food properly and the poisonous results of the blood vessels in the brain get little nourishment, become brittle, and finally yield to the fierce blood pressure and one is then said to have a "shock," be paralyzed, or die from apoplexy.

In all diseases of digestion and nutrition the prescription called Mi-o-na has proven itself of great value. It is relied upon to-day as a certainty to relieve the worst troubles of indigestion and make a complete cure.

That Mi-o-na will cure the worst forms of stomach trouble, cancer excepted, and give quick relief in indigestion, is proven by the guarantee T. B. Wallace gives with every 50-cent box to refund the money unless Mi-o-na cures. A guarantee like this must inspire confidence. 35b

RESULTS OF EXPERIMENTS WITH AUTUMN SOWN CROPS.

The area used for sowing wheat and other autumn crops was somewhat greater throughout Ontario in the fall of 1906 than in that of 1905. At the Agricultural College this year winter wheat and winter rye have produced large yields of grain which is above the average in quality, but the winter barley and the hairy vetches have given results somewhat lower than those of 1906.

Generally speaking, white wheats, as compared with red wheats, yield more grain per acre, possess stronger straw, weigh a little less per measured bushel, are slightly softer in the grain, produce a more popular pastry flour, and furnish a somewhat weaker flour for bread production.

Of the white wheats, Dawson's Golden Chaff and other selected varieties; such as, Abundance, Imperial Amber, Reliable Rural New Yorker No., 6, American Wonder, Superlative, Forty-fold, Prize Taker and Extra Early Windsor, and of the red wheats, Imperial Amber, Paramount and Crimson Red have produced the highest yields of grain per acre in the College experiments. In the following characteristics the varieties mentioned below are very prominent: stiffness of straw, Dawson's Golden Chaff, Prosperity, Enormity and Early Ontario; hardness of grain, Buda Pesth, No. 5 Red, Crimean Red, Banatka, Tasmania Red and Geneva; weight of grain, Northwester, Auburn and Genesee; and milling quality of grain, Tasmania Red, Ruby, Onigara, Crimean Red, Yaroslaf, Turkey Red, Early Genesee Giant, Banatka, Northwester, Geneva and Imperial Amber.

We are endeavoring to improve some of the best varieties of winter wheat by means of systematic selection and by cross-fertilization. Each of eight different selected strains of Dawson's Golden Chaff wheat gave a yield of over 70 bushels of grain per acre in 1907. Some of the most promising hybrids, which are constant in type this year, are those produced by crossing the Dawson's Golden Chaff with the Bulgarian and with the Turkey Red. The object in crossing is to originate new kinds which will combine the good qualities and eliminate the undesirable features of the parent varieties.

The results of many tests conducted at the College indicate the importance of sowing with a grain drill, large, plump, sound, well matured seed wheat at the rate of about a bushel and a half per acre on well prepared clover sod, and as earlier if possible than the 10th of September. Smutted wheat should be immersed for twenty minutes in a solution of one pint of formalin and forty-two gallons of water.

The recent tests at the College of other classes of autumn sown crops show the best varieties to be also the heaviest average yielders of grain per acre: Mammoth White Winter Rye, 62 bushels, Tennessee Winter Barley, 53.4 bushels, Hairy Vetches, 50 bushels and Black Winter Emmer.

In the co-operative experiments, conducted throughout Ontario in 1907 under the direction of the Experimental Union, the average yields of grain per acre were as follows: Winter Wheat, Imperial Amber, 22.2 bushels; Abundance, 21.7 bushels; and Michigan Amber, 20.3 bushels, and of Winter Rye, Mammoth, 26.4 and Common, 21.1 bushels.

Distribution of Material for Experiments.

THEY DRIVE PIMPLES AWAY—A few severe cases of pimples is unsightly; a rash of internal irregularities which should long ago have been corrected. The liver and the kidneys are not performing their functions in the healthy way they should, and these pimples are to let you know that the blood poisons. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will drive them all away, and will leave the skin clear and clean. Try them, and there will be another witness to their excellence.

FOR INFLAMMATION OF THE EYES.—Among the many good points about Parmelee's Vegetable Pills possess, besides their purifying influence on the blood, is their efficacy in reducing inflammation of the eyes. It is a well known fact that many cases of consumption from those who were afflicted with sore eyes, have obtained a cure in the pills. They affect the nerve centres and the liver in a surprisingly short time, and the result is almost immediately seen.

THE MEDICAL HALL.

DECORATION DAY.

Last Sunday was Decoration Day in Napanee, both I.O.O.F. Lodges joining in the decoration of the graves of deceased brethren. In the morning about ten graves were visited in the Western cemetery, and at 3 p.m., those in the Eastern cemetery were decorated, about thirty-five in number. The citizens turned out in large numbers and were ably addressed by Rev. G. S. White, and Mr. R. Meek, Secretary of the Oddfellows' Relief Association, Kingston. This beautiful annual custom is exemplary of Oddfellowship, and the members of both local lodges wish to thank the citizens for their generous donations of flowers.

SAD DROWNING.

Our citizens were shocked to learn that the body of a respected business man, Mr. Edgar L. Knight, had been found in the river on Tuesday morning about 10 o'clock. Life was extinct, and it is supposed the body had lain in the water about three hours. Mr. Knight had been ill for some days past. The Deceased that he was suffering from typhoid-fever, and advised him to take to his bed. This he refused to do, and for several days attended to his business, subject to a high fever. On Tuesday morning he rose about 5.30. Mrs. Knight appealed to him to remain in bed, but he would not, and said he would go down stairs and light the fire. This was the last seen of him alive by the family. When he did not appear for breakfast, Mrs. Knight became alarmed, and later search was made for him about town. Someone had seen him going down towards the big mill, and later his hat was found on the bank. The Chief and Wm. Hicks soon located the body with a pike pole in about ten feet of water, and brought it ashore. The authorities considered an inquest unnecessary. There is no doubt deceased was delirious from fever, and becoming desperate and disheartened rashly ended his life. Deceased leaves a wife and three children to whom the deep sympathy of the entire community goes out in this their time of trouble.

No sufferer knows what continual misery it entails, literally torturing to body and mind by a tempting dinner, and realize that to eat freely means to suffer keenly, and not to eat, you have no enjoying eating, so that the heartiest meals will be comfortless to those in dyspepsia misery and the most trying.—Ed.

OBITUARY.

Florence Robertson White, wife of Charles DeWitt White, Boston, Mass., and only child of Mrs. Helen A. Robertson, Providence R.I., died on July 13th, 1907, at the early age of 26 years. She married to Charles DeWitt White on January 6th, 1904. On Aug. 2nd, 1906, a son was born to them. In February last the baby contracted scarlet fever. Anxious for the life of her darling baby boy, she took no thought for herself. The good medical treatment and care the baby got over the fever, and when the doctor pronounced him out of danger, the mother collapsed and went to bed; her whole nervous system broke down and gave way. She made all her plans for her funeral even to the minutest detail, but recovered sufficiently however, to be able to be up again and go out driving, but was taken down again the latter part of June, and sank very fast into a decline, despite all that the best of medical treatment and loving care could do to save her. She was perfectly resigned to go and left every assurance of a glad and glorious resurrection. After death the remains were taken to her grandmother's home, the late Mrs. Elizabeth A. Hammond, Providence, R.I., where the funeral was held.

Indigestion

Stomach trouble is but a symptom of, and not itself a true disease. We think of Dyspepsia, Flatulence, and Indigestion as real diseases, yet they are symptoms only of a certain specific sickness—nothing else.

It was the fact that first certainly led Dr. Shoop to the discovery of that now very popular remedy—Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Nothing else could have done it. Nothing else but this remedy is to-day helping so many sufferers to sleep and to happiness. When that original and highly vital principle, no other known combinations were ever to be had. Stomach distress, bloating, biliousness, bad breath, and sallow complexion, try Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—and see for yourself. It is at once safe and will do. When Knighthood Was In Flower

Henry grew angry and ordered Brandon to leave the court, with the sullen remark that it was only his services to the Princess Mary that saved him from a day with papers on the pillory.

Henry was by no means sure that his suspicions concerning Mary's heart were correct, and in all he had heard he had not one substantial fact on which to base conviction. He had not seen her with Brandon since their avowal, or he would have had a fact in every look, the truth in every tone, a demonstration in every glance. She seemed powerless even to attempt concealment. In Brandon's handsome manliness and evident superiority the king thought he saw a very clear possibility for Mary to love, and where there is such a possibility for a girl she usually fails to fulfil expectations.

Now, all this brought Brandon into the deep shadow of the royal frown, and like many another man sunk his fortune in the fathomless depths of a woman's heart and thought himself rich in doing it.

CHAPTER XIV.

IN THE KING'S COUNTRY.

WITH the king admiration stood for affection, a mistake frequently made by people not versed in the study of the heart, and Brandon was offered his old quarters with me until such time as he should find for New Spain.

He had never abandoned this plan, and now that matters had taken this turn with Mary and the king his resolution was stronger than ever in that the scheme held two recommendations in a possibility.

The recommendations were, first, it would take him away from Mary, with whom, even out of the blinding influence of her buoyant hopefulness, he knew marriage to be utterly impossible, and, second, admitting and feeling that impossibility, he might find at least partial relief from his heartache in the stirring events and adventures of that faraway land of monsters, dragons, savages and gold. The possibility for the latter I was falsely hurrying flame of hope held out the most faintly glimmering chance of success, but since him there inmost alone, might for lack of another lover smile upon him by way of squaring accounts, and that gold of the Spanish Main would do anything, even perhaps purchase a princess a throne as a certain princess of the royal blood.

Brandon at once accepted the king's offer of lodging in the palace, for now that he felt sure of himself in the matter of New Spain and his separation from Mary he longed to see as much as possible of her before the light went out forever, even though it were playing with death itself to do so.

Poor fellow! His suffering was so acute during this period that it affected me like contagion.

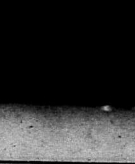
It did not make a mope of him, but came in spasms that almost drove him wild. He would at times pace the room and cry out: "Jesu, Caskoden, what shall I do? She will be the wife of the French king, and I shall sit in the wilderness and try every moment to imagine what she is doing and thinking. I shall find the bearing of Paris and look in her direction until my brain melts in my effort to see her, and then I shall wander in the woods, a suffering imbecile, feeding on roots and nuts. Would to God one of us might die! If it were not selfish, I should wish I might be the one."

I said nothing in answer to these outbursts, as I had no consolation to offer. He also saw Brandon might be the last, would sit and look at him with glowing eyes that in turn softened and burned as he spoke. She did not talk much, but devoted all her time and energies to looking with her whole soul. Never before of since was there a girl so much in love. A young girl thoroughly in love is the most beautiful object on earth—beautiful even in its ugliness. Imagine, then, what it made of Mary!

Growing partly, perhaps, out of his unattainability—for he was as far out of her reach as she out of his—she had for Brandon the most wonderful love. She had learned to know him so well, and his radiant defense of her in Billingsgate, together with his noble self-sacrifice in refusing to compromise her in order to save himself, had presented him to her as nothing short of a god, and had come to look up to him as her superior. Her surrender had been complete, and she found in it a joy far exceeding that of any victory or triumph she could imagine.

The trouble began in earnest with the discovery of our meetings in Lady Mary's parlor. There was nothing at all unusual in the fact that small companies of young folk frequently spent their evenings with her, but we knew well enough that the unusual seemed in our parties was their exceeding smallness. A company of eight or ten young persons was well enough, although it of course created jealousy on the part of those who were left out, but four—two of each sex—made a difference in kind, however much we might insist it was only in degree, and this, we soon learned, was the king's opinion.

You may be sure there was many a jealous person about the court ready to carry tales and that it was impossible long to keep our meetings secret among such a host as then lived in Greenwich palace.



One day the queen summoned me and put her to the question. Now, Jane thought the truth was made only to be told, a fallacy into which many good people have fallen, to their utter destruction, since the truth, like every other good thing, may be abused.

Well, Jane told it all in a moment, and Catherine was so horrified that she was like to faint. She went with her hair-tilting horror to the king and poured into his ears a tale of Brandon's deceit and debauchery well calculated to start his righteous, virtue-prompted indignation into a threatening flame.

Mary, Jane, Brandon and myself were at once summoned to the presence of both their majesties and severely reprimanded. Three of us were ordered to leave the court before we could speak a word in self defense, and Jane had enough of her favorite truth for that day. Mary, however, came to our rescue with her coaxing eloquence, impotent feminine logic and soon convinced Henry that the queen, who really counted for little with him, had made a mountain out of a very small molehill. Thus the royal wrath was appeased to such an extent that the order of expulsion was modified to a command that there be no more quartet gatherings in Princess Mary's parlor. This leniency was more easy for the princess to bring about by reason of the fact that she had not spoken to her brother since the day she went to see him after Wolsey's visit and had been so roughly driven off. At first, upon her refusal to speak to him after the Wolsey visit, Henry was angry on account of what he called her insolence, but as she did not seem to care for that and as his anger did nothing forward unsealing her lips he pretended indifference. Still the same stubborn silence was maintained. This soon began to amuse the king, and of late he had been trying to be on friendly terms again with his sister through the medium of elephantine antics and bearlike pleasantries, which were the most dismal failures—that is, in the way of bringing about a reconciliation. They were more successful from a comical point of view. Indeed, he was really glad for something that would loosen the tongue usually so lively, and for an opportunity to gratify his sister, because he was demanding such a sacrifice and for whom he expected to receive no less a price than the help of the king of France, the most powerful king of Europe, to the imperial crown.

Our meetings were broken up, and Brandon knew his dream was over and that any effort to see the princess after Wolsey's visit would be disaster for them both; for him certainly.

The king upon that same day told Mary he proposed to send a letter to Spain for her to Brandon at Newgate and accused her of what he was pleased to term an improper feeling for a lowborn fellow.

Mary at once sent a full account of the communication in a letter to Brandon, who read it with no small degree of ill comfort as the harbinger of troubles.

"I had better leave here soon or I may go without my head," he remarked. "When that thought gets to working in the king's brain, he will strike, and I—shall fall."

Letters began to come to our rooms from Mary, at first begging Brandon to come to her and then upbraiding him because of his coldness and cowardice and telling him that if he cared for her as she did for him he would see her though he had to wade through fire and blood. That was exactly where the trouble lay. It was not fire and blood through which he would have to pass; they were small matters—mere nothings that would really have added zest and interest to our adventure. But the frowning laugh of the tyrant, who could bind him hand and foot, and who could remember none of the Cowards dungeon, with a dangling noose or a hollowed out block in the near background, were matters that would have taken the adventurous tendency out of even the cracked brain of chivalry itself. Brandon cared only to fight where there was a possible victory or ransom, or a prospect of some sort at least of achieving success.

So every phase of the question which his good sense presented to Brandon, whose passion was as ardent though not so impatient as Mary's, told him that it would be worse than foolhardy to try to see her. He, however, had determined to see her once more before he left; but, as it could in all probability be only once, he was reserving the meeting until the last. And what terrible Mary that it was their best and only chance.

She could not endure inaction, so she did the worst thing possible. She went alone one afternoon, just before dusk, to see Brandon at our rooms. I was not there when she first went in, but having seen her on the way suspected something and followed. Arriving five or three minutes after her. I knew it was best that I should be present and was sure Brandon would wish it. When I entered, they were holding each other's hands in silence. They had not yet found their tongues. A full and crowded were their hearts. It was pathetic to see them, especially the girl, who had not Brandon's hope lessness to deaden the pain by partial resignation.

Upon my entrance she dropped his hands and turned quickly toward me with a frightened look, but was reassured upon seeing who it was. Brandon mechanically walked away from her and seated himself at a stool, and, mechanically, began to whittle a side and placed her hand on his shoulder. Turning her face toward me she said, "Sir Edwin, I know you will forgive me when I tell you that we have a great deal to say and wish to be alone."

I was about to go when Brandon stopped me.

"No, no. Caskoden, please stay. It would not do. It would be bad enough. God knows, if the princess should be found here with both of us, but with me alone I should be dead before morning. There is danger enough as it is, but they will watch."

Mary knew he was right, but she could not resist a vicious little glance toward me, who was in no way to blame.

Presently we all moved into the window-way, where Brandon and Mary sat upon the great cloak and I on a camp stool in front of them, completely filling up the little passage.

"I can bear this no longer," exclaimed Mary, "I will go to my brother tonight and tell him all. I will tell him how I suffer and that I shall die if you are allowed to go away and leave me forever. He loves me, and he will do anything with him when I try. I know I can obtain his consent to our—our—marriage. He cannot know how I suffer, else he would not treat me so. I will let him see; I will convince him. I have in my mind everything I want to say and do. I will sit on his knee and stroke his hair and kiss him." And she laughed softly as her spirit revived in the breath of a glowing hope. "Then I will tell him how handsome he is and how I bear the ladies sighing for him, and he will come around all right by the third visit. Oh, I know how to do it. I have done it so often. Never fear. I wish I had gone at it long ago."

Her enthusiastic fever of hope was really contagious, but Brandon, whose life was at stake, had his wits quickened by the danger.

"Mary, would you like to see me a corpse before tomorrow noon?" he asked.

"Why, of course not! Why do you ask such a dreadful question?"

"Because, if you wish to make sure of it, do what you have just said—go to the king and tell him all. I doubt if he could wait till morning. I believe he would awaken me at midnight to put me to sleep forever—at the end of a rope or on a block pillow."

"Oh, no; you are all wrong. I know what I can do with Henry."

"If that is the case, I say goodby now, for I shall be out of England, if possible, by midnight. You must promise me that you will not only not go to the king at all about this matter, but that you will guard your tongue, jealous of its slightest word, and remember with every breath that on your prudence hangs my life, which, I know, is dear to you. Do you promise? If you do not, I must fly. So you will lose me one way or the other if you tell the king—either by my flight or by my death."

"I promise," said Mary, with drooping head, the embodiment of despair, all life and hope having left her again.

After a few minutes her face brightened, and she asked Brandon what ship he would sail in for New Spain, and whence.

"We sail in the Royal Hind from Bristol," he replied.

"How many go out in her, and are there any women?"

"No, no!" he returned. "No woman could make the trip, and, besides, on ships of that sort, half pirate, half merchant, they do not take women. The sailors are superstitious about it and will not sail with them. They say they bring bad luck—disasters which calms, storms, blackness, monsters from the deep and victorious foes."

"The ignorant creatures!" cried Mary.

Brandon continued, "There will be a hundred men if the captain can induce so many to enlist."

"How does one procure passage?" inquired Mary.

"By enlisting with the captain, a man named Hunsurt, at Bristol, where the ship is now lying. There is where I enlisted by letter. But why do you ask?"

"Oh, I only wanted to know."

We talked awhile on various topics, but Mary always brought the conversation back to the same subject, the Royal Hind and New Spain. After asking many questions she set in silence for a time and then suddenly broke into one of my sentences. She was always interrupting me as if I were a child.

"I have been thinking and have made up my mind what I will do, and you shall not dissuade her. I will go to New Spain with you. That will be, glorious—far better than the humdrum life of sitting at home—and will solve the whole question."

"But that would be impossible, Mary," said Brandon, into whose face this new evidence of her regard had brought a brightening look; "utterly impossible. To begin with, no woman could stand the voyage, not even you, strong and vigorous as you are."

"Oh, yes I can, and I will not allow you to stop me for that reason. I could bear any hardship better than the torture of the last few weeks. In truth, I cannot bear this at all. It is killing me. What would it be when you are gone and I am the wife of Louis? Think of that, Charles Brandon; think of that, and tell me I am the wife of Louis. Even if the voyage kills me, I might as well die one way as another, and then I should be with you, where I were sweet to die." And I had to sit there and listen to all this foolish talk!

Brandon argued that their plans were going. As I told you, they would not take one. Besides, how could you marry me? Remember, there is always

I had to sit there and listen to all this foolish talk!

"It is not a dream. It shall be a reality. How glorious it will be! I can see us now throwing ourselves among the hills, shaded by great spreading trees, with flowers and vines and golden fruit all about it, rich plumaged birds and gorgeous butterflies. Oh, I can hardly wait! Who would live in a dreary palace when one has wealth to reach such a home, and that, too, with you?"

Here it was again. I thought that the terrible would be the death of me.

Brandon held his face in his hands and then, looking up, said: "It is only a question of your happiness, and, hard as the voyage and your life over there would be, yet I believe it would be better for you. After you left—" Here he faltered. Nothing could be so terrible as that to both of us. If you wish to go, I will try to take you, though I fear I shall attempt. There will be ample time to recover, so that you can turn back if you wish."

Her reply was inarticulate, though satisfactory, and she took his hand in both of hers and gently drew it down her cheeks, this time tears of joy, the first she had shed for many a day.

In the evening I sought again without wax! Overboard and lost!

Yes, Brandon's resolution not to go was the wisest he had taken, and it only have been as well kept. Observe as we per once more his already toppling life was to be overthrown, and he would be led to attempt the impossible and invite destruction. At first this scheme appeared to me in its true light, but Mary's subtle feminine logic made it seem such plain and easy sailing that I soon began to draw enthusiasm from her exhaustless store, and our combined attack upon Brandon overwhelmed every vestige of caution and common sense that even he had left.

Hers logic has always been irresistible and will continue so no doubt despite experience.

I cannot define what it was about Mary that made her little speeches, half argumentative, all pleading, so wonderfully persuasive. Her facts were mere fancies, and her logic was not even good sophistry. As to real substance and reasoning, there was nothing of either in them. It must have been her native strength of character and intensely vigorous personality—some unknown force of nature operating through her occultly—that turned the chainsls of child's personal thoughts and filled them with her own will. There was magic in her power, I am certain, but uncalacious magic to Mary, I am equally sure. She never would have quel it knowingly.

There was still another obstacle to which Mary administered her favorite remedy, the Gordian knot treatment. Brandon said: "It cannot be. You are not my wife, and we dare not trust a priest here to unite us."

"No," replied Mary, with hanging head, "but we can find one over there."

"I do not know how that will be. We shall probably not find one—at least I fear. I do not know."

After a little hesitation she answered: "I will go with you anyway and, so-near and determine complaints of s72.78 and Omissions in the Voters' List of the Municipality of Ernestown, for 1907.

For Thin, Poor Blood

You can trust a medicine tested 60 years! Sixty years of experience, think of that! Experience with Ayer's Sarsaparilla; the original Sarsaparilla; the Sarsaparilla the doctors endorse for thin blood, weak nerves, general debility.

But even this record-old medicine cannot do its best work if the liver is inactive and the bowels constipated. For the best possible results, you should take laxative doses of Ayer's Pills while taking the Sarsaparilla.

—Apples are selling here in the orchard for a dollar a barrel and a little over. This is a vast difference from prices across the border. Hanlon Brothers, Medina, N.Y., have sold their crop to be taken just as it comes from the trees, in unheaded barrels, at $3.4 barrel, the buyer to furnish the barrels. Growers are at their wits ends to know what to do, as the prices seem to be creeping up every day." For Maiden Blush and Twenty-Ounce, $4 a barrel is offered freely for firsts and seconds packed in one barrel, and buyers hint at a little higher price in a month. The early drops, which can be used only for sauce, are bringing 25 cents a hundred pounds. —Rochester paper.

Disaster Near Quebec.

SIXTY LIVES LOST IN COLLAPSE OF NEW ST. LAWRENCE BRIDGE.

Without Any Warning Part of Structure Gives Way—$4,000,000 Worth of Steel in the River—Few Survivors Tell Thrilling Story of their Escape—It Was an Engineering Marvel.

Quebec, Aug. 30.—From 60 to 80 lives were lost last night by the collapse of the half-finished cantilever bridge over the St. Lawrence, nine miles above the city, and four million dollars' worth of steel went to the bottom, made by the Phoenix Bridge Co., lies at the bottom of the river a twisted mass of scrap iron.

The disaster occurred at 5.30 p.m., just before the men were to quit work. There was no premonition of coming disaster, and no cause can so far be assigned for the disaster.

One story is that the collapse followed the approach over the bridge of a locomotive and three cars loaded with iron.

There was a 28-mile-an-hour wind at the time, but this is considered trifling, and the bridge has already stood very much more.

SUDDENLY SWAYED.

Ninety men were working on the structure at the time. Those were engaged in riveting operations, while others were taking down a big traveling crane.

The bridge simply swayed and shot to the left in the direction of the shore into the middle of the St. Lawrence. There were a few marvellous escapes, but the great majority of those on the structure went down with it and are still in the water.

Ten bodies have been recovered.

Ten others who were on the bridge were saved, some badly injured. One or two were miraculously saved.

Of the dead bodies recovered, the majority are supposed to be those of Indians from Caughnawaga, near Montreal, several of whom were employed on the work.

Among the dead are Mr. Burke, resident engineer of the work for the Phoenix Bridge Co.; Carl Swanson, of Philadelphia.

Messrs. Fast and Meredith, supposed to be from Ohio and the following residents in the vicinity of the bridge Victor Hardy, Michael Hardy, James Hardy, and Valentine Hardy, Joseph Boucher, two brothers named Wilson, two named Hazeman, Henry Beaver, two brothers named Francis Jax, and four men named Bronc, Bipet, Beaudry and Norton.

TERRIBLE SCENES.

The survivors who went down into the river and were saved state that when they came to the surface of the water the spectacle which met their gaze was frightful. Several bodies were seen in the surface, some covered with blood, others with blood oozing from the mouth and ears, while others were unrecognizable.

Darkness prevented the work of recovering the bodies being successfully prosecuted last night, but it is known that many will be found to be crushed to pulp between the heavy steel girders of the bridge with which they went to their graves.

WAS AN ENGINEERING MARVEL.

It is claimed here that the loss must fall upon the Phoenix Co., which undertook to complete and deliver in perfect condition the superstructure of the bridge. The abutments and piers are perfectly intact.

In one respect the structure was an experiment, being the largest cantilever in the world, namely, one unsupported span of 1,500 feet. There was still nearly 150 feet to be built to the side of the main span which collapsed, and the total will be 1,750 feet outside of the pier was overhanging the river without any apparent support, although it was supported overhead. This overhanging mass of metal has been considered all summer to be one of the engineering feats of the day, and was visited by nearly all American and other visitors to Quebec. The total cost of the bridge was to be close up to $10,000,000, and already some $5,000,000 had been spent on it.

It is the connecting link between the eastern and western branches of the new transcontinental railway in course of erection by the Canadian Government.

ORIGIN AND HISTORY OF THE PERCHERON HORSE.

In the following article it is my desire to bring before the public the true origin and history of the Percheron Norman.

The Percheron Norman horse, some of which breed have been, within the last few years, comparatively speaking, imported into this country, while the horse breeders of United States were content to understand the value of the percheron horse. Nearly ninety per cent. of the heavy stallions imported into that country are percherons. I have thought it might be interesting to the public generally to know the derivation, the importation and the benefits of the percheron horse, benefits which I fully believe are to be derived from its employment.

"Le Perche' is a district formerly known as Normandy and in which this breed of Norman horses has been cultivated in its most perfect form.

The remarkable purity of the race is certified by the stallions progeny begotten from mares of a different race, have been reproduced, so as to speak, in the image of the sire, in action, color, habits and form.

The Percheron Norman are a pure race 'per se' capable of producing and reproducing themselves 'ad finitum' without deterioration. The original Norman horse, now nearly extinct, was the horse of the Parician clad chivalry of Wm. the Conqueror and Richard Coeur de Lion, and the direct ancestor of the Percheron horse of the present.

SERIOUS RUNAWAY.

A serious runaway occurred at Belleville last week. While Mr. E. Frets and sister, Mrs. G. M. Card, were in Belleville attending a sale held by their sister, Mrs. Morley Anderson, who is going to Vancouver to reside, Mr Frets, Master Hugh Anderson and Mr. Parks, a neighbor of Mrs. Anderson, took a drive across the bay. Their horse became frightened at a steam engine and started to run away. All the power of the two men seemed to have no impression on the animal whatever, and to stop further progress they ran it into a curb wire fence. Mr. Frets was cut severely by the wire and had to be taken home on him, nearly crushing him. Mr. Parks was badly bruised up and broken, but Master Hugh got off without a scratch. They were taken to Mrs. Anderson's residence, where Dr. M., and a doctor summoned. Fortunately no bones were broken.

GUN EXPLODED.

On Sunday evening last, about 8 o'clock, James Reid, of Enterprise, ex-M.P. for Lennox and Addington, went over to see a friend from St. Louis, who was staying at a neighbor's home, to be ready for the hunting season. His friend had a new gun, and was proudly displaying its merits, both men leaning forward to examine it. The gun exploded in the hands of its owner, shooting Mr. Reid in the right hand, right thigh, left side and left leg. The left forearm was taken to Kingston, the day morning, where his injuries were attended to by Dr. Garrett. Mr. Reid was able to go home by the afternoon train, and is now resting as well as can be expected. Mr. Reid is a man of sixty years of age, and the shock to his system was severe. However, unless blood poisoning sets in, no very serious results are anticipated.

ROBINSON—GROOMS.

At South Napanee on Thursday, Aug. 29th, a quiet but very pretty wedding took place at the residence of Mr. W. N. Robinson, when his eldest daughter, Miss Edith E., was united in marriage to Mr. Menno B. Grooms, of Richmond. At two o'clock to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Miss Kaylor, Picton, cousin of the bride, the unattended couple took their position under a beautiful arch of vines and water lilies. The bride was given away by her father, and was becomingly attired in a dress of white silk and carried a bouquet of white German carnations. After the ceremony dinner was served and a picture of the whole company taken. The newly wedded couple left on the 4.39 train for Toronto, Niagara Falls and Buffalo amid showers of rice and good wishes. The bride's travelling dress was blue broadcloth with white net blouse and hat to match. Their many friends join in wishing them a prosperous and happy journey through life. 35tf

The Passion Play.

Since its advent in Napanee "Wondrland" has always given satisfaction to all and has created a great reputation so that all who have visited the Parlors and its staff are specially cool and obliging, and all are treated courteously.

They have a treat in store for one of these next week, when they will present The Passion Play, scenes and incidents in the life of our Lord Jesus Christ, from His Birth to his Ascension. The presentation of this wonderful series of pictures entails great expense, but we feel sure our citizens will appreciate and generously patronize it.

The subject is such a large and elaborate one, that a description of it calls for more space than we have at our disposal, but suffice it to say there are about 21,000 actual pictures and Pastors, Priests, Ministers and all in fact are cordially invited to attend. Some idea of its length may be got from the fact that it takes over one hour to show this intensely fascinating series in the "Life of Christ." Admission on this occasion only 10 cents, which is very moderate to see these costly and sacred pictures.

The Annunciation, Shepherds Watching their flocks by night, Birth of Christ, Flight into Egypt, Massacre of Innocents, Christ in Carpenter Shop, Baptism of Christ, Herodias' Daughter before Herod, Death of Herodias, Salome's Dance before Herod, Death of John the Baptist, Christ tempted by the Devil, Christ and Disciples Plucking ears of corn, Zaccheus from the tree, Feeding the Multitude, Suffer little Children to come unto me, Christ healing the Sick, Raising of Lazarus, The Transfiguration, Messiah's entry into Jerusalem, The last Supper, Judas' Betrayal and Messiah's Arrest, Christ before the High Priests, Christ before Herod, Christ before Pilate and Condemnation, Carrying the Cross, The Crucifixion, Taken down from the Cross, Placing Jesus in the Tomb, The Resurrection, The Ascension.

The whole is a life of Christ from life, and is wonderfully realistic.

It is said that in securing characters for the scenes on the cross, there was no difficulty in obtaining the various characters carrying out that of the Two Thief. When the persons asked to take the part came to consider the whole scene in its true meaning, no one would accept the undesirable character, and a wax figure had to be substituted.

MOSCOW.

The church repairs are progressing rapidly.—The most pleasant event of this season took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Owen Lamkin, on Friday evening, when Miss Ruth Lamkin gave a lawn party to a large number of guests. A very pleasing feature was the masquerade, in which numerous characters were represented. None of these, perhaps, were more popular than Mrs. Edw. Ellis, as honored guest, who, attired as a gypsy, acted the part of a palmist. The spell of the party lasted till the wee sma' hours, when all wended their way with the exception of our palmist, who was graciously entertained till next day. All attended to the pleasure enjoyed during the stay at this country seat.—The school is progressing favorably, under the able management of Miss Anstiene and Miss Lamkin.—Several here anticipate taking in Napanee Show.

Mr. Chown and family spent a few days at Major Amey's recently.—Miss Montgomery, of Kingston, is visiting Mrs. Ray Huffman.—Mrs. R. Palmer spent Sunday at home.—A party of fourteen enjoyed a day at Fifet Lake on Monday last.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Miller, of Louisiana, are visiting relatives here.—Mr. C. Hoffman, Gananoque, is spending the week at the home of Huffman's, and with other relatives.—Mrs. Henry Huffman is holidaying at Thousand Island Park.—Mrs. Everton VanLaven spent Sunday in Napanee.—Miss Mary Lake is spending a few weeks in Peterboro'.—Mr. and Mrs. S. Bell are visiting at Pickering and other points.—Last Friday evening, a number of foreign friends were highly entertained at a masquerade party at the home of Miss Ruth Lamkin. The lawn was lighted by numerous Chinese lanterns which hung under the canopy of evergreens. The main feature of the evening was the promenade on the lawn. Another feature which created a great deal of merriment was the rounding of the head, said in a pleasing manner by a genuine palmist. Refreshments were served in the handsome dining room, artistically decorated with golden rod. After a thoroughly enjoyed evening all departed at an early hour.

In Southern Manitoba considerable cutting has been done, and a fair idea of the yield can now be secured. Reports from the various districts are very encouraging, and the farmers are expect to harvest a good crop. All the reports from the north and west are not to be relied upon, owing to the extreme lateness of the season and the damage from frost.

R. J. Lockhead, who has just returned from Canada with his family, states that the trip was one of the most pleasant he has ever taken, and that Canada is simply being delightful. All the time he was in the country he was the recipient of kindnesses that Canada is celebrated for, and he assured to this nation, and that this is greatly desired by the people of that country. This Mr. Lockhead states is a wrong notion entirely and that the people are not not regard the subject of annexation seriously. Dedication of St. Thomas' Church, Morven.

The long looked for dedication of St. Thomas' Church, Morven, took place on Wednesday, September 4th, 1907. The heavy rain of the morning gave and forebodings to those who had worked so diligently, but the weather cleared up and a fine, though cloudy, day was enjoyed. The services began by the celebration of Holy Eucharist at half-past ten, Rev. Rural Dean Pitch, Priest in charge, being the celebrant. The sentence of dedication was pronounced by the Right Reverend Bishoprick, Bishop of Ontario, a magnificent sermon was preached by the Very Reverend Samuel Farthing, D.D. Rev. Canon Cook was also present. After the service the large congregation who filled every available corner to the doors, repaired across the road from the church, where a sumptuous dinner was served. The ladies of Morven are famous for their dinners, and this one was no exception to their self-themselves, the Methodist ladies vieing with the Anglicans in the quantity and quality of the viands provided. In the afternoon the Rev. Canon Cook preached a sermon that it would have been impossible to get half into the time at his disposal. The collection was sung out of doors, the Very Reverend Dean Farthing giving a stirring solo. Mr. Mon. Miss Hattie Rowse, organist of St. Thomas', presided at the organ during the service, and well was ably assisted by the Bath choir. The church is a very handsome structure, built of solid concrete, with fireproof roof. The architect was Mr. Power, of Napanee, and the builder, Mr. Sapsford, of the same place. The former gentleman, in addition to the execution of his duties, has contributed his share to the beauty of the church by the handsome Hardwood Communion Table, the gift of Mr. Hilborn, of the Canadian Consumers' Cordage Company, Napanee. The font is also a gift, the gift of Mrs. Sapsford, wife of the builder, the new wood floor plaster being used. Mrs. Fraser & Son, of Napanee, did the painting. The altar is adorned by handsome brass vases, the gift of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Jackson, of Brockville, and a handsome brass lectern, presented by the venerable Archdeacon Bogart, of Ontario. The latter gentleman was born and lived in the flesh at Morven, twenty-five years ago, and his father, Archdeacon Bogart, of Bath, Ont., was formerly of Odessa, but now a prosperous farmer in Morven. The brass vases were presented by Mrs. Jackson in memory of oak, executed by Mr. R. MacPherson, of Bath, Ont., and is to Colin Campbell, Esq., signing and executing Ecclesiastical furniture. Mr. F. F. Ayre is presenting a sterling silver communion service.

The ladies of Morven deserve the work falls on the shoulders of a faithful few, but Mrs. Proctor is the energetic head of a most industrious work of all friends, both Anglican and Methodist, deserving much praise. Special thanks are due to Mrs. Mitchell, the indefatigable church for so kindly lending the dining-room of the Methodist parsonage. Mrs. Rev. Mr. Rikker, Stacey and Cambridge, of Napanee, also did valiant work in the kitchen.

Services will be held in the church every Sunday afternoon, at the time being made each week in the Napanee papers. Non locals Dominie.

TRA H. SCHELL.

A highly respected farmer of North Fredericksburgh, died quite suddenly at Roche's Point, on last Friday, when Mr. Tra H. Schell were visiting friends. Mr. Schell was born in Camden East, 70 years ago, where he built up a large farm and home, and was quite unexpected, and proved a severe shock to a large circle of many friends. The Deceased was born in Onondaga Co., N.Y., in 1837, removed with his family to California, where they spent a couple of years, but they then came to Canada, and settled down on a farm near Morven, continued during his residence in the United States was an ardent Republican. He was a true friend, a kind husband and father, and respected for his integrity and honesty. He married Miss Ann Merrill, of Camden East, who survives him, also one daughter, Mrs. Garrett Germain, a step-son and two step-daughters, Mrs. Wm. Bell, Camden East, Mrs. Jacob Bridge, Kingston, and Mrs. Wilkinson, all residing at home. The remains were interred in the family plot at Rose Hill cemetery, Rev. Mr. Schell and family have the sympathy of their many friends in their bereavement.

STRUCK BY LIGHTNING.

GUARDED BY WHALES.

Victoria, B.C., Times.

With two whales keeping watch and ward on either side of the ship, the steamer Otter left the city apart four hours of agony yesterday morning in the side of Cecil Island.

It seems that Dr. Grahame, accompanied by Seth Thompson and his son and Mr. Herb. S. Pringle, son of Mr. Ira Pringle, left Victoria early in the morning for a fishing for rohens in the straits opposite Becher Bay, when they were caught by the tide and carried out to sea. For four hours they battled with the current, but almost noon, they toiled in the endeavor to make the shore, but were unable. Then the large whales accompanied them, waiting for the opportunity to get over the bar, which they did.

Finally the quartette, or rather four of them, reached the rocky island and ran out the boat around to the other side. Then the whales left them, and the steamer came strait with a rope and they were saved.

September Bride.

DAFOE—STEWART.

One of the prettiest weddings held in Napanee in many a day was solemnized last evening in the new Trinity Church, the first performed in the new edifice. The contracting parties were Miss Edith Ray Dafoe, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Dafoe, and Mr. Robert Fairbairn Stewart, of Toronto.

The beautiful new church was brilliantly illuminated, and the altar banked with flowers and plants—white and green predominating a chaste and beautiful effect. The large auditorium was filled with invited guests and the general public.

The ceremony was performed by the rector, Rev. W. H. Elmsley, assisted by Dr. J. J. Sheerv, of Kingston. The bride was given away by Miss Elizabeth Reich, of Watertown, N. Y., attired in a gown of white point de sprit with motives of Honiton appliqued over plat white silk with wreath of pink forget-me-nots. With the wreath of pink forget-me-nots. The Ingredients of Zutoo

One ingredient is soda—just old-fashioned soda, that our grandmothers took to settle the stomach, and there is nothing better.

Among the other ingredients there is not one that did not come from old Mother Earth herself.

There is not one that is not approved by both the British and American Pharmacopeias,—the highest medical authorities in the world.

There is not one that your family physician, even if a personal friend, would not approve of and prescribe.

If you are using some other headache remedy, why do you not change and use Zutoo instead?

It will cure your headaches and colds just as quickly and safeguard you against the bad after effects which may some day come from using the ordinary remedies. Zutoo tablets

Are Harmless as Soda.

A recent experiment on the microbes of tuberculosis, diphtheria, typhoid fever and Asiatic cholera by Professor Marshall Wood, of Cambridge University, shows that "sunlight is fatal to them all. Exposed in a north window the germs managed to keep themselves alive for several days, but exposed to the direct sunlight they gave up in from two to ten minutes.

Miss Maria J. Diamond and brothers, E. H. and J. H. Diamond, Parma, wish to contradict a statement made by some one and has a wide spread circulation that their father, the late J. B. Diamond, died of cancer, as the following letter will explain:

Dear Miss Diamond,—You may on my authority deny that your father, the late J. B. Diamond, had any form of cancer. There was nothing of that kind wrong. The trouble in the mouth was stomatitis, and it undermined his general health.

When Knighthood Was In Flower

Mary's vanity was delighted with her elopement trousseau, for of course it was of the finest. Not that the quality was better than her usual wear, but doublet and hose were so different on her. She paraded for an hour or so before Jane, and as she became accustomed to the new garb and to the steel reflected a most beautiful image she determined to show herself to Brandon and me. She said she wanted to become accustomed to being seen in her doublet and hose and would begin with us. She thought if she could not bear our gaze she would surely make a dismal failure on shipboard among so many strange men. There was some good reasoning in this, and it, together with her vanity, overruled her modesty and prompted her overcome to see us in her character of young nobleman. Jane made some of her mighty protests, so infinitely disproportionate in size to her little ladyship, but the self willed princess would not listen to her and was for coming alone if Jane would not come with her. Once having determined, as usual, upon her, she wasted no time about it, but, throwing a long cloak over her shoulders, started for room to claim angry, weeping, protesting Jane at her heels.

When I heard the knock, I was sure it was the girls, for though Mary had promised Brandon she would not render any circumstances attempt another visit I knew so well her utter inability to combat her desire and her reckless disregard of danger where there was a motive sufficient to furnish the nerve-tension that I was sure she would come or try to come again.

I admitted the girls, and when the door was shut Mary unclasped the brooch at her throat, and the great cloak fell to her heels. Out came stepped, with a little laugh of delight, clothed in doublet, hose and confusion, the prettiest picture mortal eye ever rested on. Her hat, something on the broad, flat style with a single white plume encircling the crown, was of purple velvet trimmed in gold braid and touched here and there with precious stones. Her doublet was of the same purple velvet as her hat, trimmed in lace and gold braid. Her short trunks were of heavy black silk slashed by yellow satin, with hose of lavender silk, and her little shoes were of russet French leather. Quite a rainbow, you will say, but such a rainbow!

Brandon and I were struck dumb with admiration and could not keep from showing it. This disconcerted the girl and increased her embarrassment until we could not tell which was the prettiest, the garments, the girl or the confusion, but this I know—the whole picture was as sweet and beautiful as the eyes of man could behold.

Fine feathers will not make fine birds, and Mary's masculine attire could no more make her look like a man than harness can disguise the graces of a gazelle. Nothing could conceal her intense, exquisite womanhood. With our looks of astonishment and admiration Mary's blushes deepened.

"What is the matter? Is anything wrong?" she asked.

"Nothing is wrong," answered Brandon, smiling in spite of himself. "Nothing on earth is wrong with you, you may be sure. You are perfect—that is, for a woman—and one who thinks there is anything wrong about a perfect woman is hard to please. But if you flatter yourself that you in any way resemble a man or that your dress in the faintest degree conceals your sex you are mistaken. It makes it only more apparent."

"How can that be?" asked Mary in comical tribulation. "Is not this a man's doublet and hose, and this hat—is it not a man's hat? They are all for a man. Then why do I not look like one, I ask? Tell me what is wrong. Oh, I thought I looked just like a man. I thought the dressing was perfect."

"Well," returned Brandon, "if you will permit me to say so, you are entirely too symmetrical and pretty ever to pass for a man."

The flaming color was in her cheeks as Brandon went on: "Your feet are too small, even for a boy's feet. I don't think you could be made to look like a man if you worked from now till doomsday."

Brandon spoke in a troubled tone, for he was beginning to see in Mary's perfect and irrepressible womanhood an insurmountable difficulty right across his path.

"As to your feet, you might find larger shoes, or, better still, jack boots. As to your hose, you might find longer trunks, but what to do about the doublet I am sure I do not know."

Mary looked up helpless and forlorn, and the hot face went into her beshod elbow as a realization of the situation seemed to dawn upon her.

"Oh, I wish I had not come! But I wanted to grow accustomed, so that I could wear them before others. I believe I could bear it more easily with any one else. I did not think of it in that way." And she smoothed her cloak from where it had fallen on the floor and threw it around her.

"What way, Mary?" asked Brandon gently and receiving no answer. "But you will have to bear my looking at you all the time if you go with me."

"I don't believe I can do it."

"No, no," answered he, bravely attempting cheerfulness; "we may as well give it up. I have had no hope from the first. I knew it could not be done, and it should not. I was both insane and criminal to think of permitting you to try it."

Brandon's forced cheerfulness died out with his words, and he sank into a chair, with his elbows on his knees and his face in his hands. Mary went to him at once. There had been a little moment of faltering, but there was no real surrender in her.

Dropping on her knee beside him, she said coaxingly: "Don't give up. You are a man; you must not surrender and let me, a girl, prove the stronger. Shame upon you when I look up to you so much and expect you to help me be brave! I will go. I will attempt myself in some way. Oh, why am I not different? I wish I were as straight as the queen." And for that first time in her life she bewailed her beauty because it stood between her and Brandon.

She soon coaxed him out of his despondency, and we began again to plan the matter in detail.

"The girls left on Brandon's cloak and he and I on the camp stool and a box.

Mary's time was well occupied in vain attempts to keep herself covered with the cloak, which seemed to have a right good will toward Brandon and me, but she kept track of our plans, which, in brief, were as follows: As to her costume, we would substitute long trunks and jack boots for shoes and hose, and, as to doublet, Mary laughed and blushingly said she had a plan which she would secretly impart to Jane, but would not tell us. She whispered it to Jane, who, as serious as the lord chancellor, gave judgment and "thought it would do." We hoped so, but were full of doubts.

This is all time enough to write and read about, but I can tell you it was sufficiently exciting at the time. Three of us at least were playing with that comical fellow, Death, and he gave the game interest and point to our hearts' content.

As to the elopement, it was determined that Brandon should leave London the following day for Bristol and make all arrangements along the line. He would carry with him two bundles, his own and Mary's clothing, and leave them to be taken up when they should go a-shipboard. Eight horses would be procured, four to be left at a relay at an inn between Berkeley castle and Bristol and four to be kept at the residence some two leagues the other side of Berkeley for the use of Brandon. Mary and the two men from Bristol who were to act as an escort on the eventful night. There was one disagreeable little feature that we could not provide against nor entirely eliminate. It was the fact that Jane and I should be suspected as accomplices before the fact of Mary's elopement, and, as you know, to assist in the abduction of a princess is treason, for which there is but one remedy. I thought I had a plan to keep ourselves safe if I could only stifle for the once Jane's troublesome and vigorous tendency to preach the truth to all people upon all subjects and at all times and places. She promised to tell the story I should drill into her, but I knew the truth would seep out in a thousand ways. She could no more hold it than a sieve can hold water. We were playing for great stakes, which, if I do say it, none but the bravest hearts, bold and daring as the truest knights of chivalry, would think of trying for—nothing less than the running away with the first princess of the first blood royal of the world. Think of it! It appalls me even now. Discovery meant death to one of us surely, Brandon possibly to two others, Jane and me, certainly if Jane's truthfulness should become unmanageable, as it was apt to do.

After we had settled everything we could think of the girls took their leave. Mary slyly kissing Brandon at the door. I tried to induce Jane to follow her lady's example, but she was as cool and distant as the new moon.

The next day Brandon paid his respects to the king and queen, made his adieus to his friends and rode off alone to Bristol. You may be sure the king showed no signs of undue grief at his departure.

CHAPTER XVI.
A HAWKING PARTY.

A FEW days after Brandon's departure, Mary, with the king's consent, organized a small party to go over to Windsor for a few weeks during the warm weather.

There were ten or twelve of us, including two chaperons, the old Earl of Hertford and the dowager Duchess of Kent. Henry might as well have sent along a pair of spaniels to act as chaperons—it would have taken an army to guard Mary alone—and to tell you the truth our old chaperons needed watching more than any of us. It was scandalous. Each of them had a touch of gout, and when they made wry faces it was a standing inquiry among us whether they were leering at each other or felt a twinge—whether it was their feet or their hearts that troubled them.

Mary led them a pretty life at all times, even at home in the palace, and I know they would rather have gone off with a pack of imps than with us. The indictment was that if I gave them better opportunities to be together, an arrangement connived at by the queen, I think, and they were satisfied. The earl had a wife, but he fancied the old dowager and she fancied him, and probably the wife fancied somebody else, so they were all happy. It greatly amused the young people, you may be sure, and Mary said, probably with out telling the exact truth, that every night she prayed God to pity and forgive their ugliness. One day the princess said she was becoming alarmed. Their ugliness was so intense she feared it might be contagious and spread. Then, with a most comical seriousness, she added:

"Mon Dieu, Sir Edwin, what if I should catch it? Master Charles would not take me."

"No danger of that, my lady. He is too devoted to see anything but beauty in you, no matter how much you might change."

"Do you really think so? He says so little about it that sometimes I almost doubt."

Therein she spoke the secret of Brandon's success with her, at least in the beginning, for there is wonderful potency in the stimulus of a healthy little doubt.

We had a delightful canter over to Windsor, I riding with Mary most of the way. I was not averse to this arrangement, as I not only relished Mary's mirth and joyousness, which were at their height, but hoped I might give my lady Jane a few hints or two of jealousy, perchance to fertilize her sentiments toward me.

Mary talked and laughed and sang for her soul was a fountain of gladness that bubbled up the instant pressure was removed. She spoke of little but our last trip over this same road, and, as we passed objects on the way, told me what Brandon had said at this place and that. She laughed and dimpled exquisitely in relating how she had deliberately made opportunities for him to flatter her until at last he smiled in her face and told her she was the most beautiful creature living, but that, after all, "beauty was as beauty did."

"That made me angry," said she, "I pouted for awhile and two or three times was on the point of dismissing him, but thought better of it and asked him plainly wherein I did so much amiss. Then what do you think the impudent fellow said?"

"I cannot guess."

"He said, 'Oh, there is so much it would take a lifetime to tell it.'"

"This made me furious, but I could not answer, and a moment later he said, 'Nevertheless I should be only too glad to undertake the task.'

"The thought never occurred to either of us then that he would be taken at his word. Bold! I should think he was! I never saw anything like it! I have not told you a tenth part of what he said to me that day. He said anything he wished, and I swear to you that I could neither stop him nor retaliate. Half the time I was angry and half the time amused, but by the time we reached Windsor there never was a girl more hopelessly and desperately in love than Mary Tudor." And she laughed as if it were a huge joke on Mary.

She continued: "That day settled matters with me for all time. I don't know how he did it. Yes, I do." And she launched forth into an account of Brandon's perfections, which I found somewhat dull, and so would you.

We remained a day or two at Windsor and then, over the objections of our chaperons, moved on to Berkeley castle, where Margaret of Scotland was spending the summer.

We had another beautiful ride up the dear old Thames to Berkeley, but Mary had grown serious and saw none of it.

On the afternoon of the appointed day the princess suggested a hawking party, and we set out in the direction of the enemy's country. Jane and I accused of myself, three other gentlemen and three ladies besides Mary. Jane did not go. I was afraid to trust her. She wept and with difficulty forced herself to say something about a headache, but the rest of the inmates of the castle of course had no thought that possibly they were taking their last look upon Mary Tudor.

Think who this girl was we were running away with! What reckless fools we were not to have seen the utter hopelessness, certain failure and deadly peril of our act; treason black as Plutonian midnight. But treason does seems to have an especial care for fools, while wise men are left to care for themselves, and it does look as if safety lies in folly.

We rode on and on, and although I took two occasions in the presence of others to urge Mary to return, owing to the approach of night and threatened rain, she took her own head, as everybody knew she always would, and confirmed the hunt.

Just before dark, as we neared the rendezvous, Mary and I managed by side ahead of the party quite a distance. At last we saw a heron rise, and the princess unzipped her hawk. "This is my chance," she said. "I will run away from you now and love myself. Keep them off my track for five minutes, and I shall be safe. Goodby, Edwin. You and Jane are the only persons I regret to leave. I love you as my brother and sister. When we are settled in New Spain, we will have you both come to us. Now, Edwin, I shall tell you something: don't let Jane put you off any longer. She loves you. She told me so. There! Goodby, my friend, and bear a kind word for me." And she flew her bird and galloped after it at headlong speed.

The princess was out of sight, and I waited for the others to overtake me. When they came up, I was greeted in chorus, "Where is the princess?" I said she had gone off with her hawk and had left me to bring them after her. I held them talking while I could, and when we started to follow took up the wrong scent. A short ride made this apparent, when I came in for my full share of abuse and ridicule, for I had led them against their judgment. I was credited with being a blockhead, when, in fact, they were the dupes.

We rode hurriedly back to the point of Mary's departure and wound our horns lustily, but my object had been accomplished, and I knew that within twenty minutes from the time I last saw her she would be with Brandon on the road to Bristol, gaining on any pursuit we could make at the rate of three miles for two. We scoured the forest far and near, but of course found no trace. After a time rain set in and one of the gentlemen escorted the ladies home, while three of us remained to prowl about the woods and roads all night in a soaking drizzle. The task was thankless enough for me, as it lacked motive, and when we rode into Berkeley castle next day a sorrier set of bedraggled, rain stained, mud covered knights you never saw. You may know the castle was wild with excitement. There were all sorts of conjectures, but soon we unanimously concluded it had been the work of highwaymen, of whom the country was full and by whom the princess had certainly been abducted.

The chaperons forgot their gout and each other, and Jane, who was the most affected of all, had a genuine excuse for giving vent to her grief and went to bed—by far the safest place for her.

What was to be done? First, we sent a fleet rider to the king, who would probably have us all flayed alive, a fear which the chaperons shared to the fullest extent. Next, an armed party rode back to look again for Mary and, if possible, rescue her.

The fact that I had been out the entire night before, together with the small repute in which I was held for deeds of arms, excused me from taking part in this bootless errand, so again I profited by the small esteem in which I was held. I say I profited, for I stayed at the castle with Jane, hoping to find my opportunity in the absence of everybody else. All the ladies but Jane had ridden out, and the knights who had been with me scouring the forest were sleeping, since they had not my incentive to remain awake. They had no message to deliver, no duty to perform for an absent friend. A thousand times I wish they had! I wished it had been a million, and so faithful was I to my trust that I swore in my soul I would deliver them, every one.

And Jane loved me! No more walking on the hard, prosaic earth now. It was the first time in my life that I had ever known the sensible method of locomotion. Mary had said, "She told me that it really is true? You will at once see what an advantage this bit of information was to me.

"Jane," said I, "you would wish to see me to talk over Mary's escape; so I sent word to her that I was waiting, and she quickly sent word she recovered health and came down. I suggested that we walk out to a secluded little summer house by the river, and Jane was willing. Ah, my opportunity was here at last!

Jane's whole attitude toward me was changed, and she seemed to cling to me in a shy, unconscious manner, that was sweet beyond the naming, as the one solace for all her grief.

After I had answered all her questions about Mary over and over again every detail of Mary's flight and had assured her that the princess was at that hour breathing the warm air of Brandon on their highroad to paradise, I thought it time to start myself in the same direction and to say a word in my own behalf. So I spoke very freely and told Jane what I felt and what I wanted.

"Oh, Sir Edwin," she responded, "let us not think of anything but my sadness. Think of the trouble she is in."

"No, no, Jane. Lady Mary is out of her trouble by now and is as happy as a lark, you may be sure. Has she not won everything her heart longed for? Then let us make our own paradise, since we have before us only misery. You have it, Jane, just within your lips. Speak the word, and it will change everything. If you love me, and I know you do."

Jane's head was bowed, and she remained silent.

In the postoffice at Niagara Falls, Ont., three or four bushels of letters have been received for the Rogers Manufacturing Company. They are from all over Canada and are in reply to letters received telling the receiver that he was the winner of a prize, which would be forwarded him on receipt of ninety-seven cents for packing and postage. A short, dark man calling himself Jacques Erlanger called for the letters on Friday last and was arrested. Letters found on him indicated that he had been in New York, Philadelphia, Montreal and other cities.
